THE DICTIONARY SAYS A TUTOR IS ONE WHO IS A GUARDIAN OR TEACHER. POOR TUTORS IT IS A HARD JOB TO TEACH THOSE WHO WONT LEARN. AND THOSE WHO WILL LEARN DONT NEED ANY TEACHER BUT EXPERIENCE AND NATURE. THE MOST DISMAL FAILURES I KNOW ARE THOSE OVER EDUCATED FOLKS WHO HAVE HAD THEIR FACES IN BOOKS SO MUCH THAT THEY DIDN'T SEE ALL THE REAL THINGS OUTSIDE. IT ISN'T THE MONEY YOU MAKE – ITS WHAT YOU SAVE. SAME WITH LEARNING – NOT WHAT YOU READ BUT WHAT YOU DIGEST AND APPLY. KNOWLEDGE IS POWER, NOT EDUCATION.

Paints Pictures Under the Ocean

A SUBMARINE CANON PAINTED BY MR. PRITCHARD

A CORAL PALACE PAINTED BY MR. PRITCHARD

The Wonderful Works of Artist Pritchard.

MR. WALTER H. M. PRITCHARD, a distinguished artist now operating in California waters, devotes his life to painting pictures under water. He holds that it is impossible to catch the colors and what might be called the atmosphere of submarine scenery by any method of observation from the surface. Even when the disturbing effect of the broken surface of the water is eliminated by using a glass-bottomed boat or tube, everything appears unnatural and distorted to the beholder.

Mr Pritchard has devised an extraordinary set of apparatus in order to paint pictures beneath the water. He goes down in a diving suit furnished with pearl diver's glasses. He uses an easel and palette made of heavy solid iron in order that they may remain at the bottom. He paints on a canvas of peculiarly prepared highly oiled leather, which he has found to be the substance best suited to resist sea water. He uses the Raffaelli solid oil pencils with iron casings. He paints about twenty minutes at a time, and comes up to breathe for ten minutes.

Mr Pritchard's finest work has been done at Tahiti. Captain Williamson the leading pearl fisher there said:

"Nobody who has not seen the bottom of the ocean through the pearl fisherman's glasses could have painted those great valleys and mountains as he has done.

The coloring beneath the ocean is all in the lowest keys, merging from deep indigo and purple into the lighter delicate tints of pale greens, grays and yellows. It has an indescribable charm when you have become used to it either in person or through looking at Mr Pritchard's pictures. Every point, every sharp edge shimmers like silver in the upper regions. In the greater depths they become sapphires of titanic size.

Rocks and cliffs in the dim light assume an appearance of inconceivable size. The artist peers over the edge of a submarine abyss and from the purple depths dart strange monsters who grow brighter as they near the upper water. The absolute silence is thrilling. There is no suggestion of water, but only of a denser atmosphere.

Through the amethyst distances the artist sees shoals of fish suddenly darting toward him until they peer into his face with enormous eyes.

Mr Pritchard has transferred to his canvasses submarine seascapes and episodes of marine life that have never before been witnessed by an artist's eye. He has seen the wonders of the mighty deep. He has mingled familiarly with its denizens. The lobsters and sharks and tuna have browsed at his feet and chased one another about his diver's helmet. These creatures are absolutely without fear of man, even in a diving dress, because they have never met him down in their world. Small marvel is it that Mr Pritchard's pictures have an unearthly and mysterious quality possessed by no other work.

What is Worrying Alice Roosevelt?

(Mrs. "Nick" Longworth.)

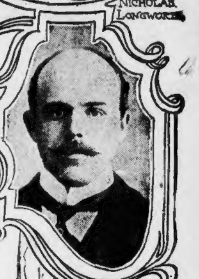
Mrs. Nicholas Longworth.



If She Hadn't Married Mr. Longworth Until Just Before the Fall Elections He Would Be a Hero Out In His Congressional District; But Now Nobody Is Interested In Him, and He Is Likely to Be Beaten.

"The tea party sizzled with indignation, while Mrs. Boss Cox nibbled another cake. Then the hostess, to an ominous accompaniment of rustling jet on her black silk bosom, delivered the direful sense of the meeting:

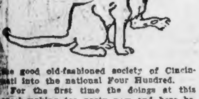
"'Ladies, ingratitude must be punished! In the State of Ohio, at least, 'Nick' Longworth must be relegated to the obscurity he so richly deserves.'"

"WHO'LL kill 'Nick' Longworth in Ohio," said Boss Cox when Miss Alice Roosevelt's husband poured sand in its bearings and the Republican machine in the State where they used to make Presidets developed a hot box and was sidetracked.

"Who'll kill 'Nick' Longworth? I," said Mrs. Cox. "I'll kill 'Nick' Longworth with my little tea party."

Really, it wasn't the tea party of the wife of the overthrown Republican boss of Ohio, but of a socially most powerful matron dwelling in the most imposing of the villas among the vine-clad hills along the river. This lady, whose word is law in the rich and politically potent set where diamond necklaces are still worn at the breakfast table, took it upon herself to engineer the whole affair.

Mrs. Cox was only one of those invited. Mrs. Cox does not wear a diamond necklace at the breakfast table. Her enemies in the Roosevelt-Longworth set say that she was put right on this point during the period while Miss Alice Roosevelt's sun shone upon her, and she emerged from the good old-fashioned society of Cincinnati into the national Four Hundred.



For the first time the doings at this epoch-making tea party now and here become public history. The hostess was distinguished by her black satin and jet gown, whose voluminous folds, whenever her bosom shook with righteous emotion, gave forth the sound of many waters.

At another of the small tables sat a nice dumpling of an old maid, with pudgy fingers covered with rings, and a determined mouth, whose safe deposit compartment overflows with gilt-edge securities that command votes in sheaves. Besides these there was the ambitious wife of a horribly rich rival candidate for Congress; also the large and resolute figure of the lady whose marriage certificate makes her the real head of the brewing industry—and whoever alleges that beer doesn't count votes lies in his throat.

The preliminaries were becomingly sedate, for Mrs. Cox's affably reposeful manner at first rather abashed the hostess, stilling the indignant cascade of jet on her capacious bosom. It fell to the brewer matron to hurl the ungrateful Longworth between the upper, and nether millstones.

"Of all the upstarts," she said. "I never would have imagined it of 'Nick' Longworth."

"And dear Mr. Cox teaching him all he ever knew about politics," piped the affluent old maid.

"As though he was his own son," added the hostess, to a rustling accompaniment of indignant jet.

"Just because he captured a President's daughter—after running his legs off after her for three years," exploded the wife of the rival candidate.

"Then to turn and bite the hand that fed him!" exclaimed the bejetted hostess.

"Did you ever?"

"Well, I never!"

"Who would have believed it possible?"

Whereupon all the indignant ladies looked at Mrs. Cox, who smiled in her well-bred, superior manner and nibbled a cake.

"No such thing ever happened when the Presidents came from Ohio," said the rival candidatess.

"These Eastern pretensions are insufferable," angrily splashed a torrent of jet on the hostess's collar.

"Among them Astors and Vanderbilts and Rhinelanders—and Roosevelts and other Dutchmen whose ancestors wore seven pairs of breeches at once, 'Nick' simply lost his head," sniffed the brewer matron.

"When the engagement was announced," said the hostess, in a voice necessarily loud and shrill because of the roar of the jet on her bosom, "'Nick' began giving every other Congressman from beyond the Alleghenies the icy mit."

"The regular frozen face."

"The frosty eye."

"The congealed fin."

For Cincinnati is well within the influence of Indiana's literary belt. The rich old maid spoke in an enraged whisper:

"It was 'Nick' Longworth who got the President to send that horrid, fat Taft person out here to meddle with poor, dear Mr. Cox's plans."

"Lor' how it did upset 'em—poor dear!" exclaimed the brewer matron, shaking her head mournfully.

The hostess' jet bosom heaved rustlingly. "Why didn't dear Mr. Cox want John M. Pattison elected Governor, when he had seen the error of his Democratic ways and reformed? Why? Because he had weak lungs and was going to die inside of a year."

The ladies looked at each other in triumph, and then at Mrs. Cox, whose discreet smile was just a bit mirthful this time. Then the rich old maid held up a ringed finger, and said:

"Ladies, I have it on the best authority that when dear Mr. Cox took off his hat to Alice Roosevelt at the races last year she cut him dead!"

"O-o-oh!" said the other ladies in an indignant chorus, while Mrs. Cox passed her cup.

"My husband says," said the brewer matron in a voice choked with emotion, "that when 'Nick' Longworth sees dear Mr. Cox on the street he turns his head the other way."

"Oh, oh!" exclaimed the old maid and the candidates together.

There was an indignant rustle of jet, and then from the hostess:

"My husband says that up to the engagement with Alice Roosevelt, whenever 'Nick' entered the Trust Company Building to go to his offices, he would always spend a half hour first with dear Mr. Cox. And now—did you ever see such ingratitude?"

"Never!"

The tea party sizzled with indignation, while Mrs. Boss Cox nibbled another cake. Then the hostess, to an ominous accompaniment of rustling jet on her black silk bosom, delivered the direful sense of the meeting:

"Ladies, ingratitude must be punished! In the State of Ohio, at least, 'Nick' Longworth must be relegated to the obscurity he so richly deserves!"

"Hear, hear!"

Then, while Mrs. Boss Cox looked upon the work of the afternoon, seeing that it was good, the ladies who run the men who run Ohio's Republican political machine put their heads together over the tables and laid their plans for restoring Boss Cox to his own and for closing the doors of Congress forever against Alice Roosevelt's husband.

And now, every day, the Nicholas Longworths are seeing the handwriting on the wall. Do they repent marrying too soon—so long before the campaign? A later marriage would have found Congressman "Nick" still a hero, entirely too popular to be menaced by the wrath of Boss Cox, who is said never to forget and never to forgive. Is it any wonder that Alice Roosevelt-Longworth is worried?

The fact that the famous tea party influence could not prevent Longworth's nomination probably does not materially reduce the worriment of the Longworths. The Rosevelt influence could easily manage the nominating part—but the election of Longworth is another matter.

The convention at Dayon bore all the earmarks of something fixed and settled.

Charles J. Jones, Mayor of Norwood, the only opposing candidate, gracefully withdrew, announcing at the same time that he did not wish to oppose the aims and plans of President Roosevelt, which he wished to carry with the aid of the present Congress.

Mr. John B. Cox, of Cincinnati.

The speech which carried Longworth's nomination through with enthusiasm was made by his old playmate, schoolfriend and fellow republican, Julius Fleischmann, millionaire, clubman, and thrice mayor of Cincinnati. Fleiscmann was chairman of the convention.

The popularity of Roosevelt, his daughter and Longworth himself, was considered an asset which the Republican party could not afford to overlok. Success was looked upon as more valuable at this time than anywhich Longworth might fail to do in Congress for his party. The only thing in the situation of real interest is that Longworth has received an intimation that during his next term he must hustle.

Longworth, contrary to his intention expressed two weeks ago, was present at the convention. He made a speech in which he rapped the new Democratic city administration, and said he hoped the people would soon shake off the "Incubus." He intimated that as he was in Congress, and therefore a National character, in a way, city poltics should go unnoticed by him. At lease that was the inference.

"On party question I shall follow the leadership first last and all the time—the leadership of President Roosevelt, not because he is my—(here he was interrupted by laughter)—friend and counsellor—(still more laughter)—but because of his great qualities of leadership."

Another reason besides the Taft speech why Cox is planning to knife Longworth, whom he took as a stripling and trained in the political game, is because Alice Roosevelt Longworth, following up her very chilly and now celebrated snub of Cox at the races a year ago, has not seen fit to look at the boss since she returned from her European wedding trip.

Mrs. Longworth is not doing any canvassing for her husband, but she is graciously lending her presence wherever the prestige of her name or his helps. She opened the Cincinnati Carnival recently and was received with howls of delight by a multitude. She has attended several sessions of the Tri-State Tennis Tournament and has made herself generally popular.

Longworth himself seems to feel confident. On returning to Cincinnati recently from Sagamore Hill, he said.

"I haven't the slightest doubt that I will be re-elected. I am not anticipating the least bit of opposition in my own party. I believe that my nomination will be unanimous. The reports that Boss Cox, of Cincinnati, intends to knife me, as a means of venting the spite which he entertains against President Roosevelt personally, are ridiculous.

"Boss Cox is no longer in politics. He is a negligible quantity. Whether he is for me or against me is of absolutely no moment. The story that Boss Cox had it in for me probably grew out of the fact that I was not a delegate to the State convention. But I had no desire to be a delegate to the State convention, because the convention in my own Congressional district takes place while the State convention is still in session."

But don't forget that ominous tea party!

The election is a bridge yet to be crossed. The people have got to vote for or against Longworth. Boss Cox is still alive—and the wrath of the tea party is still unquenched!

THE ROMANCE OF NEW ENGLAND'S FAMOUS BEAUTY

NEWS that greatly interests and gratifies all New England recently flashed over the cables, coming from Chateau Monet, Anjou, that old Province in France, to Providence, in our New England. It was the tidings that its famous beauty, also the richest and at once the most beautiful heiress in New England, was engaged. Miss Madeleine Ives Goddard, 'it declared, had that day accepted the proffered heart of the Marquis Rene d'Andigne.

The tidings had no sooner reached Providence than it was sent speeding over the wires to Boston, to Bar Harbor, to New York, to Newport, to Washington, for in all those cities is Madeleine Ives Goddard a name to conjure abiding interest and real esteem. That she was to marry was in itself absorbing. That she was to marry a Frenchman of title was of natural interest, although every one hoped that the man was greater than the title.

A matron, who may be called the Mrs. Astor of Providence, may be imagined calling up by long-distance telephone her dear friend and rival at Newport and this typical conversation ensuing:

"Had you heard? No? Madeleine Goddard is to be married?"

"Not really."

"Yes, upon my honor."

"I am amazed. I had fancied—I am sure we all had thought, though we couldn't say just why, that she would never marry."

"Yes. Wasn't it absurd? for there isn't a prettier woman from Newport to Mount Desert."

"Nor a more lovable."

"And with her wealth, too! Col. Goddard is worth five millions, isn't he?"

"Quite that many, probably more. You know that after a man has three millions he doesn't know how much he is worth."

"And he has an excellent chance to succeed Senator George Peabody in the United States Senate. Madeleine would have done the honors beautifully."

"Wasn't there a young man in the German Legation once who——"

"Yes, indeed! Baron Von Bredow. When she refused finally and positively the eighth time he resigned from the Embassy and went back to Germany. They say the Emperor was angry and that the Baron's resignation blighted his diplomatic future and lost for him his influence at court. His Majesty said that no man worth while ever fled before a woman's 'No' nor let it outweigh all the voices in the world."

"And the Prince Henri de Croy, of Belgium? I was aboard at the time, but I heard that he——"

"So he did. He met her in New York and followed her home professing to be interested in the manufactories of Providence. He went to Europe, returning at once with all the family jewels, and a horrid rude Customs inspector disclosed the secret."

"And Madeleine said 'No' again?"

"Ah, yes; with emphasis from her papa."

"Madeleine is one of the most intellectual girls I know. You know that the girls in her class called her 'Minerva'?"

"Did they? She doesn't look unlike the busts I've seen of her. You know she took a course in nursing at the Rhode Island Hospital, and when she graduated went to Camp Meade, or some awful place, to nurse sick soldiers. They called her 'The angel of the corps.' But whom did you say her fiance is?"

"I don't believe I said."

Laughter over the telephone. Two voices protesting, "Oh, no, indeed, Central, we have not finished." Then, "How inane. Pardon me. He is the Marquis Rene d'Andigne. One of the oldest French families, a really, very charming pratt, they say. The betrothal took place at his chateau, where she and her mother were visiting—Chateau Monet. Yes, near Saumur, in Anjou, in France, you know. We passed the chateau once in our touring car, an exquisite place—gray stone, overgrown with ivy. Yes, I hear that he is rich. Yes, one of the best known names in the French noblesse. His father was a general, and commanded a cavalry brigade in the Franco-Prussian war. He was wounded at the battle of Sedan and left upon the field. He was decorated for his bravery. His grandfather, also a marquis, was a famous French general. Yes, the young Marquis owns everything in his own right. His father died eleven years ago. She will be married a thome in November. Not at all. I knew you would be interested. Au revoir."

Titles Laid at Her Feet.

In the mind of the public Madeleine Goddard, although little past thirty, was already taking a place in the niche occupied by Helen Gould and Princess Victoria and other bachelor maids of world-fame and honor. Her charities were generous, though quiet. She was a student, although when she appeared in society at Newport or Washington or New York she was the object of much attention. At Sherry's one night, when the word had passed from lip to lip that it was Madeleine, direct successor to the belleship of New England of her cousin, Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, once Hope Goddard, every eye was upon the tall, self-possessed girl with the earnest violet eyes and chestnut hair.

"We talk of the bearing of queens, but it is no statelier than that of the best type of American girl," went round the room in whispers. "Look at Miss Goddard."

At that instant the chaperons rose in fright from their chairs along the wall. Two of the debutantes screamed. The beautiful and stately girl from Providence had stepped backward while in the dance. Her heel caught in her draperies and she fell backward, her head striking cruelly upon the waxed floor. For a long time afterwards she was ill in her father's country home, Potowotomut. And scarcely had she recovered when, taking a lesson in being her own chauffeuse, she found herself beneath an overturned automobile and anxious bystanders were asking: "Any bones broken?" Again Miss Goddard lived in retirement at Potowotomut, and the superstitious at Newport began to talk of the menace that seemed to overhang beautiful Madeleine Goddard's life. Her father safeguarded her life with a thousand precautions. She alone was unafraid. It was said that she was as brave as her cousin, Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, who sailed on the Defender when it won the International race. It was even said that she could stay on deck when the lee rail was buried under a yeast of waves, and smiled precisely the same sort of smile with which she sparkled through a dance.

MISS GODDARD AS A RED CROSS NURSE.

After Spurning a Great Prince of Belgium, a Brilliant German Baron, and a Small Host of Untitled Eligibles, Miss Madeleine Goddard, of Rhode Island, Has Elected to Be Chatelaine of the Castle Monet and the Marquise D'Andigne of Anjou in France.

As the years passed, Americans of wealth, of old families of high attainment in finance and statesmanship, begged Madeline Goddard to marry them, and went their way with the sting and hurt of rejection in their hearts. The Baron Von Bredow came and went, back to his Emperor and oblivion. The Prince Henry of Croy came with his family jewels, his title which had existed honorably since the twelfth century, and his declared devotion. But the Prince, reluctantly and alone, returned to Belgium.

The Wooing in Old Anjou.

Miss Goddard made her debut twelve years ago. She has been continuously sought by men attracted by her charms and by others allured by her wealth. But again and again, persistently and without once relenting, Miss Goddard has answered "No." And all New England was coming to look upon her as all New York looks upon its Helen Gould, as a young woman, who has wilfully and with deliberation chosen the virgin path. It quoted all the women of the world who had lived singly with a single purpose, and it began to inquire what Madeleine Goddard's purpose is.

And all the while the richest heiress in New England has been standing upon the platform of modern and independent young womanhood. "I will not marry for marriage's sake, but for the man,' she said, and waited until the man who filled the measure of her conception of a man should cross her path.

He crossed it strangely, and in strange garb, on one of the wide white roads in the heart of France. Miss Goddard, her mother and a party of friends were making a tour of the chateaux towns. A tall young man in torn and mud-spattered trousers and a countryman's coat, walked out from the woods at the right of the road while they were debating which of two roads led to the town where they should rest that night.

Miss Goddard, slowing down the big machine called to the young man, "Which way to Saumur?" He lifted a worn hat. "To the left, and it is two miles farther on," he answered. She bowed, smiling slightly, and he stood in the road, looking after them till even the faint cloud of dust behind them had lost itself in air.

They lingered about Saumur for two days, and on the second day after their arrival they again met the young man in the road and again he directed them, this time to a ruined chateau. Miss Goddard begged him to accompany them, that they might be sure of the way, and he smilingly consented. It was through a chance meeting with an American party, who recognized their guide, that they discovered that the handsome peasant was the Marquis Rene d'Andigne, who had a diversion that approached a passion, the rearing of the finest live stock in all France. It was to visit some of his thoroughbred cattle that he had tramped on those days in muddy trousers and his groom coat and battered hat.

He was a wholly different figure when he called on Miss Goddard that night, and the next, and the next, and the travelling clothes in which he followed her to Paris were faultless. Parisian gossips said the English story of Claude Melnotte had been reversed in France. In Paris they detect a romance before it exists. If it have a beginning they predict the end with confidence. Almost before he had thought of it himself the gossips prophesied that the Marquis would invite Mrs. Goddard and her party to pay him a visit at his old castle, that he might more thoroughly show them the beauties of the Anjou country. They predicted also that which occurred, that Marquis Rene d'Andigne would under the century old trees of his chateau grounds tell the story that though so old has so many delightful variants, and that the answer of the heiress would be "Yes," the truth of which prophecy was attested by the cables.

A Real "Comedy of Errors" in Modern Life.

How the Lovely Miss Baya, of St. Louis, Put Her Letter of Acceptance in the Envelope to the Rejected Suitor—How She Cried Her Eyes Out When She Discovered the Mistake, but Stoically Married the Wrong Man—

And How Now, to Disentangle Herself from the Web of Mistakes She Spun, Has Fled from Her Husband, and There's Going to Be a Divorce.

MRS. ROBERT STURGEON. (From a Recent Photograph.)

THE LOVELY PROFILE OF MRS. STURGEON, FROM A CRAYON DRAWING.

THE following story is one of the strangest that has ever happened. For a dilemma in love it is equal to the ingenious plots of the old dramatists of England. Very unusual and really extraordinary is this story of Mrs. Robert Sturgeon, of St. Louis, who mixed her letters to her two suitors.

A month ago Mrs. Sturgeon was one of the happiest as well as one of the loveliest of the fashionable young matrons of St. Louis. Her home was on Grand avenue, which corresponds to the Fifth avenue of New York, the Lake Shore drive of Chicago, Commonwealth avenue of Boston or Nob Hill of San Francisco. Her husband, a successful young business man of that city, was as devoted to as he was proud of his beautiful wife. Their social position was exalted, their friends unnumbered. To-day Mrs. Sturgeon has cried away most of her beauty, for nothing so ill becomes beauty as swollen eyes and a heavy heart. The handsome home at Grand avenue is vacant. She has left the city and is visiting relatives in the South. If she remains in town none of the score of daily invitations would reach her, for St. Louis society is conservative and will not send cards to a prospective divorcee. Not until in the courts she has proven her right to cards do they consent to receive her on the same footing as before discord entered her home.

Mr. Sturgeon, sullen and preoccupied, goes to his office every day and transacts his business with mechanical regularity and attention. No one dares to question him about the absence of his wife nor the closing of their handsome home. He spends his days at business, his evenings at the club and sleeps at a hotel. All this the one confidante of the unhappy couple, a girlhood friend of Mrs. Sturgeon's, says grew out of a letter which Mrs. Sturgeon, while she was still beautiful Amy Baya, placed in a careless moment in the wrong envelope and mailed to the wrong man.

That careless sending of the wrong letter to the right man or the right letter to the wrong man constituted a net of circumstances in which the happiness of two young hearts has been imprisoned, a wretched spider's web of fate enmeshing the lives and future of one of the foremost young couples in St. Louis society.

The story of the tragic letter begins three years ago when Amy Baya was twenty-two and had not yet made up her mind which of her many admirers she should honor with the title of husband. What girl who was sought by a dozen eligible young men would not have hesitated? Besides, why should she leave her girlhood queendom for the more dubious sway of married belle? If this eager dozen of adorers should fall away another relay would take their place. So Amy Baya tossed her head—it was a very pretty head, crowned with glossy chestnut hair in which a red rose always nestled—and went on her way, smiling bewitchingly, dressing ravishingly and flirting outrageously until papa intervened.

When papa declared that all this "tom fooling by moonlight" ought to stop and be succeeded by a stately march to the altar with a maid of honor, eight bridesmaids and perhaps a flower girl, there to meet a bridegroom bashful but exultant, Amy tossed her head so violently that the red rose tumbled to the floor, and opined that papa might know a few things about stocks and bonds and might be handy at cutting coupons, but he was beyond his province when he assumed to know anything about a girl and her battalion of worshippers.

The Woman in the Case and Two Rivals.

Papa argued and Miss Baya pooh-poohed. Papa talked loudly and there is even a suspicion that he swore. Miss Baya wept, partly in anger and partly to reduce papa to an abject state of subjection, but for once papa would not be reduced.

"I am in earnest."

> "That careless sending of the wrong letter to the right man or the right letter to the wrong man constituted a net of circumstances in which the happiness of two young hearts has been imprisoned, a wretched spider's web of fate enmeshing the lives and future of one of the foremost young couples in St. Louis society."

"So I perceive," came a soft voice, vibrant with anger, from behind a real lace handkerchief, "but I wouldn't inform the neighborhood, if I were you."

"It's absurd. Your mother was married at sixteen. When she was your age she had three children."

"Papa, you are ridiculously old fashioned. It isn't the mode to marry now until you are thirty, if at all."

"If at all! So that's what you are thinking of? Allow me to remind you that I want no old maid in our family."

"Not old maid, papa. I told you you were old-fashioned. Bachelor maid is the term, at least for girls who can marry and don't want to. An old maid is one who wants to marry but can't."

Papa ignored the nice distinction,

"Flirts become old maids.'

"No, papa."

"Yes, Amy."

Upon which Mr. Baya, who was wise as Balzac in the ways of women, examined all the shutters of the house and made his stately way upstairs to bed. That night his wilful, pretty brunette daughter dreamed exactly as he hoped she would. The dream god propelled her thirty years into the future and she beheld herself with shrunken, curveless figure, thin gray hair, a knobby forehead and spectacles and a most exacting temper.

"Oh, why have I come to this?" she wailed to her mirror. "Why didn't I do as papa wished?'

The mirror made no answer vocally, for it was enough to reflect the curveless figure and the thin, gray hair, the knobby forehead and unhappy face.

The next morning Amy Baya breakfasted with her father, an unusual honor for him in this season of beaux and cotillons and bridge parties. He observed that she was pale and she answered that she had not slept well. Then she said: "Papa, I think you were quite right in what you said last night. I have decided to marry."

"The first one who asks me."

"Don't be flippant," he answered with a frown, but on his way down town he asked himself whether hers was a flippant answer. Her admirers were all fine young fellows, all of wealthy parents, all of excellent character, all with the charm and chivalry of Southern manhood. One of them would be quite as welcome as a son-in-law as the rest. He would leave it to Amy. She might settle it as she pleased. And that night Amy settled it.

A Courtship and Its Grave Consequences.

Mr. Robert Sturgeon called, as Mr. Sturgeon had been in the habit of doing for a long, delightful and distracting year. Also called a young Kentuckian, a member of one of the oldest families in the Blue Grass State. The Kentuckian had also formed the habit of calling every evening when he was in St. Louis, and latterly he made it a point to have astonishingly frequent business calls to St. Louis. The young men bowed politely to each other. They even shook hands, but the manner in which they looked at each other resembled the greeting of a grizzly bear to a visiting gorilla. Miss Baya, fluttering behind a small fan of violets, smiled, then grew serious, for before her vision passed the phantom of one Miss Amy Baya, aged fifty-two years, whom she had seen in the mirror the night before.

She led the conversational trio as a belle of old led the minuet and her cavaliers followed. They talked of the latest plays, of the new novel, of the last ball and the next ball, and whether Miss Baya would or would not go to New Orleans for Mardi Gras. Plainly the question of whether her callers would attend the carnival depended upon her answer. They discussed the charms of the season's debutantes, and both declared, looking the while at Miss Baya, that debutantes were all insipid, and that a girl must really have been out four years to be interesting. As it grew late both the young men looked at each other with glances that were insults. As it grew still later decorum demanded that they depart, and, although they would gladly have throttled each other, they made their adieus together and Miss Baya saw them walk down the street together, the ends of their cigars glowing, and their charmer said something whimsical to herself about the peace pipe of other savages.

An hour later a sleepy man servant was called to the door by two violent rings in quick succession. Two messenger boys demanded to see Miss Amy Baya.

"1410 East Grand avenue, cull; that's her," said the taller. "Wese got to see her immejit on business. I was told to put this letter in her hands."

"So was I," said the shorter and sturdier, fingering furtively the dollar he had received as a contingent fee and musing on the gold coin that would follow it if he executed his commission.

A little later each messenger boy made a report to his anxious client.

"You bet I put the letter in her fist. She said, 'Thank you,' and she kinder smiled. She says, 'Have you been paid?' And I says, 'Paid?' The gent what gave me this is waitin' for me to get back wid the signed slip, and I gets a greenback. See!'"

"Then what did she do" demanded Mr. Robert Sturgeon. "Did she read the letter?"

"No. She looked at the handwritin' and said she'd send an answer in the morning."

Whereupon the messenger received his greenback.

At another hotel another young man who had also been minded to pour forth the pleading of his soul upon paper as soon as he got rid of the unwelcome companion of his walk was listening to the shorter messenger.

"Yes, I give it to her. Miss Amy Baya herself. I put it right into her mitt, and she smiled and asked me if I'd been paid, and I says, 'There's a feller walkin' up and downin the lobby of the Planters' smokin' hisself to death that's goin' to pay me when I tell him I seen you get this.' And then

CONVICTED HIMSELF OF MURDER IN HIS DREAM

Almost Like the Awful Dream of Eugene Aram Is the Tragedy of Charles Rocker of Doon, Iowa, Who Strangled Charles Schroeder to Marry His Widow, Hung the Murdered Man Up in the Barn To Make Him Appear a Suicide and Then Acted Out the Whole Horror in His Sleep Before His Terrified Bride.

"He Was Clutching the Pillow with Terrible Fury As If He Were Engaged in Choking a Fat Man to Death."

SIBLEY, Ia., Sept. 21.

THE trial and conviction of Charles Rocker for the murder of August Schroeder have revealed a story as strange and dramatic as any that can be discovered in the pages of fiction.

It is so strange and dramatic that it parallels closely, and in many respects surpasses in interest, the famous story of Eugene Aram, which has become a classic in literature, and fascinated the minds of men for many generations. The history of Eugene Aram was in the first instance an occurrence of real life, like that of Charles Rocker. It was made the subject of a novel by Bulwer Lytton and of a poem by Tom Hood, which contains some of the most familiar and thrilling lines ever quoted.

Like Eugene Aram, Charles Rocker was convicted by his own involuntary enactment of his crime. Like Eugene Aram, he "wrought a murder in a dream." The events in both cases would, in the view of a person of poetical imagination, seem to point to the existence of an avenging spirit which pursues a murderer and forces him to give evidence of his own guilt.

August Schroeder was a rich, intelligent and industrious German farmer, having a large farm near Doon, Iowa. He had a young and handsome wife, Dora Schroeder. His affairs were in excellent condition. He had every reason to be pleased with life.

On the night of June 30, 1900, his wife, not knowing why he did not return to the house, went to the barn to look for him, and there, to her unspeakable horror, she found him hanging by a rope from a beam. He was stone dead.

She shrieked for help, and immediately there came to her assistance Charles Rocker, the principal farm hand, and Adolph Schroeder, a brother of the dead man. They carried her half unconscious back to the house and then they cut down the body.

There were certain circumstances connected with the death that might have aroused suspicion, but there was apparently no one who could have had a motive for committing the crime. On both sides of the dead man's windpipe and under his chin there were bruises of a terrible character, which, it might have been argued, were not caused by the rope with which it was supposed the deceased hanged himself. In the absence of other evidence than this and of any suspicion against any person, the theory of suicide was generally but not universally, accepted as the true explanation of the tragedy.

Mrs. Schroeder was embarrassed when she found herself left alone to manage the big farm. Rocker was a very capable farmer and he was also handsome and of powerful physique. He courted her with great ardor and in a few months became her husband. This proceeding excited severe criticism among the neighbors, and those who had entertained suspicions of Rocker at the time of Schroeder's death now expressed them openly. In consequence of this Rocker sold the farm and took his wife away to South Dakota.

Soon after the marriage the wife discovered that he was selfish, brutal, and of an exceedingly violent temper. She began to look continually for new revelations of his bad character.

At last one night the strange occurrence, that is the key note of this history, happened. Between two and three o'clock in the morning Mrs. Rocker was awakened from a deep sleep by the savage shouts and violent actions of her husband.

At first she thought that he was going to attack her, but then she realized that he was enacting a scene of fearful violence in a dream. She lay still, fascinated with horror, unable to speak or move.

"Ha! August," he yelled. "Now I have done for you. You won't worry me any more with your bullying and meanness, you miserly cur."

All the while he uttered this language he was clutching the pillow with terrible fury, as if he were engaged in choking a fat man to death by crushing his neck.

Presently his shouts broke out again.

"Stop that horrid noise, curse you," he cried. "Don't look at me. It won't do you any good. I'll kill you if I have to twist your head off."

As he spoke these words his struggles with the pillow increased in fury for some moments, and he grew quieter again.

Now he seemed to be very busy thrusting his hands into imaginary places, as if he were emptying a man's pockets.

Then he lifted the pillow as if it were a great weight, fell out of bed and found himself awake.

Mrs. Rocker slept no more that night. She guessed that Rocker must have been talking of her first husband's murder. In the morning Rocker noticed her terrified look and asked her what was the matter. She told him that she had heard him talk in his sleep about choking August.

Probably Rocker thought that if he left her in this state of uncertainty she might talk to people. He therefore confessed to her and told her that if she breathed a word of what he said he would kill her as surely as he had killed Schroeder.

According to the confession he made while awake, he had been in great need of money to meet certain obligations arising from his wild life. Unless he could get money it meant ruin and exposure. He tried to borrow from Schroeder, but he was very penurious and would not lend a cent.

One day Schroeder took Rocker with him to the country town to sell a herd of cattle. After this transaction Schroeder had nearly $1,000 in cash in his pocket. The idea occurred to Rocker to drug him and rob him. He obtained chloral in a drug store. They went to a hotel to celebrate the successful day's business and Rocker contrived to put the chloral in Schoeder's whiskey.

Schroeder was a strong man, and although he became dazed under the influence of the drug, he was not unconscious. Rocker was too much under observation to attack him in the town, and so he helped him into the buggy and started back to Doon. When they were in a lonely spot he stopped and throttled the half-conscious man, who struggled fearfully until Rocker finally choked him to death. Then Rocker took the money from Schroeder's pockets.

Rocker drove back to Doon late at night, carried Schroeder's body into the barn and there hanged him, in which condition he was found.

Mrs. Rocker kept silence about her husband's confession for a long time, but when in a fit of demoniac temper he attempted to murder their child by throwing it down a well she could endure things no longer. She gave information to the police and two detectives were sent to arrest Rocker, who then, like Eugene Aram, "walked between with gyves upon his wrist."

At first it appeared that the confession could not be used against Rocker at his trial, on the ground that the evidence of a wife cannot be admitted against her husband, but then just in the nick of time it was discovered that he was a bigamist, and that therefore she was not legally his wife. He was tried and convicted of murder in the first degree in 1904 and sentenced to be hanged.

He secured a new trial on technical grounds and a change of venue was granted from Lyon county to Osceola county of which Sibley is the county seat, on the ground of prejudice in the former place.

The nocturnal confession to the wife again formed the evidence. The jury deliberated fifteen hours and finally agreed to a verdict of murder in the first degree, which was followed by a sentence of life imprisonment.

Rocker received the sentence with the callous remark that it was better than the first one. He is now under sentence, but a motion for a new trial will be argued on October 6.

It will be interesting to recall how closely the case of Rocker resembles the classical one of Eugene Aram. The latter was an English school teacher in the eighteenth century, who made great and original researches in philology. Being in sore need of money, he murdered an old man for the gold that he carried and hid his body in a cave. After this he used to wander in lonely places and talk to himself. One day in this mood he chanced upon one of his little boys, and to him he related that the night before he imagined he was committing a murder in a dream. Then he described the murder with great vividness, a recital which is thus rendered by Thomas Hood:

He told how murderers walk the earth,
  Beneath the curse of Cain,
With crimson clouds before their eyes
  And flames about their brain;
For blood has left upon their souls
  Its everlasting stain!

"And well," quoth he, "I know, for truth,
  Their pangs must be extreme—
Woe, woe, unutterable woe—
  Who spill life's sacred stream!
For why? Methought last night I wrought
  A murder in a dream!

"One that had never done me wrong—
  A feeble man and old;
I led him to a lonely field—
  The moon shone clear and cold;
Now here, said I, this man shall die,
  And I will have his gold!

"Two sudden blows with a ragged stick
  And one with a heavy stone,
One hurried gash with a hasty knife,
  And then the deed was done;
There was nothing lying at my foot
  But lifeless flesh and bone!

"Nothing but lifeless flesh and bone,
  That could not do me ill;
And yet I feared him all the more
  For lying there so still;
There was a manhood in his look
  That murder could not kill!

"And lo! the universal air
  Seem'd lit with ghastly flame;
Ten thousand thousand dreadful eyes
  Were looking down in blame;
I took the dead man by his hand
  And called upon his name!

"Oh, God! it made me quake to see
  Such sense within the slain!
But when I touched the lifeless clay
  The blood gush'd out amain!
For every clot a burning spot
  Was scorching in my brain!

"My head was like an ardent coal,
  My heart was solid ice;
My wretched, wretched soul, I knew,
  Was at the Devil's price;
A dozen times I groan'd; the dead
  Had never groaned but twice!

"I took the dreary body up
  And cast it in a stream—
A sluggish water, black as ink,
  The depth was so extreme:
My gentle boy, remember, this
  Is nothing but a dream!

"Down went the corse with a hollow plunge,
  And vanish'd in the pool;
Anon I cleansed my bloody hands
  And washed my forehead cool,
And sat among the urchins young
  That evening in the school."

The boy was so impressed with the wonderful realism of Eugene Aram's narrative that he repeated it to others, whose attention was thereby directed to the crime which had been committed, and as the poem concludes:

That very night, while gentle sleep
  The urchin eyelids kiss'd,
Two stern-faced men set out from Lynn,
  Through the cold and heavy mist;
And Eugene Aram walk'd between,

SCIENCE FINDS A NEW F

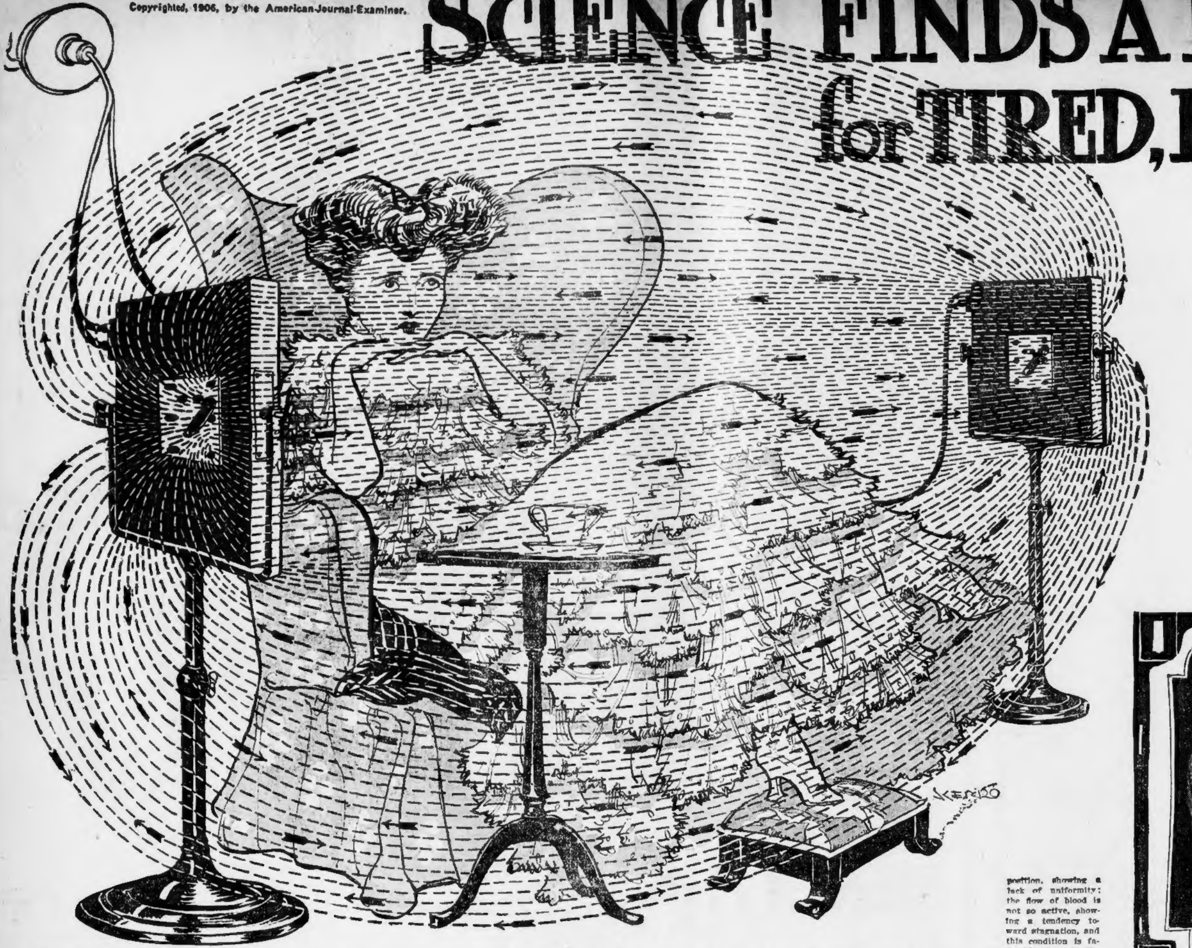
The Curiou
Bath in M
Like a



IF you are lazy, if you feel old age creeping over you, if you are a woman of fashion or a man of business or finance and your nerves are worn to a frazzle owing to the artificial life you lead and the constant overdrafts on your vital force; if you are hysterical, a prey to insomnia or even paralysis; or if overeating and drinking and lack of exercise have filled your blood and tissues with waste matter that is manifested in rheumatism, gout or kidney diseases—then "throw physics to the dogs" and soak yourself in "odic force."

Your school books have told you that the central source of all life and energy is the sun. The doctors will tell you that if you plant your feet on the solid earth under the rays of the sun—that is, if you live wholesomely in close touch with nature—natural forces will serve to maintain the magnetic equilibrium of your body, which means vital force at its best, and you will be exempt from most of the physical ills which afflict humanity.

How, in this age of artificial living, to accomplish this result by artificial means has been the quest of men of science ever since science emerged from among the fogs of necromancy. The quest of Ponce de Leon for the Fount of Eternal Youth was prosecuted with no greater enthusiasm. And now we are told on high scientific authority that we may hope very soon to profit by the labors of these hard-headed modern followers in the footsteps of the credulous old Spaniard.

After ten years of experimenting, Emile Bachelet, a French electrical engineer, has, it is claimed, perfected a mechanism which transforms electrical currents into waves of magnetism in which you may bathe, which are absorbed by your body, even by your blood—owing to the attraction of the oxygen and the iron which are important constituents of the blood—and which, unlike electric currents, are retained.

Every one has heard of the use of electricity by nearly all modern specialists in nervous disorders. Its benefits are well established. But as electric currents always follow the best conductor, they merely pass through the body, the active results ceasing with the turning off of the current.

Waves of magnetism, however, find affinity in the oxygen and iron in the body, and thus somewhat of this subtle force can be retained. The manner in which iron filings attach themselves to the poles of a horseshoe magnet is proof of this.

Although electricity and magnetism are two separate and individual, though related, forces, the electric dynamo is a well understood evidence that the force of the latter can be immensely stimulated and increased or diminished by the latter. This fact was the basis of the hope of Bachelet that he could find a means of creating, through some manipulation of electric currents, a powerful magnetic field in which a patient could lie or sit at will and absorb and retain this force which physicians have so long believed to be analogous to, if not identical with, true vital energy—the primary power which sustains life.

On another part of these pages Dr. Samuel G. Tracy, of New York City, whose experiments with radium have been described in this newspaper, tells more fully of Bachelet's device, giving results of his use of it in his own practice, and also explaining more in detail what "odic force" is and exactly how it restores vital energy and thus enables nature to make her own cures.

The accompanying illustrations, showing the two square, boxlike generators between which the field of "odic force" is established when connections are made with an electric dynamo, are reproduced from photographs taken in Dr. Tracy's operating room. The fair patient under treatment, who consented to appear in the illustrations, was Miss Janet Barrington, the well-known comedienne, for several years an engaging factor in New York productions of Charles and Daniel Frohman, and later with Henry Miller.

"How do I feel with 'odic force' soaking into me?" repeated Miss Barrington, laughing. "I feel nothing except that it is very pleasant medicine to take when all you have to do is to lie on a couch or sit in a comfortable chair. There is hardly any sensation at all, no shock nor thrill such as the electrical machines give you.

"But I've immense faith in it, though this is only the third time I've bathed this way. I'm convalescing from quite a serious illness, and I'm sure this is giving me a 'lift.'"

Dr. Tracy here explained just how the new force works.

"The essence of life is blood, and the vital elements of the blood are the oxygen and iron contained in it. This being an acknowledged fact, it is readily seen how important it is that the magnetic equilibrium of the system should be sustained. If partly lost and diseased conditions ensue, it should be restored as soon as possible. This can be accomplished by submerging the patient in a magnetic field for appropriate periods of time. At once he is charged with odic energy, and this stimulates his nerve force.

"When a patient is placed between the odic generators he is in what is known as a 'magnetic field,' and the lines of odic force, of which there are many thousand, penetrate and saturate him without producing shock, pain or muscular contraction. When a patient is placed in a harmonious magnetic field where the positive and negative is equally distributed, the molecular currents of the blood corpuscles are set in motion, increasing the attraction and repulsion of each cell.

"The magnetic current affects the body within the field in such a manner as to rotate in some degree every molecule and make it assume a different position from what it would if not acted upon. When the iron in the blood corpuscle is only slightly magnetized, or not at all, the blood cells occupy a higgledy-piggledy position, showing a lack of uniformity: the flow of blood is not so active, showing a tendency toward stagnation, and this condition is favorable toward disease.

"However, when the blood is magnetized the molecular currents take a parallel direction, and this action is conductive to normal and healthy functional activity. The chemical action is accentuated, the circulation equalized, and the waste materials of the body better eliminated.

"When the odic force is passing through a patient he has his electrical potential raised, and the imparted energy is stored in his system, this gradually disappears in two or three days, as the result of functional activity. However, during its passage, it has a remarkable effect on the whole system; first, by increasing the metabolic changes in the body, equalizing the circulation, improving the general nutrition, and assisting in the elimination from the system of those products of combustion which if retained in the body enter the circulation and act as a pois

Miss Camille Clifford, the Future Lady Aberdare.

Will They Succeed in Frightening Poo

THE cables have already announced that Lord Aberdare, a youthful member of the ancient nobility of England, is engaged to marry Miss Camille Clifford, an American actress of great beauty and charm.

The young nobleman's father has denied the engagement, cursed his son and behaved in the manner of a tyrannical father of old romance, but his son gayly and fearlessly bids him defiance. He has not much to lose, for the ancient castles and the vast entailed estates are bound to come to him.

In the meantime, that he may enjoy married bliss in comfort, Lord Aberdare has actually gone to work. He has bought a motor garage and may be seen working there for several hours every day. He labors like a mechanic in overalls, but the carefully creased trousers, white spats and patent leather shoes seen beneath them evoke the elegant life he has left behind. He has given up wearing his state robes altogether.

"I expect to make a handsome living out of this business," he said to a reporter. "I have studied it for three days and I understand it thoroughly. Miss Clifford will be able to live in a manner that befits her when she marries me, whether she gives up the stage or not."

All the ancient nobility of England are naturally furious that a member of their order should so far forget the traditions of his rank as to go to work—and that work of a greasy and unornamental character. They are taking extraordinary steps to prevent him from entering into the marriage which necessitates this labor. There is a movement to take revenge upon Miss Clifford by having the members of the House of Lords occupy the foremost rows at her approaching reappearance in London and spoil the effect of her performance by giving her a chilling reception. The brave young actress calmly faces the enmity of this noble body.

Lord Aberdare frankly and unaffectedly discussed his love for Miss Clifford and his approaching marriage, with a correspondent who called upon his at his residence, Buckingham Gate, opposite Buckingham Palace, London.

"Miss Clifford and I have been engaged for three months," he said. "Because my father disappro kept the fact t day somebody h me, or to ask to put them of us alone now.

either generator. Even a brick wall between one generator and the other does not prevent the reciprocal passage of the waves of magnetism.

Upon this occasion the current which actuated the generators was taken from the electric light fixtures in the room, through heavily insulated wires. The whole apparatus which does not weigh more than fifty pounds, is, therefore, capable of being set up in any office or other room where electricity is used for lighting.

A jaded society beauty, lounging in her boudoir, might have a generator on either side of her couch, bathe in "odic force," and gain strength to renew her social campaign "while she waits."

"Father," who "sits around all day," while everybody else works, might be surreptitiously stirred into industry by having "odic force" generators in disguise placed on either side of his well worn chair.

With respect to various diseases mentioned above, which it is expected will yield to this strange new vital force artificially created, Dr. Tracy's statement on this page conveys the results of the most recent experiments.

To this force is attributed the cure of the two-and-a-half-year-old son of James Elsdorf, of No. 169 West Ninety-eighth street, who, at the age of eighteen months became a victim of infantile paralysis. The left side of the body and both legs from the hips down were paralyzed, and the vocal chords were affected.

Ordinary methods of treatment produced no results. A few weeks ago the child received the first of daily treatments with the Bachelet generators. After the first week there was steady improvement and now the parents report that the withered little legs are rounding out again, the evidences of paralysis growing less and less.

the sup- over ere ac- owever, ment in but un- mag- largely dent of Odic force not only energizes the system, but acts as a prophylactic and preventive of disease. A certain amount of odic force emanates from all electric motors, and other electric coils, and those who are constantly in contact with them receive some slight amount of odic influence generated in the magnetic field.

In a concentrated form odic force, obtained from a powerful magnetic field, makes a person less open to attack from epidemic diseases by maintaining the natural magnetic equilibrium of the body. This odic force as field for ble diseases. gnetic field, are prod- uts of the oxygen is 's known, sphere as a stretch d becomes the air, ed to the assists in keeping the resisting power of the system at its maximum.

Nature's method of supplying odic force is the absorption of these radiations from the sun, and by the inhalation of oxygen, the oxygen of the air being partially charged with magnetic properties. With many every little atmospheric change is felt—attended with a dissipation of energy. This is due to one not having sufficent power in his blood to maintain the natural amount of odic force imparted to him from natural sources, the negative action of the earth absorbing the positive forces from the blood and other tissues. Hence, under these conditions the patient feels debilitated, with poor circulation in the extremities.

Like all nature's forces, odic force derived from natural magnetic sources is subject to interruptions. Those suffering from debilitated bodily conditions or disease experience depression at these times, which in turn reacts upon the mind, causing a variety of disturbed mental conditions.

Fortunately, owing to the recent invention of a new magnetic generator, by Emile Bachelet, we are now able to supply the system in a short time with positive magnetism. By this means odic force can be imparted to a patient by placing a magnetic generator on either side of him.

Odic force, while produced by magnetism, is not electricity, and although electricity is related to magnetism, it is not the true vital energy. Odic force, produced through magnetic agencies, is in all probability the natural force and primary power which sustains life.

Emile Bachelet is an electrical engineer, whose researches in this field extend back to 1902, at which time he found that the human body attracts magnetic lines of force. Most of his work has been characterized by simplicity and based upon sound electrical principles. Recently he has completed an invention which is a masterpiece in electrical engineering. It is a device for manipulating electro-magnetic waves of different characters; this is demonstrated by the wave which depends on the number of cycles generated by the alternating current.

The magnetic generator is composed of a rotary converter [illegible] which produces either the direct or alternating current.

The generator also has [illegible] and frequency variator. To these are adjusted various switches by which the operator can produce at will twenty-six various electro-magnetic waves, including a reciprocating sphere, or an exclusive positive or an [illegible].

This odic force generator consists of two boxes, supported by two adjustable uprights. The boxes are about one foot long, one foot wide and two inches thick. Inside of one box is the primary coil and inside of the other the secondary coil. They are adjusted by a novel arrangement that permits the patient to sit or lie between them, but not be in any way connected with them. By means of a switch on the outside of the boxes the strength of the magnetic field may be increased or decreased. The [illegible] of the odic force received by the patient may be further modified by placing the generators nearer to or farther away from the patient.

Neurasthenia, or nervous prostration, which may almost be called an American malady, owing to the strenuous life which we lead, is markedly influenced by the absorption of odic force. In this malady the patient may have symptoms of all the diseases known to the medical men, and still not actually have any one of these diseases. At the same time there is evidence of nerve impoverishment—these patients lack nerve energy, lose their ambition, become indifferent to their surroundings, lose sleep and life is a burden to them.

I do not wish to be extravagant in my praise of the use of magnetism and odic force in such cases, and I [illegible] dispute the value of this great remedial agent, but I must say that in neurasthenia, especially with pronounced insomnia, the absorption of odic force gives greater relief in a shorter time than any other method.

In hysteria and some forms of insanity, as melancholia, the mental condition of the patient is wonderfully improved. After a series of exposures to the magnetic field the patient regains much of his mental poise, shows greater mental strength and control. The melancholy patient begins to take a new interest in affairs of life and after a time, if his case is not too far advanced, becomes a useful member of society.

But the benefits of odic force are not limited to the class of cases just cited. At this point I am reminded of a case of paralysis which appeared to be permanently cured. She was a French lady fifty-five years of age, who sustained an apoplectic stroke on her return voyage to America. Her right side was paralyzed, and she was unable to move leg or arm; there was also loss of sensation in the skin.

At the end of three weeks her condition was very much the same; she was powerless on her right side, her sleep was disturbed and her appetite poor. Odic force from the magnetic field was applied to her daily, and at the end of the first week she was able to stand and sensation had returned. In a month's time she was able to walk without a cane, with no pain, and at the end of the third month she was practically restored to her former condition.

Before passing on to a consideration of the use of magnetic treatment of rheumatism and gout, I must mention that this mysterious fluid, when taken up by the nervous system, is of immense value to those addicted to drugs (cocaine, morphine, chloral and alcohol). In these cases the nervous system is shattered, and the odic force treatment restores the lost nerve energy and gives tone to the patient while nature makes her own repairs.

By a series of tests it has been found that by restoring the magnetic equilibrium the waste products of the system are more thoroughly eliminated. In rheumatism and gout we have a waste product floating in the blood, and from time to time collecting in the joints. The successful treatment of these accumulations have baffled medical men for many years. A series of exposures to the magnetic lines of force with absorption of odic force sets up electric currents in the tissues and general circulation, and produces an increased elimination of these poisonous products through the excretory organs.

Rheumatoid arthritis is generally thought to be an incurable disease. It is a chronic condition, with thickening of the bones, swelling of the parts, and deformity. The history of one case of this kind is interesting from the fact that he was practically cured by odic force.

Male, age twenty-eight; rheumatoid arthritis for one year. When he first came under observation he was thoroughly crippled in his legs and body bent. He could only get along with two canes, and it was impossible for him to lie on his back. The upper and middle bones of his spinal column were inflamed with great swelling and pain, the pain radiating to the ribs, producing a disturbance of his breathing apparatus. The neck stiff and head bent forward. A well known professor at the College of Physicians pronounced it incurable.

Treatment by odic force began in November, 19[illegible], and in four months, with treatment almost daily, his condition was so improved that he was able to return to his work. At the present time he feels fairly well, the deformity has almost disappeared. There is a slight stiffness of the neck, but not enough to cause him annoyance.

In all diseased and debilitated cases restoration of the magnetic equilibrium is as necessary as are pure air, good food and fresh water. In my opinion the invention of Emile Bachelet is an efficient scientific means of accomplishing this object.

Lord Aberdare from Marrying This Stage Beauty?

of the match we have rselves so far. Every ome up to congratulate tions, and I have had Perhaps they will leave

I was driving with a friend through Bloomsbury square, and he asked me if I would like to be introduced to Miss Clifford, whose house we were passing. I said, 'All right,' but did not much care, to tell the truth, for, till then, I had scarcely been to a theatre half a dozen times in my life. I had seen Miss Clifford in 'The Prince of Pilsen' two years ago at the Shaftesbury, but had never spoken to her.

"Well, we went to Miss Clifford's flat and—had—tea." He closed his eyes as if to linger on a tender memory.

"At first I wasn't a bit taken. Not a bit. Didn't think anything at all of it. I must say this for her. Many a girl on the stage snaps at a fellow in my position. I may tell you she's had all sorts of offers, but she's very independent. She refused to listen to any sort of them, which was quite nice, wasn't it? However, three or four months ago she accepted me, and, as far as I know at present, we shall be married. At all events you can announce the engagement."

Lord Aberdare drove the correspondent in a motor car down to his place of business, the Waterloo Garage, in York road, near Waterloo Station, quite a rough neighborhood.

"As proprietor of this motor garage," he said, "making a specialty of repairs, I hope to do very well. I am keenly interested in every branch of motoring, and I love driving, myself, and I believe I shall do well. I mean to use my own name, of course.

"My works manager, Mr. Defries, is a clever and capable man, and the garage is in such a convenient situation for business that I am sure we shall never be at a loss for business."

In a few minutes more the scion of the nobility was lying on his back on the grimy floor under a disabled automobile, trying to make the works go and earn the wherewithal to support Miss Camille Clifford.

The young actress, whose original name was Camilla Ottersen, was born in Norway and came to Boston as a little girl. Her parents were poor, and at one time she had to scrub the floors of a boarding house, an occupation that gave her much of the splendid and wholesome physical development which she now exhibits.

She became an actress and went to England with "The Prince of Pilsen" company. She had a humble position, but she excited favorable comment by the manner in which she walked across the stage, exhibiting her exquisite curves. From this time she progressed rapidly in her art. As "the Gibson Girl" in "The Catch of the Season" she achieved a splendid success. The British public regarded her as incarnating to perfection that stately type of American girlhood which has won so great a place among the aristocracy of Europe.

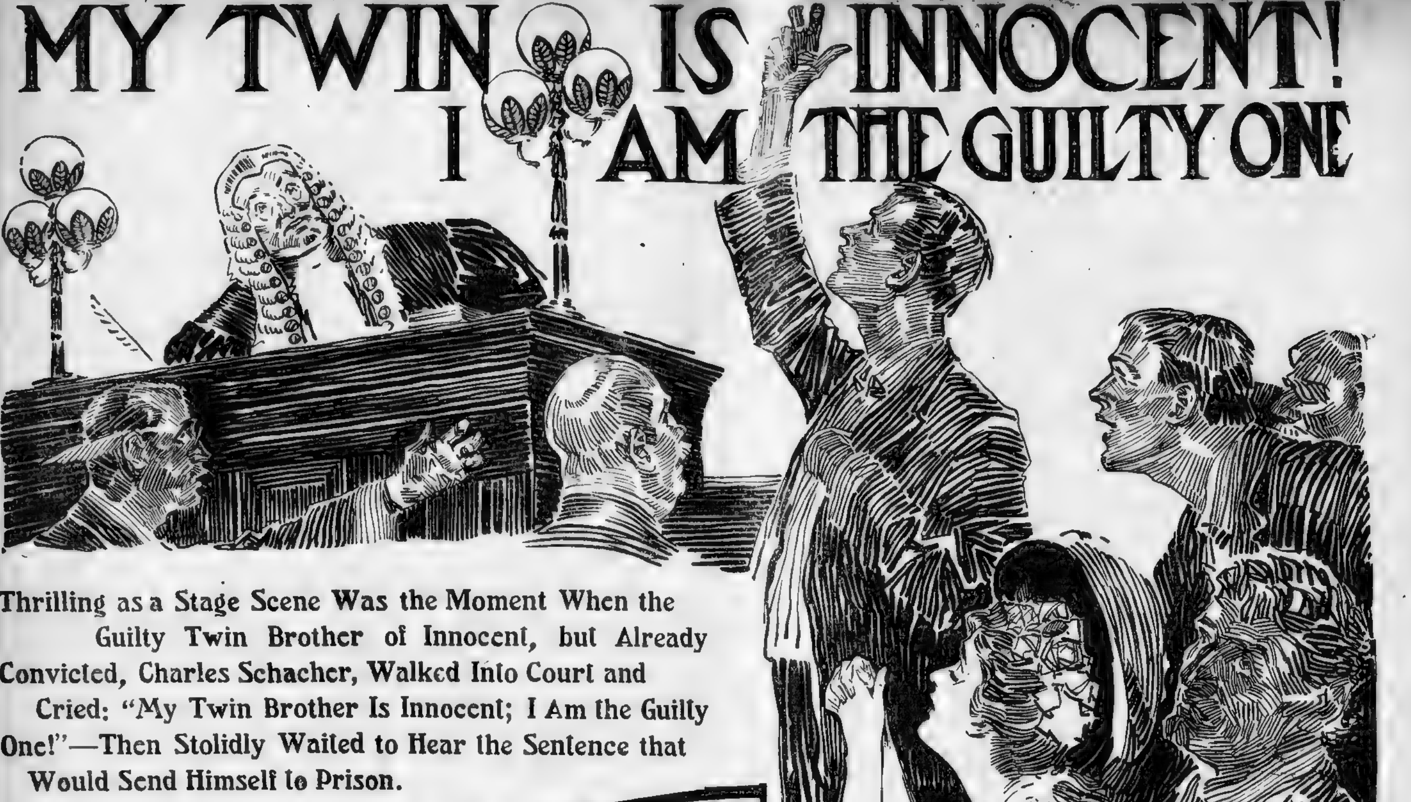
MY TWIN IS INNOCENT! I AM THE GUILTY ONE



Thrilling as a Stage Scene Was the Moment When the Guilty Twin Brother of Innocent, but Already Convicted, Charles Schacher, Walked Into Court and Cried: "My Twin Brother Is Innocent; I Am the Guilty One!"—Then Stolidly Waited to Hear the Sentence that Would Send Himself to Prison.

THERE is more than "honor among thieves." The plain and unvarnished facts here set forth show that in the bosom of a thief the sense of justice may be so often [illegible] that he is incapable of [illegible] [illegible] labeled for the crime that was [illegible].

You have seen [illegible] [illegible] portrayed upon the stage in thrilling melodrama. You may perhaps read how [illegible] [illegible] the robed as the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]. You felt that [illegible] [illegible] was innocent [illegible] [illegible] seemed overwhelmingly against him. You watched the pale face of the heroine, his promised wife, and gloried in the steadfastness of her faith in the man she loved.

Then, at the critical moment, how your pulses bounded when the real criminal pushed his way through the throng before the bar of justice and said to the Judge:

"This man is innocent. I, and I alone, am guilty!"

Well, such a scene has lately been enacted in a real court, another instance that real human life is constantly coming to the support of the ideals of poets and dramatists, that men and women, even in this self seeking and sordid age, have good impulses, and act upon them to their own self sacrifice.

If a dramatist should take this instance the basis for a stage play probably he would entitle his piece "Better for Brother" for the [illegible] wrongly accused, imprisoned and brought to trial was the brother of the guilty man, who was safe because he was [illegible] suspected of the crime.

These brothers are Charles and Abraham Schacher and twins. Abraham is unmarried. Charles, with his comely wife and several children, lives in a comfortable home in the Jewish quarter of Montreal, Canada. He was a hard-working man, much respected by all his neighbors. Abraham was of a lively disposition, and [illegible] to be a [illegible].

Torn from the Bosom of His Family.

In November of last year Abraham Schacher left Montreal and journeyed to New York, ex[illegible] to find [illegible] employment there. He had gone from Montreal only a few days when a terrible blow fell upon Charles Schacher and his devoted family.

Officers of the law from Kingston went one evening to the Schacher home, found the husband and father in the bosom of his family and placed him under arrest.

"Why is this?" demanded the astonished man.

"You are wanted in Kingston," the officers said. "You are accused of the burglary of McKay's fur store there last week. The value of the furs stolen is $3,000. Here is the warrant for your arrest. Come, we have no time to waste."

"My husband shall not go with you," said Mrs. Schacher, stoutly. "No man in the world is more innocent than he is, of any crime."

"We must do our duty," said the officers. "Come, Schacher, get your hat and coat."

"No, he shall not go," said the wife again, clinging to her husband's arm. "Tell me, when was this burglary committed?"

The officers named the date of the burglary.

"There!" said the woman in triumph: "I told you my husband could not be guilty. I can prove that he was here at home with me and our children on that night. He had not been to Kingston for more than a week."

"You will have to tell that to the judge," said the officers, "we must do our duty."

"I will go," said Charles Schacher, calmly—and then to his wife, who was weeping on his shoulder: "Why should I not go with these gentlemen? I am innocent, but mistakes often happen in this world. I will soon prove my innocence, then I will return, and all will be as it was before."

Before they took Charles Schacher away the officers carefully searched the house. They found none of the stolen articles—they found nothing in the slightest degree pointing to him as the thief. But they took him to Kingston and locked him up.

It is well known that officers of the law do not like to confess their mistakes. Although the law presumes the accused "to be innocent until he is proved guilty," the operation of the law's machinery gives that worthy adage a decidedly farcical look, even a comic opera interpretation. Although the law presumed Charles Schacher to be innocent, it kept him carefully behind iron bars and set about systematically to fasten the crime upon him.

Fast in the Law's Toils.

There were several accomplices also behind the bars against whom there was sufficient evidence. But they preserved a sullen silence. It was useless for Charles Schacher to appeal to them. So the lawyers for the prosecution went on serenely to wind their toils about Schacher, beginning with the only solitary fact in their possession—that his name was that of one of the thieves.

All this time Charles Schacher languished in jail from November until June 20 he was deprived of his liberty, and then was removed from his cell, only to be placed in the prisoner's dock.

He stood there still strong of heart, being a simple minded man with unbounded faith in the [illegible] force of innocence. In heart, too, was his wife. But she was worried. She was learning things about the processes of the law that filled her with dismay. After it was all over she told of the [illegible] struggles of herself and her husband's lawyers to gain the slightest show of justice.

"When they had my husband once under arrest I suppose they wanted to convict him because they were afraid he would sue them for damages.

"They were very hard on us and our lawyers. They tried every way to convict my husband. They treated our lawyers like dirt under their feet. When our lawyers gave their word of honor that my husband was in court in Montreal with them on the date of the robbery in Kingston as witness in another case, they laughed and jeered at us. No, unless you are rich and powerful you can get no justice in this world—except by accident."

Beset by False Testimony.

Standing there in the dock, Charles Schacher was still confident of victory. He smiled at his worried wife as the imposing lawyer representing the royal crown of England rose to state to the Court what a guilty man he was. Point by point the learned King's counsel showed how Charles Schacher could not possibly escape the consequences of his crime.

Then came the witnesses, "witnesses" who gave testimony to prove that an innocent man who was in another city at the time, had committed this crime. The man in the prisoners' dock stared at them, wondering if he could be awake.

The coils tightened. The shadow of despair rested on the faces of the wife and the lawyers for the defense. The faces of the King's counsel and of the lawyers representing the man who had lost the furs were complacent and virtuously glad.

But suddenly there was an interruption in the proceedings. Somebody had entered the court room and was whispering in the ear of the King's Counsel, and that learned gentleman's face was showing unmistakable indications of a distressed mind.

He coughed once or twice behind his hand, and whispered in the ear of the senior lawyer for the defence with a manner so suddenly and strangely obsequious that Mrs. Schacher wondered if the Almighty had stricken him with a righteous illness.

Then both lawyers approached the bench and conversed in low tones with the judge, who appeared much startled, and commanded

"Admit this man, at once!"

Thereupon an officer of the court, standing by the door, admitted a pale young man, and walked by his side down the aisle to the bar of justice. The prisoner in the dock, at sight of the newcomer, flushed then turned deadly pale. Mrs. Schacher raised her hands and half screamed

"It is Abraham! It is my husband's brother!"

"Stand down," said the judge to the prisoner.

Charles Schacher was led from the dock to a chair beside his lawyers. Then the Judge spoke again

"If one Abraham Schacher is in court let him take the witness chair and be sworn."

The pale young man walked firmly to the seat his brother had just vacated, sat down, raised his right hand and received the oath to "tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth." The Judge questioned him:

"What is your name?"

"Abraham Schacher."

"Are you related to the defendant in this case?"

"I am his twin brother."

"Where do you live?"

"In New York lately."

"What do you know about this case? Your brother, the defendant, is charged with complicity in the theft of $3,000 worth of furs from the shop of Mr. McKay last November."

Abraham Schacher rose and flung up his hand.

"My brother is innocent," he said; "I am the guilty one."

The courtroom was in an uproar. Mrs. Schacher cried out "Oh, Abraham!" And then flung her arms about her husband's neck. Officers of the court had trouble in restoring order. Of the two brothers, the [illegible] and paler now was Charles. He had known himself innocent all along, now he must believe his twin brother guilty.

Abraham told his story calmly. He had got into bad and reckless company, and with the other accomplices under arrest, of which his brother Charles was not one, had helped rob the McKay store. He had taken no share of the plunder, he did not know what had become of it.

[illegible] the proud lawyers for the crown took a more humble tone. They gladly withdrew the case against Charles Schacher. In their eagerness to atone for the injury done an innocent man they even asked the Judge to be lenient with the guilty brother.

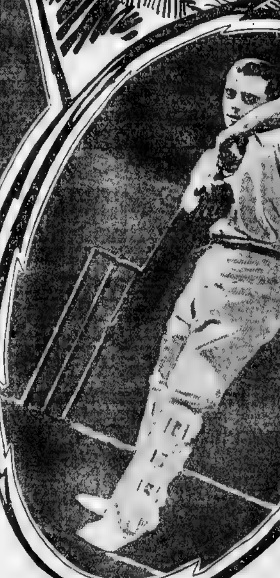
"In consideration of your youth, and your sense of justice and right in coming to the rescue of your innocent brother," said the judge, to Abraham, who had been placed formally under arrest, "the court imposes sentence of but a single year in prison, in the hope and belief that such a lesson will be sufficient to guarantee your honorable conduct thereafter."

These words caused the innocent brother to burst into tears. He threw his arms about Abraham, and there was presented the strange and pathetic picture of a guilty brother with conscience eased by his confession, comforting the innocent one, who now for the first time exhibited emotion.

If it had been possible, Charles Schacher, innocent as he was, would now have eagerly taken upon himself the penalty awarded to the real criminal.

When court had adjourned spectators, court officers and lawyers gave Charles Schacher and his wife an ovation. But the mistaken prosecution must have done still more, for the reunited Schacher family shortly afterward moved into a much larger and more comfortable house, where Abraham will be received with open arms when his sentence expires.

CHARLES SCHACHER



ABRAHAM SCHACHER.

"Abraham Schacher rose and flung up his hand.

"'My twin brother is innocent,' he said. 'I am the guilty one.'

"The courtroom was in an uproar. Mrs. Schacher cried out: 'Oh, Abraham!' And then flung her arms about her husband's neck. Officers of the court had trouble in restoring order."

HOW TO MAKE A SMALL ROOM LOOK LARGE.

TO increase the apparent size of a room there is nothing better than the judicious use of mirrors.

Supposing that you have a glass about five feet high and two wide in a wooden frame, you may employ it most decoratively in a sitting room.

Mount it about a couple of feet from the floor and arrange in front of it a row of ferns, palms or other foliage plants, concealing the pots with a handsome box filled in at the top with fresh moss.

The mirror should be placed either where it will reflect the view from the window or else opposite the entrance of the room, so that when the door is opened one may see the hall, or passage beyond, reflected in it. Of course, the room will not be any larger really, but the fact that it will appear so is a great point, for, as a friend of my own says: "If we cannot have a pleasant reality at least let us have a pleasant illusion."

I know one house where the dining room is long and dark, and the only window gives a very insufficient light. Here an immense improvement was effected by placing a good mirror over the sideboard at the end of the room opposite the window.

This reflected the light and the landscape seen from the window, with the result that one was almost deluded into the belief that the room had two windows, and one certainly was not conscious of the want of an outlet.

EVENING WRAPS FOR AUTUMN.

Yellows an Enchanting Feature of the New Wraps for Evening Wear.

This Autumn's Wraps Not as Long as Those of Last Season.

Crepe de Chine Is Most Effectively Employed in Their Making.

A—A Gorgeous Wrap in White and Gold with Two Veilings of Rich Lace Over Silk.

C—An Attractive Coat of Yellow Broadcloth in a Fashionable Autumn Coat.

A VERY few seasons ago it was considered sufficient for even a woman of wealth to possess only three—sometimes but two—evening wraps. it is thought necessary to have al t as many wraps as gowns—although se are by no means intended to match gowns, while, for artistic reasons, they n do.

ellow is a particularly lovely color for ning wraps, because it lightens and ightens up an entire costume and can be o effectively combined or veiled with other olors. Certain shades of pink, for in tance, and white and black, can be most harmingly used to veil and trim a yel w wrap.

And so, drifting in with the Autumn's olden foliage we have the golden raiment fashion in almost as many tints as ature herself can produce.

Evening coats are necessarily loose, so as ot to crush the delicate fabrics beneath em, and the new ones at present are not ite as long as they have been in other sons. This, perhaps, is because these ts are so costly and of such perishable erials or decorations that it seemed ty to continually have the garments d and perhaps ruined at the bottom.

Figure A is an exquisite example of a costly evening wrap in which gold bands gleam through cobwebs of lace. Practically speaking, it is really three wraps, one of white silk for the foundation, and two of lace over it, the outer being more ornate than the intermediate wrap. In length this coat comes within ten inches of the floor. Around the bottom are two rows of gold braid in two widths, while a cascade of white lace down the front revives a very dainty fashion which was not so evident last season.

Over the silk coat hangs one of lace, in the effect of panels with lace borders that meet. These panels are powdered over with gold sequins and the gold effect is repeated in an edging of gold lace and border of two rows of gold braid. Gold lace also edges the panels of this cloak, giving a glimmering outline to them which is veiled by the white lace outside wrap as by a mist.

The outside coat has a gold lace border, but its panels are all white and have much the appearance of prettily bordered lace veils joined together in panels.

A little pointed yoke of gold braid is set in the top of the coat, and over this is appliqued heavy lace in a raised pattern. At the bottom of the yoke are two large gold braid rosettes from which hang chains of gold olives, tassels and knots of netted gold. These chains hang quite far down the coat and gleam among its frothy folds of lace.

On the shoulders are three tucks and an inserted panel of white lace extending to the edge, which is of the same lace.

The triple sleeve is also tucked upon the shoulder. Its foundation is a short puff of silk. Over this hangs a lace sleeve powdered with sequins and trimmed with gold braid, which is covered by one of lace. Both hang in the shape of flowing angel sleeves, and are trimmed with rosettes and dangles, like those on the yoke, which hang far down upon the wrap and serve as decorations on its sides.

Such a garment is quite beyond the means of many women, but its outlines may be copied in silk veiled in chiffon or gauze, and even in silk or cloth suitably trimmed. Some charming color effects can also be introduced in this style of coat, and it could also be effectively made up in black and gold or yellow and gold. Other tints also suggest themselves, such as blue or green and silver.

The coat is [illegible] each side and this opening is filled in with a fold of lovely lace. On each side the slits are superb embroideries worked in gold and silver bullion aft[illegible] the coats of Chinese [illegible]

To[illegible] is [illegible]ntly full and perfe[illegible] pe and is richly embroidered [illegible] a seam down the shoulder [illegible] and back meet. The [illegible] is dull in color and [illegible] front edges are finished [illegible]

This style of [illegible] suggests itself in other [illegible] less expensive braiding [illegible] embroidery [illegible] and some other forms of trimming [illegible] fabrics.

The [illegible] yellow is also illustrated in figure C. This is of broad cloth in that soft, [illegible] yellow one sees in a yellow rose.

A little bolero effect of Irish lace of the same color comes out on the shoulders and slopes down toward the sides. Quite a feature in the make of the coat are velvet panels which come from under the bolero down each side the front and are gathered at their termination into two little crescent shaped pockets put on well to the front. Below each pocket are two large buttons, the size of a dollar, covered with crossed lines of gold and silver. A fichu of filmy white lace hangs down the front in a jabot effect as far as the pockets, forming a charming contrast with the golden velvet panels.

Sleeves of three-quarter length are made in a puff and finished with a cuff of velvet and lace. The cuff is pleated and three pleats hang below the lace.

Around the bottom the coat is stitched in two stitchings, far apart, and the hem comes just below the knees.

A little pointed yoke of velvet is set in the back and over the outlines of that is arranged in an unstitched fold a bertha of cloth around which is sewed a border of Irish lace. Below this the coat hangs full.

An attractive feature upon the shoulders, at the back of and on the sleeve, is a buckle which catches up the sleeve in several folds at the back.

This type of coat is by no means difficult for the home dressmaker to copy, its expense depending upon the quality of the material employed and the trimmings used.

Women who cannot afford a great number of evening wraps would do well to make up theirs in neutral tints and with an inconspicuous build.

That Would Do Away with the Mails, Telegraphy and Drugs

Would Be But Little More Startling Than the Marvelous Things Done by People Who Have Tried This Wonderful System.

How Prominent Men and Women Use It to Influence the Minds of Others—Heal Themselves and Others of Chronic Diseases, Nervous Disorders and Habits as if by Magic—Anyone Can Do It—Distance No Barrier—One Person's Control Over Another Now Fully Explained.

How Every Man, Woman and Child in the World Can Have "The Secrets of Magnetic Force, Health and Power" Absolutely Free.

Professor F. T. McIntyre, a well-to-do scientist of this city, has created a sensation in the hypnotic world. Through delving down in the realms of nature's mysteries he has discovered a delicate but powerful system that seems destined to revolutionize the theories of the most noted authorities on Mind Force. Some people look upon him as a man possessing a strange power, for he has told them how to influence people far and near and to heal themselves and others of their ills as if by magic. He tells them how to project their thoughts, develop a powerful mentality and build up the mechanism of the body and brain. Doctors and magnetists who have tested the workings of his new discovery admit that it surpasses anything in the history of psychic power.

In explaining the method Professor McIntyre said: "I am convinced that everybody can accomplish the things I have done if they understand the system. It would be a grand thing if every man, woman and child in this country learned the use of this wonderful system. There should be no more disease, immorality, drunkenness, despondency, separations, poverty or failures in life. I have sent free thousands of pamphlets to people in many parts of the world, which explain the principles of my new discovery, and I find they can do the same wonderful things I have done, and for which some persons think I possess a special power. I have sent these printed pamphlets out without any charge whatever, as I am anxious to have every one try the wonders of this new discovery. The letters received from persons who tried it are the same. Many are loud in their exclamations of surprise and thanks, and say they never dreamed such things possible. I receive many fine presents and enjoy working for the uplifting of mankind and science. The kind letters received from grateful hearts more than pay for the interest I take. I will send a copy of my free book to every person who writes me without any charge whatever."

Professor McIntyre has a basketful of letters, from people in many parts of the world. They are, indeed, startling. Mr. James Kubal, a prominent business man of Chicago, writes the following:

"I never dreamed such things possible. If I had only known of this sooner. This system has made a different man of me. I shall give up business and make more money through the use of this system than I can in my business. It has brought back my sight. I can see without glasses and work without them, too. It has overcome my backwardness, and I can now handle my customers in fine shape. I did not know I was so full of the magnetism. I think your system wonderful."

Mr. Eugene Detemson, Baton Rouge, La., writes: "Having tried your system, I unhesitatingly pronounce it to be and to do all you claim for it."

Rev. E. G. Karg, pastor Christian Church, Upper Lake, Cal., writes: "I cannot recommend your system too highly, and I am willing to answer any inquiries in regard to it."

Dr. H. A. Lounsbury, Wheatley, Ontario, Canada, writes: "I have thoroughly investigated the methods and inventions of Professor McIntyre, and can say that his system is scientific and surpasses anything in the line of therapeutics that has come to my notice."

Fred S. Brett, Apartado 285, Guadalajara, Mexico, writes: "I have done wonderful things in influencing people with this system. Have had over fifty persons under my control and compelled them to do startling things. I advise everybody to try it. This system is truly marvelous."

This free book is full of startling explanations and pictures showing that any one can master in a short time the power to control and sway the minds of others. It describes the strange phenomena of Psychic and Hypnotic Influence, Mystic Healing, Psycho and Suggestive Therapeutics, Personal Magnetism and a combined, simple system of reading the characters of others, though thousands of miles away. It gives you the key to the development of the inner or dormant forces of concentration, force of character, will power, memory, determination, [illegible] inspiration, continuity of thought and the ability to throw off the evil effects of disease and despondency.

It is, indeed, one of the most amazingly interesting books of the age, beaming with interest from cover to cover, and all who receive free copies of it can be thankful. It points out the road to financial and social success; it reveals astonishing facts that have been overlooked by the public for many years.

If you wish a free copy of this wonderful book write a postal or letter to Professor F. T. McIntyre, Dept. 1463, No. 128 West Thirty-fourth street, New York, N. Y. All who write will receive it, no one will be disappointed. It is sent by mail, postage paid, absolutely free.

DOUBLOONS

A Thrilling Novel of Mystery, Tragedy and a Stolen Fortune.

By Eden Phillpotts and Arnold Bennett

Synopsis of Previous Chapters.

Philip Masters, a gentleman in distress, is relieving a night watchman on Kingsway, London, when he sees a figure crawl out of a house and step in a trench. The next morning the murdered body of Captain Pollexfen, a retired sea captain, is found in the trench. The house is called the Corner House and is kept by Adrian Higay, who furnishes lodging to distressed gentlefolk only at 12 cents a night. Philip meets an old friend, Sir Anthony Didring, from whom he wins two hundred and fifty pounds, which relieves his necessities.

He is then summoned to attend the inquest on the captain's body and falls under suspicion. A negro cook furnishes the important information that the dead captain had only two relatives, a brother with whom he quarreled and a daughter named Giralda, on the stage. CHAPTER XI.—(Continued.)

THE modern journalist, at a salary of fifty shillings a week and cab fares, knows the power behind him. And what with police in and out of uniform, and journalists weekday and Sunday, and the general leisured public surging and staring at the ends of the street, the Corner House had the right to call itself fully and strictly invested. Chief and yet most mysterious among the strangers within its gates was a being from Scotland Yard greater than Varcoe; a personage, indeed, than which Scotland Yard could produce none higher; the king of his kind. Policemen did not refer to him by name; they said 'e or 'im in an impressed whisper, with jerks of the head in the direction of the particular room where this formidable being was supposed to be. Few persons saw him; he was simply known to be "on the job." And that he was on the job, that he had deigned to quit his lair in order to come to the job, rendered the job sublime in the eyes of those who could differentiate between jobs. He interviewed Philip; Philip's leading impression of him was that he was a very good listener. He also interviewed Mr. Higay. Shortly after this Mr. Higay took to his bed and sent for a doctor. The situation had become too vast and complicated for Mr. Higay, and he retired defeated if not disgraced, expecting brain fever.

Philip, after what was called breakfast, but what that morning had been little more than a picnic, remained with several other boarders in the basement refectory, and employed his time steadily in refusing to talk either to journalists or to his fellow-lodgers. He wanted to do sundry things that he could not do: to find a situation—he could not even fix his mind on this important matter; to have an exhaustive conversation with John Meredith—John Meredith was not on view; or, in default, to chat with Sir Anthony—he would have difficulty in getting out of the street. It puzzled him how the journalists went to and fro. No one, unless it might have been the criminal himself, was more interested in the Corner House crimes than Philip was at that moment. He seemed to have stepped right into the middle of them; they absorbed him like a dog. They certainly prevented him from even beginning to carve his career.

"Mr. Masters?" he looked around inquiringly.

"Well?" Philip curtly replied.

The commissionaire handed a visiting card to Philip, and the card bore the legend 'The Right Honourable Lord Nasing.'

'His Lordship would like to have the pleasure of an interview with you, sir.'

The genteel lodgers pricked up their ears.

'Who is Lord Nasing?' Philip demanded.

"He is—er—Lord Nasing," the commissionaire explained. "His Lordship told me to say that he thought he could be useful to you."

"Where is he?"

'At his office.'

'Where's that?'

"In Stewart square. I have a cab waiting, sir."

"And can we get out?"

"Yes, sir. Up Little Gardler's alley and through the yard of the Cup and Ball."

Philip saw no reason why he should decline the adventure. It offered him at least an escape from inaction.

"I will come with you," he said.

He felt sure that Lord Nasing was famous for something or other, but he could not recollect what, and he did not care to ask the commissionaire. His ignorance of the latest creations in peerages was deplorable.

Arrived at Stewart square, that humming centre of journalism between Fleet street and the Embankment, the cab stopped in front of the glassy and monumental Brent Building, where three dailies and twenty-nine weeklies and three monthlies had their home. Of the four great journalistic houses in London the Brent Company was not the least important. It was a one-man company. Nicholas Brent, its founder, had been the only son of his father, and he had never taken a partner nor a wife. It showed annual profits of over a quarter of a million, and its dividend increased each year. Its three lower stories were faced with glass, so that all the world might see the operations that went forward within. On the ground floor were the Victory printing machines, which were even then throwing off copies of the first edition (nominally the second) of the Evening Record, at the rate of a hundred and twenty thousand copies an hour. On the first floor were the compositors engaged at linotype machines in setting up the living and influential words of the descriptive reporters and writers on the second floor. These stories were occupied and busy day and night—a symbol and sign of the ceaseless activity of the Brent brain, that sardonic brain which had invented the celebrated newspaper maxim: "We spin you a yarn to-day. We give you the news next week."

The commissionaire, with the courage of an old soldier, plunged himself and Philip straight into the seething heart of the Brent daily battle, and did not leave his charge until, after a lift and a long corridor, he had deposited him at a door marked "Mr. Brent," with the name crossed out and "Lord Nasing" written over it. Philip remembered then who Lord Nasing was. The commissionaire had knocked and received a favorable answer, and Philip entered.

The interior was vast and noble, the caprice of a millionaire who spent the whole of his waking hours in the successful pursuit of pleasure by means of business, and who believed in comfort with splendor. His office was an exact reproduction of Napoleon's council chamber at Fontainebleau, with its ceiling by Boucher, its Beauvais tapestries, and even the famous round table whose top is a single piece of mahogany.

At the round table, which was covered with letters and slip proofs, sat a pale, puffy man of forty-five with the ear-pieces of a telephone strapped round his dark head. Two young women were writing in remote corners of the room.

"No," the man was saying with careful distinctness into the telephone, "Gira[illegible] [illegible] roller, [illegible] donkey, [illegible] Good!" He looked [illegible] "Mr. Masters? Will you sit down a moment. I'm just 'phoning to Paris." He finished what was apparently part of a paragraph for the Paris edition of the

"Of Course, I Understand Your Motives, Lord Nasing," Philip Remarked.

Record and then he rang off, released himself from the ear-pieces and turned to Philip. A messenger had come and gone. The two women silently departed.

"Good morning, Mr. Masters. Won't you take this chair near the table?"

"Thanks," said Philip. "Are you Lord Nasing?"

"I am. You know I've just bought the Daily Courier?"

"I did not," said Philip.

"And yet I have spent twenty thousand in advertising the fact. It just shows that one can never advertise enough. Well, I've bought the Courier, and henceforth it's produced in this building. You are after a situation, aren't you?"

"Yes," said Philip.

"How would you like to come on the staff?" The tones were even, placid.

"But I'm not a journalist."

"[illegible] the better. I want new blood. Journalists always think in grooves."

"I [illegible] write."

"[illegible] not necessary," said Lord Nasing. "I can't either. And look at me. I can hire writers for a couple of pounds a week."

"But what do you want me to do?"

"I want you to go round and get stuff for the Courier."

"What sort of stuff?"

"[illegible] stuff. Interesting stuff. [illegible]"

"[illegible] why do you pick out me?"

"[illegible] various reasons. Chiefly because F[illegible], the special of the Record, has been [illegible] to make nothing of you. His de[illegible] of you, and er—what we kn[illegible] [illegible]"

"A[illegible] the screw?" Philip demanded smiling.

"W[illegible] do you ask?"

Philip, having been thus requested to [illegible] mouth, declared that he ought to [illegible] extremely wide.

"[illegible] pounds a week," he said calmly.

Lord Nasing paused. "I will give it to you. But you know the rules of the house?"

"No," said Philip.

"No notice given or required. I have over four hundred staff contributors and secretaries in this place. Every one can walk out when he pleases and I can shoot 'em out when I please; that's fair, isn't it?"

"Perfectly," said Philip. "Life must be quite interesting here."

Lord Nasing laughed. "It is," he said shortly.

"Of course, I understand your motives," Philip remarked.

"My motives?" Lord Nasing repeated, with a gesture almost threatening.

"Yes," said Philip. "You're going to tell me to work up the Corner House affair. Now it seems to me that, next to the murderer, I know more about it than anybody in London. I'm in it. I'm of it. I've refused to talk to reporters, and the Record is cross with me for my silence. I'm worth money in Fleet street. What you can't get in one way you usually get in another. That's why you succeed, Lord Nasing. You think you've got the most valuable asset in London for a paltry twenty pounds a week."

"And haven't I?"

"Yes," said Philip. "Provided you give me a month's engagement certain."

"Impossible, Mr. Masters. I cannot break the rule of a lifetime."

"As you please," Philip rejoined. "But suppose the mystery was cleared up to-morrow, I reckon I should be shot out to-morrow. And it's not good enough."

Lord Nasing rose.

"I admire you," he said.

"The admiration is mutual," said Philip. "Good morning, my Lord."

"Not at all," said Lord Nasing. "I yield, young man, I yield. But you will sign your articles."

"I will sign everything I write," Philip agreed. "You want me to begin right off, I imagine?"

"Certainly. I shall expect you here to-night at 7 o'clock, with results, including, naturally, your own story in full. If necessary, I mean to issue a special edition of the Courier to-morrow. Tell me, what do you think is the real explanation of this mess that Scotland Yard has got itself into?" Lord Nasing sat down again.

"To my mind," said Philip, "the explanation is perfectly simple. The late Varcoe—"

"You think he's dead?"

"I do. The late Varcoe fancied himself too much. He fancied he was going to do the trick all alone, and he very nearly did, but not quite. Somebody else was just a shade cleverer than he was, and that somebody is the criminal. He told me so. I am pretty sure that he had discovered everything. But he confided in nobody. That was his mistake. Nobody at Scotland Yard was to have a ha'porth of credit but Varcoe. And so, in getting rid of Varcoe, the criminal was just as safe as he was before Varcoe started his inquiries. I suppose there's jealousy at Scotland Yard as there is everywhere. But they'll never admit it."

"Excellent! Excellent!" murmured Lord Nasing. "You go and write that theory up. But, look here, if Varcoe is dead, where is his corpse?"

"I expect it's in the Corner House."

"Do you think you can find it?"

"Who knows?" said Philip. "Hadn't I better be going?"

"Yes," agreed Lord Nasing.

"What about expenses?"

"Carte blanche," said his lordship.

"I assume when you say carte blanche you mean—"

"Carte blanche," his lordship repeated.

"Right," said Philip, getting up. "Well, in addition to carte blanche with the cashier, I shall want a—a tame grammarian and a photographer."

"You mean to take photographs?"

"I mean to show you what my notion of journalism is," said Philip.

He departed with his scrip and the staff (consisting of the photographer and a youth who could write), very joyous in his new profession, and withal gloomy as a man. The thought of Varcoe dead touched his heart; a nameless apprehension concerning John Meredith affrighted him; and the portrait of Giralda was always before his eyes like a fire.

It seemed to him, however, that he had sharpened the knife by which he should recommence the carving of his career.

CHAPTER XII.

The Bank Note.

The police, even aided by the monarch of Scotland Yard, made no useful discovery that day. They had no point from which to begin. If Mr. Varcoe had only given the least and vaguest hint to his assistants, the enquiry perhaps might have been more successful. He had chosen otherwise, however, and he was now paying, if he had not already paid, the penalty of vain glorious pride. As for the journalists, they did no better than the police; but then they were hampered by the police, whereas the police were not hampered by them. Philip, as the newly appointed representative of the Courier, moved with his satellites regally up and down the house. He had conceived a preliminary and extremely comprehensive plan, and he began at once to carry it out, though he did not hope for immediate results. He had forty hours before the next ordinary edition went to press, and if any unusual luck happened to him within twenty hours there would still be time for the special Sunday edition suggested by Lord Nasing. His photographer and his tame grammarian, who was also a stenographer, he regarded as two beautiful new toys.

In the execution of his plan, he knocked at John Meredith's door. The hour was noon.

"Who's there?" cried the wonderful voice of Meredith, and Philip noticed in it a tone of almost excessive alarm.

"It's Masters," Philip replied. "I want to have a talk with you, if you can spare the time."

No reply came and Philip knocked again.

"Did you hear?" he questioned.

"I—I can't talk just now," Meredith replied, and Philip seemed to detect tears in the voice.

"Shall you be in for lunch, may I ask?"

Another pause and then an agitated response.

"I don't think so; I may be."

Philip walked to the head of the stairs, undecided what to do. He had set his mind on an interview with John Meredith, not necessarily for reproduction in the Courier, but for his own enlightenment. The young man's singular demeanor on the previous night, at mention of Captain Pollexfen's brother, had remained in Philip's mind with special clearness. And the matter of the blind presented features of the most extraordinary interest. Moreover he still felt strongly that Meredith was in need of assistance, and he wished to render that assistance.

The Smart Little Odds and Ends that Finish the Coquetry of a Woman's Costume.

THE dainty woman is known by the number and nature of the dainty accessories of her toilet, and this season provides more than the usual number of these trifles, "light as air" perhaps, but, ah, these dainties have their price. But many, many there are, too, that even the lighter purse can buy, and they are necessary to figure up the sum of a woman's smartness.

A woman may be known by her fans. This season the fans have reached a point of perfection in variety, and the woman who likes them may add a bewildering number to her wardrobe without repeating the design or the hazard of one being mistaken for another. Also, if she has preserved the bits of lace, she may have them mounted upon sticks, or if she has kept the tiny sticks of an old-fashioned fan she may send them to a fan hospital in New York and completed with silk or net or lace, or even artificial flowers of her own choosing. The fans are all small, absurdly small, from a man's standpoint, yet an engaged man told the writer he had known his betrothed for two years and it had never occurred to him to fall in love with her until he saw her using "that ridiculous little violet fan of hers" last Summer. Since fans were invented they have been one of the lures of femininity, and no wise woman unwilling to renounce her reign over masculine hearts will be careless of her fan, will ever use the hideous palm leaf or any other substitute for the frail wind wafters of silk and lace. The prettiest fan in the shops is also the costliest. It is of rose point lace mounted on carved ivory sticks, and its price is indeed more, much more, than its weight in gold. Simpler fans are attractive, that of pale green silk, upon which are painted seabirds awing, with a faint background of delicately painted sea moss, being unique. Another design shows a light blue silk fan with seabirds and sea moss effects, and intertwined in the sticks of shining black wood the green foliage and scarlet blossoms of a vine so realistically reproduced as to often be mistaken for an added ornament woven into the fan at the caprice of the wearer. Lilies of the valley, with a background of foliage, are painted upon pink silk, apple blossoms upon black, and against a Roman red silk background are wrought arabesques of seed pearls.

My lady's toilette vagaries are nowhere more striking than in the fashions of her hosiery. Most beautiful and tasteful of all are the hose in pale, tinted silks into the instep of which is set a lace design six inches long and varying from one to three inches in graduated design. A modestly pretty pair are black, with a rosebud conventionalized design introduced in the clocking. Startling, though not startlingly beautiful, yet of considerable vogue, are the colored silk hose which disclose a serpent in many colors embroidered upon the instep, the tail ending at the double tipped toe of the stocking and the head reaching to half way to the knee. The serpent is coiled about a vine, giving it certainly a bizarre aspect. Odd is the embroidered black stocking with chantilly lace set in, not only at the instep, but where clocking would ordinarily be. A double crescent of chantilly, outlined by black embroidery, is the garniture of a pair of light blue silk hose worn by a debutante in Newport last week, with her blue chiffon dancing dress and blue silk pumps.

Jewelry grows more and more bizarre. A shell comb to be worn with a high coiffure is finished with a reversed tiara, that is, the high point and sloping sides of a tiara are reproduced at the top of the back comb, the high point at the middle being chic, particularly for a woman in middle life of stately presence and commanding figure. This reversed tiara appears in solid gold with sets of turquoise or garnets, pearls or diamonds, according to the complexion and purse of the purchaser. Another back comb is broader and simpler, a gold filigree design set with three topazes being its decoration. A curious necklace in keeping with the present liking for Oriental motifs in adornment of the person is a slender gold chain into which are set at intervals triangular pieces of jade, and from which hangs an elaborate pendant, resembling one of the huge earrings worn in grandmother's days, also set heavily with triangles of jade. A dog collar, which every one who can afford it wears in these days of the collarless gown, is of long links of gold attached to five gold circular pieces an inch in diameter set with nine dull stones of any color that pleases the wearer, but surely of Oriental fashion. The design will be copied in silver later in the season. Elastic gold wire in double coils with a hand painted buckle showing a marine view [illegible] girls. A Fifth avenue beauty, of New York, went down the street at a [illegible] walk last week [illegible] of [illegible] the [illegible] in [illegible] Another [illegible] design [illegible] pent in its [illegible] large garnet.

Veils show polka dots [illegible] and [illegible] floral embroidered [illegible] on a [illegible] background, the veil finished [illegible] a pleated edge of lace or a hand-wrought border of a piece with the veil or appliqued upon it. A Real "Comedy of Errors" in Modern Life.

she laffed and said: 'Tell him I'll send an answer in the morning.' "

Neither of these young men reported that another note had been handed to Miss Baya at the same time, or to be correct, that the short, sturdy messenger boy managed to place his missive in her hand first, to be succeeded a second later by that of the taller boy. Miss Baya knew well what those notes contained. The sixth sense of a maid with whom men are in love told her. She received each missive calmly, but noticed that the Kentuckian's letter was placed in her hand first, and she recalled that she had said to her father: "I shall marry the first man who asks me."

The Perilous Mix-Up of the Missives.

She answered the Kentuckian's letter first. The answer was brief. "Yes. Come to see me to-morrow at two. Amy."

To Mr. Sturgeon she wrote: "I am so sorry, but I do not love you in that way. Let us be dear friends always. Regretfully yours, Amy."

It was late and Miss Baya was sleepy. That is the reason that when her drowsy eye at first glance about the inlaid writing desk did not find a blotter she left the letter to dry before she enclosed it in its envelope and addressed it. Oh, gods that preside over the fates of sleepy maids why did ye permit it? The letter to Mr. Sturgeon was folded and placed in an envelope and addressed to the Kentuckian. The letter she had intended for the Kentuckian was placed in an envelope and addressed to Mr. Sturgeon, and next morning both letters were taken to the persons for whom they were not intended. . . .

When at 2 o'clock Mr. Sturgeon, with radiant face, presented himself before Miss Baya and, taking her in his arms, thanked her for "the sweet little note that made him the happiest man alive," she thought quickly and adjusted herself nicely to circumstances and Mr. Sturgeon's embrace. She wept when alone but no one suspected, and the Kentuckian telegraphed his congratulations.

Mr. and Mrs. Sturgeon were happy for two years. Then Mrs. Sturgeon told the "joke" to her dearest friend and the dearest friend told it to another, who told it to another, who "was a cat" and told it to Mr. Sturgeon, and Mr. Sturgeon has sued for divorce.

He has alleged desertion, and Mrs. Sturgeon replies that he was such a bear after he discovered her little blunder that she was obliged to desert him.

The question why did she do such a foolish thing is natural. Why did she not explain the misadventure and avert what must of necessity result only in misery all around? Perhaps not Balzac nor she herself could quite explain the workings of her heart. If she argued to herself that she was in honor bound to live up to the letter she had actually sent to Sturgeon she wilfully deceived herself. For in any court of love it would be adjudged unanimously that to keep an engagement is far worse than to break it if true love does not go with the compact. A wise commentator on the human heart has said "A maid—yes, and a man—acts magnanimously and nobly when he or she disrupts a contract that is found to have been undertaken in mistake. To continue the lie is cowardly and ignoble, and no mistaken or maudlin sentimentality can transpose it into a heroic act of self sacrifice and virtue."

Sunday American-Journal-Examiner Pattern No. 265.

A Dainty Blouse for a Young Girl Easily Made at Home.

FOR a dressy blouse it would be difficult to conceive anything more attractive than this pretty waist of white peau de soie and all-over lace.

The front of the blouse is cut in fanciful outline, disclosing a yoke of the lace, and tucks stitched to yoke depth give a becoming fulness. In the back the tucks extend to the waist line. This very neat blouse may be developed with full length or elbow sleeves as desired. For a girl of fifteen years 2½ yards of material 36 inches wide will be required.

Patterns for this up-to-date blouse have been prepared expressly for the American-Journal-Examiner series and will be mailed to any address for 10 cents in silver or stamps.

The patterns have been cut in three sizes 15, 16 and 17 years. To obtain one of these patterns and full directions for making the blouse, fill in the blank printed below and mail, enclosing 10 cents for each pattern ordered, to

Either or both of the following described beautiful premiums will be given absolutely free to any boy who will do less than an hour's work for us. A POCKET KNIFE containing two large, strong blades—one extra large and one medium-size smaller blade. These blades are made of the very finest tool steel and have superfine cutting edges. Each knife is built solid throughout and is strongly lined with German Silver. The finish has been executed with great care and faithfulness as to detail. Each is fitted with a genuine stag (not imitation) handle. This knife is of the famous "Elgin" brand cutlery, which is absolutely guaranteed by the manufacturer. Any defective knife will be exchanged. The regular price at the stores on this knife is $1.25 to $1.50 each. DEWEY WATCH: New "flat" model, 16 size, high grade nickel case, polished, fully guaranteed, specially patented wind and set, jeweled balance, lever escapement, accurately set. This is without question one of the best watches of its class in the market to-day. Not a toy watch, nor a cheap watch, but something that will give honest, reliable service. Both the above premiums are offered on honor, and will prove just as we say. If you receive any in defective condition, we will promptly exchange them. We would not compromise our reputation by putting out goods that would prove anything but satisfactory. All you need to do to secure either or both of the above beautiful premiums is merely to make a few sales for us—a very few. Nor will you be asked to sell trashy jewelry, unsalable pictures, bluing, or other worthless merchandise. The work, in fact, is so easy that any ambitious, robust, American boy will smile when we tell him of the little we have for him to do in order to get the premiums. In fact, it can all be done in less than sixty minutes. So, write to-day for full particulars, and let us send you one of the above beautiful premiums within the next forty-eight hours. CHAPTER XXVIII

ABOUT LAWYERS

YOU know when detectives in France begin to unravel a mystery the first thing they do is "cherchez la femme," which means seek the woman. There is always a girl somewhere around. Why not? Aren't girls the best companions for nice boys? Of course they are, next to a good dog. Well, I have been very fortunate indeed; I have had the constant companionship of a dog and a girl. That's why I'm a pretty good boy. There's no telling what an awfully mischievous boy I might have been if I hadn't had such gentle associates.

Well, anyhow, I took her picture. I wanted one to keep, and I wanted to give one to my cheerful lunatic. I was anxious to know what he would have to say. Tige took a picture of Mary Jane's dog Nellie, and we all took pictures of each other. I am glad I had that camera that Summer, because I got a lot of snap shots that I never could have gotten again. I got a picture of the lunatic that I wouldn't take anything for. He didn't know I got it or he would be displeased.

He isn't a lunatic any more. They turned him out, so he went into the law business. He doesn't know much about law, but he knows as much as the average lawyer—MORE, pa says, because he doesn't know enough to prolong and prolong and carry to higher courts, etc He doesn't fill a hundred pages when drawing a brief—that's why the judge reads it and gives a decision. In other words our lunatic friend gets results and decisions, so what difference does it make whether he understands law or not?

Besides, what has law to do with justice? If once in a while it happens that the right fellow wins out it isn't the judge's fault, it only proves that he is a poor guesser. A judge has a mighty hard time of it, I tell you. Poor man, he has to listen to oceans of details of things he never heard of before in his life. He is hearing every day of things he never heard of in his life. He is a specialist on law, and naturally don't know anything else.

LAW HAS NO MORE TO DO WITH JUSTICE THAN THEOLOGY HAS TO DO WITH BEING GOOD.

You know I told you that Mary Jane had come to Bayshore with her mamma to visit us. They had been to Europe, but had returned early and decided to spend the balance of the Summer with us.

One day pa arrived at Bayshore with a camera for me. I was simply delighted. I had wanted a camera for a long time, and here it was. I knew all about how to work it, because I had seen cameras before. Tige was as pleased as I was.

We all danced away across the lawn to find something to take a picture of. But what would make a better picture than Mary Jane and her little dog Nellie? So she sat down on the grass with a huge bush for a background, took Nellie in her lap, and I took a picture of them.

A great many people who have seen the picture have asked who she is. But Tige says we must not tell her last name, because then some one might steal her, and what would we do without her? She is our secret. She is the woman in the case.

(To be continued next Sunday.)

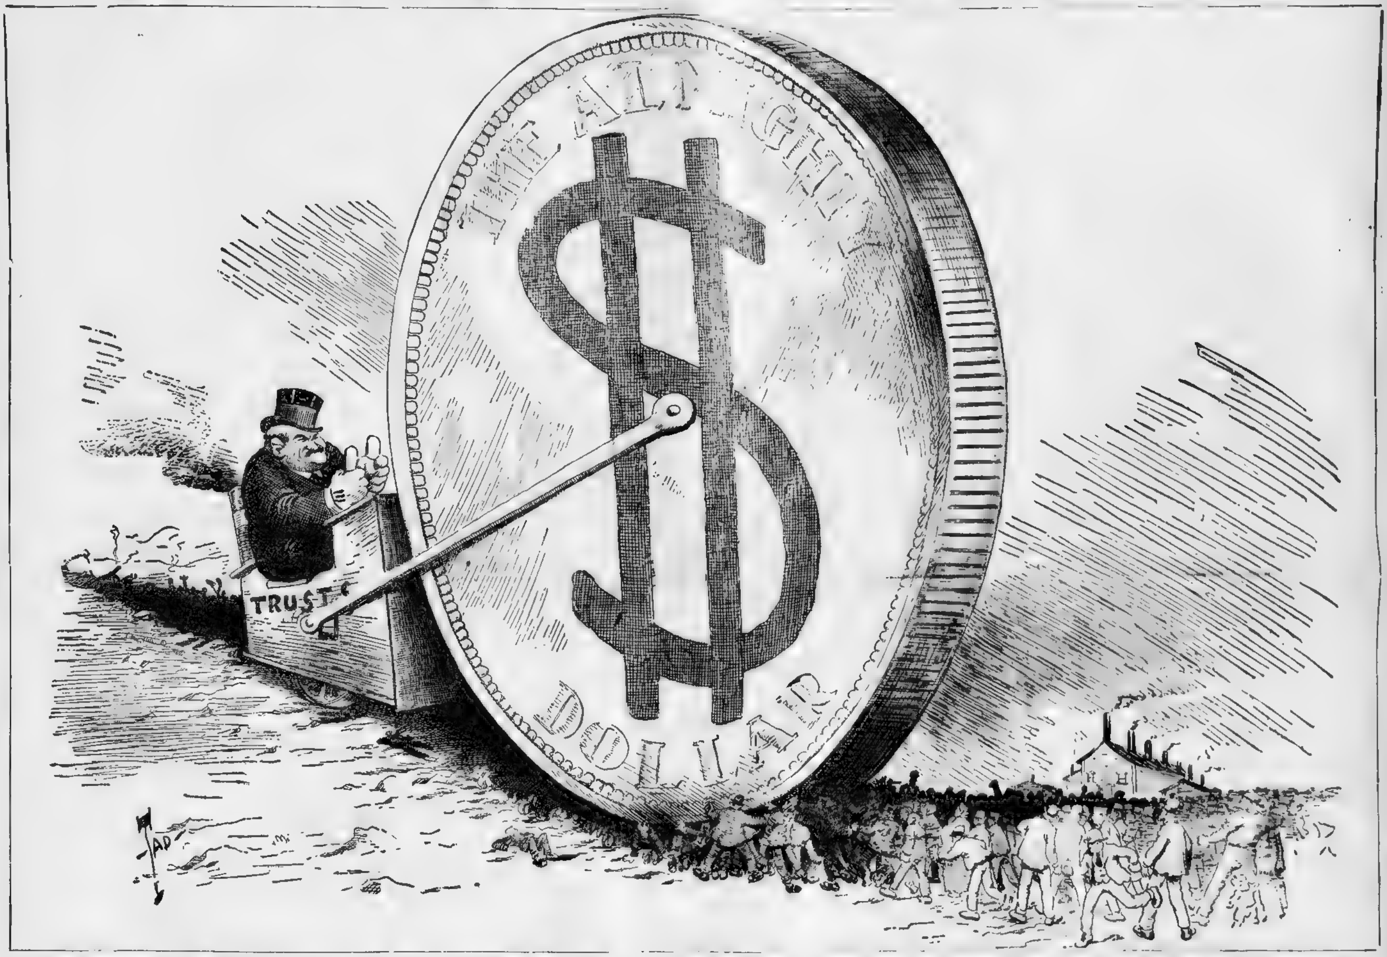
LOTS OF POWER HERE



The Gentleman in the Car has had a long and comfortable trip. He has not met anything that he could not crush. How LONG is his Journey to continue?

TRUST MONEY—organized, powerful and criminal—is the power in this land to-day.

And this picture by Tad, strong and brutal, is a good picture of the constantly growing Trust domination.

It is a curious fact that human beings can get used to almost anything. The story about the eel that got used to being skinned seems hardly an exaggeration, when you consider how men of intelligence accept preposterous conditions, unbelievable injustice.

In times of physical slavery, all kinds of respectability—churches, schools, human beings in general, EVEN THE SLAVES THEMSELVES—looked upon slavery as normal, right or at least inevitable.

The greatest Greek philosopher, Aristotle, said that civilization without slavery was inconceivable.

It is very much the same to-day. There is really no effective protest against the condition which this picture illustrates.

This republic is based on the statement that all men are created equal, that they all have certain rights, etc.

Are the men under the wheel and the man running the machine in this picture EQUALS? The man in the machine is enjoying life and liberty, and he is pursuing happiness ENERGETICALLY. But how about the little men on the ground?

Have THEY a fair chance, can THEY fight with any hope of success against the weight and driving force of the power that is opposed to them?

You may say perhaps that this picture is exaggerated. But perhaps you do not take a clear view of conditions as they exist.

It is true that the average American has something in his stomach. He has a place to sleep and clothes to wear. The same thing was true about the average slave in old days. It was argued that slaves were better off, because they had somebody intelligent to take care of them. That argument, however, did not prevent slaves from running away. It wouldn't persuade the men freed in this country or in Russia to return to slavery.

Just as the slave was entitled to his body and all the wealth it could produce, so the inhabitants of this country ARE ENTITLED TO THE COUNTRY AND ALL THE WEALTH AND COMFORT THAT IT CAN PRODUCE.

Doesn't the man who controls the necessities, who absorbs the growing wealth of a country, actually rule it?

Do not corporations, with their great power, ride over the citizen as though he were of no importance, without influence or rights?

Does not the Railroad Trust destroy thousands of lives deliberately every year, because it does not choose to spend the money to make cars and tracks and railroad crossings safe?

Doesn't it take millions and hundreds of millions, to the very limit of "what the traffic will bear," from the people, and then run over them, overcharge them, and ignore their complaints?

Did not the head of the Coal Trust call the people of the biggest city in the country whining dogs—"a pack of whining dogs" were his exact words? That was his only answer to the complaints of shamefully high prices.

What is the difference between the slave who humbly submitted when he was lashed on the back and the great city with its millions of people that humbly submit when they are slapped in the face?

Every street car line in a big city gives a pretty good imitation in real life of this picture.

In the country the Railroad Trust and other Trusts squeeze the people flat, taking their profits and vitality. They do it slowly, it is true, but they do it surely.

The vilest of characters in the slave days were the slave drivers, those with the whips, who compelled the wretched creatures to obey orders.

The vilest of creatures to-day are the modern slave drivers, the political bosses who take the money of the Trusts, carry their whips and herd the voters to the polls, compelling them to put in office the selected tools of the very Trusts that rob them.

It is ridiculous and pathetic to see millions of human beings calling themselves free [illegible] [illegible] men to pass laws to please the Trusts that make freedom a joke.

It is supremely ridiculous to see grown men marching up and down on election day, yelling themselves hoarse, calling themselves free; to see them divided up into two parties for mock warfare with Trust officials in command of both.

The poor things do not even realize what it means when they see the Republican and Democratic bosses coming together from the window of the same Trust paymaster, carrying the cash that buys legislation or immunity from legislation no matter which side wins.

If you look at the ordinary silver dollar through a microscope you see many millions of little creatures—we call them microbes—lying flat against the surface of the dollar.

When history comes to look through its microscope at the great big American Trust dollar, which is the fly-wheel of power now, a great many millions of little creatures will be found flattened against the surface of THAT dollar. The names of these little microbes will be Jones, Smith, Robinson, etc.

This big, heavy roller of the Trusts has proved its power to flatten out everything in its course. When the operator looks back he sees behind him a smooth, level track—everything knocked flat. If you doubt that, read the career of Mr. Rockefeller and his Standard Oil and see if you can find anybody standing up along the line where HE and his steam roller passed.

In Mr. Rockefeller's hands the document reads, amended:

"Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, yes, but don't pursue happiness in the oil business. If you do, you lose your life, and with it your liberty and the chance to pursue anything."

Another manager of the big Trust roller will tell you: "Pursue happiness all you like, but keep out of the milk business, or I'll crush you."

Another will tell you: "Let leather alone; that belongs to me."

Another will flatten you out if you try to prosper in the rubber business, and so it goes. Whichever way you turn, one of these big wheels is pretty sure to run over you. And about the only thing that the great American pursuer of happiness is allowed to do now is to work as a clerk, build up railroad profits by working on a farm, or find occupation in some little line of business that the Trust men haven't yet had time to organize and exploit.

What the people of this country want is a higher development of the spirit of resentment, of wise and just protest.

And they need especially to unite, to organize themselves on a genuinely American basis FOR THE PURPOSE OF CONTROLLING THEIR GOVERNMENT.

Do you remember that in the old days of antiquity, when the slaves were white or black or brown or any other color, some individual among the rulers suggested that it would be a good idea to have all the slaves dressed alike—that they might be easily recognized.

The idea was tried, but quickly abandoned. For the owners of the slaves said to each other: "Hold on, if we dress all the slaves alike they will recognize each other, realize their enormous NUMBERS AND POWER, and we shan't last long."

It would be a good thing if the small men, those that are known to the Trust owners as "the joke of the Declaration of Independence," could arrange to identify each other in some way. They did it in New York City last Fall, when they cast a plurality of the votes against the Trust bosses.

The best possible distinguishing mark for the man who is tired of the rule of the almighty organized dollar is THE BALLOT.

The Trusts and those that own them and work for them realize perfectly well that the people can only be ruled BY DIVISION AND IGNORANCE.

The moment they get together, the moment they realize conditions, the moment they wake up to the fact that eighty millions of them are working and saving and worrying for the man driving this big dollar wheel, there will be a change.

The wheel will be tipped over, the gentleman with the stovepipe hat will be hustled out of his peaceful frame of mind, and real popular government, THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE, TAKEN SERIOUSLY, will be the rule of them then.

THE·LAND·OF WILLIAM·THE·SILENT

BY ELLA+WHEELER+WILCOX

Copyright, 1906, by American Journal Examiner.

The Hague, Holland.

IT seems to an observer that every woman in Holland save the Queen is the mother of at least two or three children.

If no heir comes through Queen Wilhelmina, the throne goes to some distant relative, some German princeling, it is whispered, and there are black looks whenever the whisper is heard; for as the purring cat loves the aggressive dog, so Holland loves Germany.

It is no wonder the Hollanders adore Queen Wilhelmina and desire her to perpetuate the royal race.

She is the only one left to continue the line which sprang from that glorious man, "William the Silent," of Holland, to whom the country owes its freedom from Spain.

I wish every mother in America would give her young sons the story of this great and good man to read. It is more exciting than any novel ever written, and more inspiring.

It can be found complete in Motley's History of the Dutch Republic.

William the Silent (who despite his title was a great orator and most eloquent when moved to speech) lived in an age of cruelty, greed and selfishness. Yet he was kind, unmercenary and unselfish.

He lived among men who were seeking for personal advancement, yet he refused position and power, when it would have been wise to accept it.

He lived in an age of monstrous bigotry, when the torture rack, the prison and the stake awaited those who dared think for themselves; yet he was as broad as the universe in his charity toward other faiths than his own.

He lived when religion was a cloak under which jealousy and tyranny carried its poniard to stab an enemy, yet he was deeply, sincerely and profoundly religious, loving God with all his heart, and his neighbor as himself.

Born of noble family, reared in courts, and accustomed to every luxury and refinement of that age of luxury (the sixteenth century), he yet endured hardship, poverty and discomfort for years in order to free his people from the awful tyranny of Spain.

He succeeded in his herculean effort, and was killed by an assassin, just as the freedom of the Holland States was assured.

There was much in the character of our Lincoln that resembled the character of William the Silent; and there was a similar tragedy at a similar climax of the two lives. But the Holland hero faced far greater difficulties and was more utterly alone in his greatness of character than Lincoln.

Motley says of him: "His most prominent quality was his piety. From his trust in God he ever derived support in the darkest hours, looked danger in the face with a constant smile and endured incessant labors and trials with a serenity more than human.

"While a convert to the reformed religion, he was ready to extend freedom to others to worship as they would. No man felt more than he that the persecuted reformer who in turn became a bigot, was doubly odious."

His firmness was as great as his piety. When only twenty-four years of age he resolved to devote his life to driving the Inquisition from Holland and to establishing the liberty of his country. He arrived at his goal, in the face of the powerful opposition of Spain, then in the height of her glory. When he died "the little children wept in the streets."

His direct line became extinct with his grandson; but Queen Wilhelmina is the last of his blood, through her descent from a cousin. Remote as that relationship may seem to us in America, it is one to be reverenced and to wish to perpetuate in Holland.

The stories of the unhappiness of the Queen in her marriage are absolutely denied by every Hollander. The vice-secretary of the American Embassy also declared them utterly without foundation, to his personal knowledge.

There is one curious thing which I have noticed in Holland and Belgium, and for which I would like an explanation.

That is, the remarkable frequency of curvature of the spine among the inhabitants. I have counted as many as six humped backs in a single promenade, and no day passes that I do not see at least that number of these unfortunates. It seems, too, more prevalent among men than women.

I have wondered if the very early age at which young boys begin smoking here can account for it. Small boys, not over six or seven years of age, are constantly seen in these countries smoking, not cigarettes, but cigars.

The young men are, as a rule, of low stature, which is another result (so physicians tell us) of early smoking. Mentally, physically or morally the boy who begins smoking before he attains his growth is injured.

Meantime there is a noticeable absence of eyeglasses in Holland. In a company of twenty it is unusual to see two young people wearing glasses, and I have seen but three children in my whole month here so disfigured.

In fact, the only evidence of conditions which induce physical maladies observable to a traveller in Holland is this large percentage of people afflicted with spinal curvature observable in the streets.

I wish some statistician would give exact figures in this matter. It would be interesting to know if the malady really prevails to the extent it seems to me, after a month's observation, and if so, why?

A Short Cut to Fame (The Song Writer) By William F. Kirk

Copyright, 1906, by American Journal Examiner.

"BY the way," said the Song Writer, "have you ever thought what a great opening there is for a pawnshop song?"

"I have not," I confessed. "I have often noticed that, no matter how small the community, there is always a great opening for a pawnshop, but so far as a ballad is concerned, that's different."

"Well," said the Song Writer, "I have framed up a new and touching piece of work—a lyric that will live longer than your rich old relative."

I knew it was coming, but I was not prepared for the stream of eloquence with which the Song Writer ushered it in.

"This ballad," he declared, "is so touching that it thrusts its sinewy bars into the heartstrings and yanks them hither and yon. It is a simple little piece of verse, but like all simple poems it makes its point without any beating around the bush. As Vincent Bryan remarked when I met him on Forty-second street the other night, it has the quality of true greatness, the quality that has made kings tremble on their thrones, reduced monarchies to ashes, and levelled empires to the pavement. It is a song that will appeal with equal force to the millionaire in his club and the shipping clerk in his favorite buffet. It will touch you as you were never touched before, not even by your best friend. It will make your faith in mankind tremble and dissolve to naught, and yet its beautiful lines will somehow soothe your inner consciousness, telling you in measured accents set to sweetest music that the love of a good woman is transcendental. It will——"

"The guilty husband shuddered."

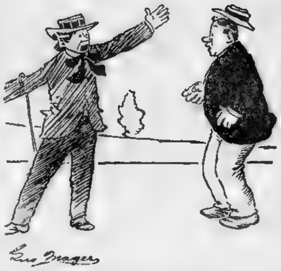
"For Heaven's sake," I gasped, "read it to me now."

The Song Writer cleared his throat and declaimed:

The Unhappy Wedding.

I.

A WOMAN choked with frequent sobs was talking to her hubby,
Who had for weeks been treating her in a manner not quite clubby
"It's plain enough to me," she said, "that something must be did;
You haven't treated me just right since you and me was wed.
You give me my allowance every Monday, I admit,
But by the following Thursday you take every cent of it."



"The quality that has made kings tremble on their thrones."

The husband raised his haughty head and muttered "Darling May——"
But ere he spieled another line, this sentence she did say:

CHORUS.

"I'VE been a loving wife to you, as everybody knows,
I've lived on delicatessen grub and haven't seen no shows;
At first I tried to bear it, though it was a bitter cup,
But you've pawned my dress shields, dearest, and we might as well break up!"

II.

THE guilty husband shuddered, for he knew it was the truth,
And tried to bring her memory back to happy days of youth.
But it was all of no avail; his wife was not appeased—
A wife who's lost her dress shields isn't very easy pleased.
She started a divorce suit, showing she was independent;
She made herself the plaintiff and her husband the defendant.
The Court decreed that she should be a solitary frau,
And her husband's pawning neckties to pay alimony now.

CHORUS: "I've been a loving," etc.

Copyright, 1906, by American Journal Examiner.

"DE odder night," said Mirandy, "Br'er Jenkins was at my house, an' he was expostulatin' 'bout dem two widders whut de papers been tellin' 'bout, dat run de Marriage Trust, an dat raked in money comin' an' goin' from de men dat wanted to tie up wid 'em.

"As near as I could make out de tale hit seemed dat dey lived in a mighty fine house, an' dat dey would advertise in de papers dat dey was mighty lonesome, an' needed somebody to love an' help 'em spend deir income, an' dat when a man thought dat he come up to de specifications he would call on 'em to git de place, an' all dat dey would have to do would be to sorter wave dey hands at him, an' he would run right out an' buy 'em diamond rings an' lockets to wear his picture in, an' turn over his pocketbook to 'em, an' set down to wait for de wedding day—whut never come.

"'Huh,' says I, 'dat don't s'prise me none. I could a told you befo' now dat widders is de most dangerousest n[illegible] of people.'

"'Widders suttinly is got winnin' ways,' 'spon's Br'er Jenkins, an' I knowed dat he was a-thinkin' 'bout dat slim, yaller snake, Samanthy Su, whut was a-makin' sheep's eyes at him through her weepers—an' him a married man wid triplets, too.

"'Dey got de conjur, dey is,' I 'sclaims.

"'Yes,' goes on Br'er Jenkins widout noticin' whut I say, caze he didn't want to hear hit, 'widders shorely does appeal to a man's sympathy an' make him feel lak he wants to comfort 'em. And wese got Schripchar for hit. De Good Book commands us to wipe away de tears from the widders' eyes.'

"'Well,' 'spon's I, 'hit's a mighty resky job, an' I ain't never see any man yit dat ondertook hit dat got off wid a whole skin. A widder ginerally dries her eyes on her second marriage certificate.'

"'Dat's de true word,' put in Sis Elviry, who done dropped in to borry a little sugar and a pinch of bakin' powder; 'dat's de true word. When a woman nails one of dem black pirate flags to de back of her bunnit an' starts to cruisin' roun' lookin' for a comforter a man's a goner onless he takes to de tall timber.'

"'I wisht,' says Ma'y Jane, whut has been listenin' to de conversation, 'dat I had been bawn a widder wid one chile.'

"'How so?' axes Br'er Jenkins.

"'Becaze,' 'spon's Ma'y Jane, 'hit's de softest snap goin'. Hit's mo' dan dat. Bein' a widder is a graft.'

"'Widderhood,' says I, 'is a state full of peace, an' ca'm, an' inshorance money to lots of women dat has been used to puttin' up wid a cantankerous man dat scrimped 'em on de housekeepin', an' dat's de reason dat so many ladies dat has los' deir partners wears sech a reconciled look. De fus time dat a woman ever does as she pleases, an' spends whut money she need's, is when she is settlin' up de will of de late onlamented. An' as for me, I don't begrudge her none of de fun she gits out of freedom.'

"'Dere's one curis peculiarity about widders dat I never could onderstand,' says Ma'y Jane, 'an' dat is dis—how is hit dat a woman dat has lived to be forty years old an' has never married ain't got no mo' chanst to catch a husband dan she has to grow angel wings, whilst ef a woman is lef' a widder at forty she kin marry again, ef she wants to, befo' de grass is green on her husband's grave?

"'Yit de ole maid of forty may be jes as good lookin', an' peart, an' spry an' have des as much money tucked away in de savin' bank as de young widder of forty. Hit shorely does look lak de widders is got de hand of de Lawd wid 'em.'

"'Shoo,' 'sclaims I, 'de reason of dat is des as plain as de nose on yo' face. A widder can marry when a ole maid can't becaze in de fus place a man is always got to have some odder man back his jedgment up about a woman, an,' in de secon' place, becaze she onderstands her business, an', in all de odder places, becaze she knows men. An' dere's a heap in de fus' of dese reasons an' de balance in de odders.

"'Yassum, dat's so. A man is always kinder skeered to admire a woman onless some odder man has writ O. K. opposite her name. You never see a gal have one beau, is you? Nawm, dat's so. You didn't. Either de men is a-tumblin' over each odder at her do' or else she is a-settin' on de steps alone a-suckin' her thum an' wonderin' why dey all passes her by for a little, runty, squint-eyed gal down de street. An' de men don't know, either. But where one goes de odders follows, lak a passel of sheep.

"'An' hit's de same way about widders. Des de fac' dat some man thought well enough of her to marry her has put her in de gilt-edged class of desirable articles, whilst de ole maid, not havin' married, is de reason she ain't goin' to marry. Hit's de difference between de secon'-hand auction, where you runs up somethin' dat don't suit you, maybe, becaze odder folks wants it, an' de remnant counter, where you passes by de thing dat mought be jest what you need becaze ev'ybody else has passed hit by.

"'But de main thing why de widder weeds a wide row wid de man an' marries all around de gals is becaze she knows de ropes. You des watch 'em. When a gal wants to charm a man she tries to look pretty, an' she talks an' laughs an' rolls her eyes, an' does all de runnin' herself, but when a widder gits her eye on a man she des lays low, an' makes him think dat he is chasin' her into de yearth. She don't try to show off how smart she is befo' him. She lets him show off how strong an' wise an' wonderful he is befo' her.

"'An' she don't laugh. My Lawd, when I hears one of dese heah gals wid a high-pitched voice a-gigglin' lak a steam horn I feels lak chokin' her for her own good. Men don't like a woman dat laughs. Dey's always a-feared dat she is laughin' at dem. Dey likes cheerful smilers, an' dat's whar a widder gits in her work. She hands out a sort of tender, soft, gentle, appreciatin' smile dat makes a man feel lak he is a missionary an' a boss joker to boot, to have chirked her up dat much, an' hit's sorter restful after de screechin' gals, an befo' he knows hit he's done offered to support dat smile de balance of his life.

"'Den de young gal, whut ain't got no experience of men, is always a-takin' a man around somewhere dat hit costs money to go and dat he don't want to go to, nohow, whilst de widder, who ain't forgot de things dat begun with a D dat her husband used to say when she drug him around of nights wid her to the church sociable an' de lecture for de benefit of de heathen, is done cut her wisdom teeth on dat subject. She stays at home, an' when a man draps in to pass de time of day wid her she fetches out de ham sandwiches an' chases de can around de corner for beer.

"'An' she don't talk none 'bout dem high-falutin' soul things.' Nawm, dat she don't. She knows dat a man's soul is in his stomach, an' she prognosticates 'bout home bein' a woman's sphere, an' how she dotes on cookin', and has got a mighty light touch in makin' biskits, but hit don't hardly seem worth while to make up none when dere ain't no men round to eat 'em.

"'An' my chile,' says I, solemn lak to Ma'y Jane, 'take dis from yo' ma—when a man goes courtin', dem dat casts angel foods upon de water has hit return to 'em in de shape of a husband befo' many days, lak de promise is in de Scripture.

"'Las' but not leas,' a widder is got de advantage over a gal in bein' able to weep. A gal can't cry in public widout excitin' suspicion, but a widder is got a ready-made excuse for burstin' into tears at a minnit's notice, an' wharever hit will come in handiest an' do de mos' good.

"Dat's enough of itself to account for widders gettin' de pink of de beau crop, for a man can't see a good lookin' woman cryin' widout feeling lak offerin' his shoulder for a handkerchief, an' calling her a pore little thing, an' when he gits dat far, de widder has got him. Yassum, tears is a mighty useful thing. I specs dat more men has been floated into matermoney by de salt water route dan ever clumb over de fence, or busted down de wall to git into hit.'

"'Mos' of de widders dat I knows,' says Ma'y Jane, 'has got a mighty cheerful expression, an' considering dat dey didn't have sech a good time wid deir fust husbands, I wonder dat dey is so easy to persuade to try matermony over again. Looks to me lak hit was a place to let well enough alone.'

"'Well,' says I, 'hit's kinder lonesome bein' a widder. When you is used to argifyin' wid a husband life is sorter flat wid nobody to answer you back, an' give you any back talk. Besides, hit's handy to have a man around de house, specially 'bout the fus of de month when de bills come in.'"

"Men don't like a woman dat laughs. Dey's alway a-feared dat she is laughin' at dem."

“HOPE for the Ambitious Future Makes Possible the Drudgery of WORK” THAIS LAWTON

Many Tears and Much Worry in Rehearsal of New Plays

By Eleanor Ames.

THE imaginative and romantic bread and butter miss, who has formed her own ideas about those marvellous persons known in theatrical parlance as "leading ladies," and who has drawn mental pictures of that mysterious realm known as "behind the scenes," would be brought to the verge of tears with disappointment if taken to call upon Miss Thais Lawton, in her dressing room at the Castle Square Theatre.

Indeed, to one to whom the theatre means little that is new and still less that is mysterious, Miss Lawton comes as something of a revelation.

That she is a remarkable young woman goes without saying, when you realize that she is not yet twenty-four years old and has been a leading woman for six years.

But she is also puzzling and not a little contradictory. It is almost as though she had a dual personality, two Thais Lawtons, as it were. One is the stage Thais, an actress to her finger tips, every nerve and fibre of her being, every glance of her eye, every turn of her head, every sound of her voice.

See Thais Lawton act in any one of the many, many roles her generous repertoire contains, and you have the instinctive feeling that here is a young woman who was a predestined actress, and that it would be wrong, absurd and useless for her to be anything else. Her art is really so unusual that it seems to be woven into her being.

But there is another Thais Lawton, the girl whom you meet off the stage, the simple, unaffected, natural, fresh, unspoiled young creature, who seems an incongruous figure in the dingy little dressing room, where I found her studying "Gismonda."

All Her Roles Are New

There is nothing which suggests the atmosphere of the theatre about Thais Lawton in real life.

Almost always there is some indefinable something which clings to a theatrical personage, which if not conclusive, is enough to make you wonder. But if you saw Thais Lawton on the street, in the shops, in a drawing room, in a restaurant, you would never dream of associating her with anything theatrical.

You would take her for a charming well-bred, genuine young woman, who might be a college girl, or a society belle, or perhaps just the tenderly cared for daughter of some protecting home circle, who has never bothered her head about a career, and who will do just what her mother and grandmother did before her, leave her father's home for the one her husband makes for her.

Thais Lawton was not in the cast at the Castle Square Theatre last week, because of the necessity for time to study the demanding role of "Gismonda." Every part that she has played since coming to Boston has been quite new.

"You would think that after four years in stock companies in San Francisco, I would find some roles here that I had played before, wouldn't you?" said Miss Lawton, "but I think we must have been playing the same things out there that they were playing here, for so far I have not found a familiar play."

She sat in a half worn upholstered armchair, which came up comfortably high above her head and made an effective setting for the interesting young figure it held.

Thais Lawton is not a beautiful girl. Indeed, I do not believe that the average man or woman trained to rate at surface values would even call her pretty. She is tall, five feet seven or eight, I should judge, and broad-shouldered, generously framed, with the litheness and suppleness which is the inherent right of the well-developed, healthy young woman of modern times, who knows the glory of freedom and fresh air.

She wore, when Mr. Burgess sketched her, a tan cloth suit, the skirt falling in long, clinging lines, from a white leather belt, the Eton coat having touches of blue in the revers, opening over an embroidered mulle waist.

The soft, glossy brown hair was drawn back in a loose pompadour, held by wide combs, and tied low in the neck in a girlish fashion with a broad black bow.

About her throat Miss Lawton wore a tiny chain, with a simple green enamel and pearl pendant, and on her taper fingers were three or four rings, two diamonds, unpretentious as to size, but flawless in purity, and some quaint semi-precious stones in unique settings.

Was Never Stagestruck

Thais Lawton's face upon close study is remarkable. It combines the fresh innocence of youth with a mental maturity which is beyond her years.

Her dark, almond-shaped eyes, her perfect exquisite white t[illegible] and the sweet expression of her curving red lips, make her most attractive, with an attractiveness which goes beyond the vagueness of the term "pretty." Strength, depth of character, poise, ambition, determination—you read the qualities so plainly in the face and voice and attitude of this young woman.

"I am a victim of circumstances," says Thais Lawton, when you ask for the reason of her choice of a profession. "I was never stage struck. I never knew much about the theatre. I never had seen many plays. I was studying hard to win a diploma in the high school in my home town of Louisville, Kentucky, and taking piano lessons besides, because my mother and father had great hopes that I would become a musician of note." She laughed a little laugh of reminiscence.

"Poor dears! They had such ambition for me in a musical way, and I really have some ability and enjoyed the study. I wonder sometimes if I could have become quite famous?"

Apparently she was puzzling it out in her own mind.

"If you had succeeded as well in music as you have in your theatrical career, you might well have been satisfied," I remarked.

"No, I should not," she announced with sincere decision. "I have only begun to succeed now. I am still in the drudgery of it all. I have very great ambitions. Perhaps they are too great, but I shall never be content until I have gratified some of them.

"But——" she interrupted herself. "You asked me about my becoming an actress.

"When I was in school I studied Shakespeare very earnestly. It was in the literature course anyway, and then I [illegible] I used to love to read the plays [illegible] that is how I started.

"I [illegible] one time in public, and the manager [illegible] of a Louisville theatre made me [illegible] offer. I didn't even think of taking it then. I had another year in school and at that time I hadn't thought of doing anything to earn my living. About a year later reverses came. Then I remembered the offer of the [illegible]. He had remembered me, too.

Likes Boston "Oh, So Much!"

"He [illegible] cast me out. Galatea was my first [illegible] Juliet my second. Imagine [illegible] bravery of youth!

"Then [illegible]oler & Co. heard of me and gave [illegible] chance in New York. I was leading [illegible] in for James O'Neil, and then [illegible] in 'Lost River.' After that I [illegible] chance to go to San Francisco. I went to the Frawley Stock Company [illegible] played leads with Wilton L[illegible] and I remained on the coast [illegible] leads at the Alcazar and the [illegible] and the Belasco in Los Angeles. And then I came to Boston."

"And [illegible] this?"

She [illegible] her head.

"I [illegible] to make a very great success here," she said. "I like Boston—oh, so much [illegible] than New York!"

[illegible] I tell you that Thais Lawton [illegible] different from any other actress you [illegible] know?

[illegible], you would like to be a great [illegible]," I suggested, "like——"

"[illegible] Marlowe or Mrs. Fiske," she [illegible]. "I think they are our greatest American actresses, though, [illegible] I have had so little time to see the various actresses, perhaps I should not talk so authoritatively. But, honestly, I do not know that my ambition centres on being a star. It is simply to be a success. I would not care to play one part year after year. I don't believe that I could do it well. But I [illegible]ke the chance to do more with [illegible] than the one week bill in stock [illegible]

[illegible]d like a new and interesting part [illegible] six weeks. In that way I could [illegible] time enough to study as I ought [illegible]

"Speaking of study, I wonder how many of the people who go to the Castle Square Theatre week after week have any adequate idea of the amount of study required to give the subscribers [illegible] change.

"Twelve performances a week, a new role always being learned, a new play always to be rehearsed. Monday the part [illegible] Thursday, Friday and Saturday the play is rehearsed. Monday [illegible] and another one [illegible]

"Each new p[illegible] the same effect upon me as though it were the first I ever saw," [illegible] Miss Lawton. "I cry over it, worry over it and study every moment [illegible] eating, on the car, in cabs, while the dressmaker is fitting me. And by Friday I usually have it [illegible] perfect. Then I don't look at it again. I just play it at rehearsals.

"You hear people in our life say they never worry, but I don't believe them. Why, if you have any temperament at all you're bound to worry. People without temperament, of course, why, they have [illegible] and people who have no [illegible] are lost. It seems to me. I don't [illegible] what use they are."

Mother Her Companion

Just at present Miss Lawton and her mother, who is her constant companion, are house hunting.

It is their plan to find apartments near enough to the theatre so Miss Lawton can spend as much time as possible between rehearsals and performances in her home.

As soon as they are settled she is going to buy a saddle horse, for riding is the one diversion she has clung [illegible]

[illegible]

"And marriage [illegible]

"Every girl should marry the right man if he comes [illegible]," she declared, "but [illegible] an actress [illegible] to marry?" she inquired [illegible]

SOCIETY REVELS IN THE HILLS, CITY HOMES ARE DESERTED

BY A SOCIETY WOMAN

RARELY has the "hunter's moon" beamed down upon a more brilliant season in the hills than that which is now in progress.

If our tastes and tendencies continue their English bent, and our craze for country life continues, it seems only a question of time when "abandoned homes" in Boston's Back Bay and other fashionable districts will be the result

The automobile, which is creating a revolution in modern social life, is blamed for the forty thousand deserted mansions in the aristocratic sections of London

Here, as it is there, people in the fashionable world need scarcely keep up a town house all the year round. For the few brief weeks of the season when engagements crowd upon the heels of each other, rooms at a hotel or a flat suffice for the home needs, and a friend's house, or hotels and fashionable restaurants, can be used for entertaining

Boston Girl Touring the Pyrenees

TO the call of the far-away, scores of Boston's exclusives continue to respond. Among its most ardent motorists, many of whom are already looking wistfully at moon and stars, and sighing because there are no more worlds to conquer or traverse with the "magic machine," is Miss Catherine Codman of Westwood, who is now touring the Pyrenees. With her are Mr. and Mrs. Desire Despradelle, who spent the Summer at Trouville France

Miss Codman took her own luxuriously-equipped car with her from America, and spent the Summer motoring on the continent. Before returning to Boston the party, after spending some time in Biarritz, will go to Paris.

Boston Women to Join in the Hunts

MISS HELOISE MEYER, Miss Durand, Mrs. Tom Pierce and Mrs. J. De Forest Danielson are among the daring horsewomen interested in what may prove to be the sensational feature of the Berkshire Hunt a little later—the run for a live fox over in the Tyringham Valley, on which occasion Mr. and Mrs. Robb de P. Tytus will serve an elaborate luncheon They are also to give a large hunt breakfast October 20.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Frothingham are planning to entertain on a royal scale the Berkshire Hunt Club at breakfast October 13 at Overlea, their beautiful country estate

The hunting event of the Fall the event par excellence of all the field trials held in the East, will be the annual field trials of the Brunswick Foxhound Club, at Barre, during the week beginning Monday, October 8.

Autumn Pageant of Motor Cars

GAY parties of the sun-burned Smart Set lead in the Autumn pageant of motor cars now rallying in the mountains.

Harry Lehr, in a straw hat and a fur overcoat, was seen last Tuesday piloting a party to the White Mountains. The party included such animated members as Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish and Mrs. Natalie Schenck Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Dyer, Jr., Max Miller, M. DesPortes, the French Minister, and others.

Boston is well represented by motor tourists in this alluring region, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Mitchell being of the number Others who are touring the White Mountains and who are among Brookline's confirmed "motor-maniacs" are Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hood, Mr. and Mrs. A. Winsor Weld, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Webster, Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery Rollins and the Edwin S. Websters, all of Chestnut Hill.

The Alfred Codmans, who "did" this section of the country earlier in the season, have spent most of the Summer in their touring car, one of the largest and finest there is in America. It seats eight people, and Mr. and Mrs. Codman (Lydia Eliot) are still taking long trips with a full complement of guests—proving to their satisfaction that a "home" is no longer necessary for entertaining successfully.

Congratulations to the Wadsworths

ON its ceaseless rounds the mythical bird calls for congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. W. Austin Wadsworth of Beacon street and Genesee, N. Y., who are overjoyed at the arrival of an heir to the House of Wadsworth. Mrs. Wadsworth was Miss Elizabeth Perkins and a niece of Mrs. Martin Brimmer

Rev. Leonard K. Storrs, D. D., of Brookline, who is in England on the happy mission of christening his grandson, born to Mr and Mrs. Arthur Bedwell of London, will return home early in October

The busy bird is hovering over the beautiful country home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Haydock Hallowell in Medford. Mrs. Hallowell was Rebecca Jackson, and her sister is Mrs. George C. Lee, Jr. The Hallowell-Jackson nuptials at Trinity Church four years ago were celebrated with great eclat. Miss Alice Roosevelt was among the guests, and it was her first appearance here as the President's daughter

Smart Set Leaders at Hot Springs

AMONG the ultra-smart ones of the Hub already at Virginia Springs are Mr. and Mrs. George H. Mifflin of Marlboro street and Nahant.

Mr. and Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, Jr., (Naneen Mitchell), have returned from the Springs and are at Manchester with the Walter Mitchells.

Mrs. Arthur Hunnewell of Dartmouth street and Wellesley is at the Springs for an indefinite stay. Franklin Beebe of the Somerset Club is also there.

Hub Bridesmaid at Capital Wedding

FASHIONABLE weddings in Washington or elsewhere are no longer considered complete without at least one bridesmaid from the Hub, and the wedding party which will attend Miss Carolyn Postlewaite of the Capital City and Henry Ives Cobb, Jr., at their marriage, Oct. 3, will include Miss Constance Bacon of this city and Lenox, who is ever ready to respond to the endless social demands which fall to her lot.

Mrs. Philip Dexter Recovering

MRS. PHILIP DEXTER, who is one of the most expert horsewomen in the exclusive Myopia Hunt Club at Hamilton, and who is chairman of the ladies' entertainment committee, is recovering from the effects of an operation for appendicitis, and hosts of friends are eager to welcome her back to the social functions to which she unfailingly contributes so much of charm and life.

Mr. and Mrs. Sheahan will pass their honeymoon in New York and at other points.

Medway

Medway, Sept. 22.—Mr. and Mrs. Luke Day, of Roxbury, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. O'Donnell.

Mrs. Samuel G. Clark is visiting in Cornish, Me.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bartlett, Wednesday afternoon, their daughter, Miss Florence, was married to Eugene Ware, of Wrentham, by Rev. Frank Russell, pastor of the Baptist Church. The bridesmaid was Miss Florence Proctor, of Wrentham, and the best man Amos Bartlett, a cousin of the bride. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Ware left for a wedding trip in Maine

Franklin

Franklin, Sept 22.—At the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Walter M Fisher, Wednesday evening, their daughter, Miss Mattie, was married to Walter S. Southwiel, the Rev. John S. Reed officiating. The bride was attired in white embroidered silk. Miss Metcalf played the Lohengrin march. The ringbearer was Charles Dickson and the flower girl Miss Johnson. Mr and Mrs. Fisher assisted in receiving. Later Mr and Mrs Southwiel slipped away in an automobile on a two weeks' honeymoon.

Mrs. T. M. Turner is entertaining Mr and Mrs. Edwin Holbrook of Washington, D. C.

Miss Ada F. Smith has returned to her studies at Tufts College.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Borerch have been visiting in Pittsfield.

Bath

Bath, Me., Sept. 22.—Miss Lina C. Andrews leaves the first of October for Boston to resume her studies at Miss Dellafield's school for girls. The Misses Madelyn Clifford and Anna Perry will attend Mt. Ida school at Newton, Mass., this year.

Miss Annie E Evans of Malden, Mass has been passing the week here as a guest of Mrs. Harry C. Webber of Winnegance.

One of the prominent society events of the week was a brilliant dance at the Kennebec Yacht Club, given last evening by the young ladies composing the Merritt Island Club.

On Monday evening Mr. and Mrs. George B. Moody entertained friends in honor of their guest, Leonard Norseworty of New York, formerly of Bath

Mr and Mrs Frederick E. Drake of this city and Miss Grace Plummer of Philadelphia have been passing the week in Montreal

AUTUMN GIRL NOW COMES PROUDLY TO HER TRIUMPHS

In Motor Chase, on Links and Tennis Courts She Wields Her Way to Victory.

CROWNED queen of all others, the "Autumn girl" comes dancing joyously before us as the drama of seasons glides on to its gorgeous climax.

To hail her glad coming, Dame Nature begins to unfurl her flaming banners and to light like fiery torches all the trees. Garbed in the modish Fall plaids and the warm hues now in fashion, the Autumn girl fits harmoniously into the gay carnival of color now flashing into view.

She is a joyous creature, all life and motion, and continually on the wing, for the wine of Autumn air is in her veins. She is a new goddess of the chase, who annihilates blue distances in her motor car, who canters countless miles through the country on her faithful horse, and who with golf stick and tennis racquet wields her way to victory in these now reviving sports.

Among the fairest victims of "motormania" is Dorothy Allen, one of the handsomest of the Autumn brides-to-be, and whose recent return from Europe was hailed with delight by her Vincent Club sisters

Within six weeks she will marry Chandler Hovey, who lives with his sister, Mrs. Edwin Sibley Webster of Chestnut Hill The wedding will not be large and will be following by a motoring honeymoon trip abroad.

Pretty Phyllis Robbins, who has also just returned from abroad, is an intrepid little horsewoman and rides, as she does everything else, with utmost skill She is always a star performer in the Vincent Club shows

Fannie Osgood and Ruth Lawrence, the latter a daughter of Bishop Lawrence, and recently returned from abroad, help, with scores of others, to keep the golf links and tennis courts gay as they should be these Autumn days

NEWPORT SOCIETY GIRLS IN A PHYSICAL CULTURE CLASS

Newport, Sept. 22.—It was left for a Boston woman, Mrs. Lucia Gale Barber, to form perhaps the most exclusive class in physical culture that has been formed in Newport for many years. The membership includes Miss Blanche Oelrichs, Miss Nina Morgan, Miss Edith Deacon, Miss Alice Potter, Miss Edith Colford, Miss Adele Ball, Miss Louise Scott, Miss Vera Gilbert, Miss Sadie Jones, Miss Constance Warren and Miss Thaw.

The lessons are given at the Griswold mansion on Touro park east, under the patronage of Mrs. William B. Rogers, Mrs. Richard C. Derby and Miss Effie B. Waring. Here the girls don kimonos, and in pleasant weather utilize the piazza for the exercises, which include an occasional roll on the floor.

Mrs. Barber tells her pupils frankly that they can retain their attractive figures only by the right kind of exercises and cultivation of the body, and, as there is nothing nearer a girl's heart than a fine figure, it may readily be imagined that they not only try, but try hard to exercise. In a lecture Mrs. Barber said:

"People dwell too much on trivial things and not enough on earnest or vital things. Relaxation is not inertia, but the power to completely let go of one thing and take hold of another. Breathing is the finest and subtlest of the physical functions. Correct breathing, with muscular exercise, is a preventative of disease, and in many cases a curative"

Mrs. Woodbury Kane Back from Europe.

MRS. WOODBURY KANE and her three boys, who have just returned from a Summer abroad, are at the Muenchinger-King cottage, but Mrs. Kane will occupy her own cottage upon the departure of the Harry Lehrs. Mrs. Kane was formerly Sallie Hargous-Elliot. She is a sister of Mrs. George B. de Forest and of Mrs. William Appleton of Beacon street.

Mrs. Samuel Powel is expected back from Europe shortly and will be at Muenchinger-King's for some weeks.

Mrs. Frederic Neilson has arrived at Paris from Marienbad, and will remain in the French capital until the end of the month

Mrs. John H Hanan of Narragansett Pier, whose sons, Howard and Talbot Smith, who have been visiting their aunt, Mrs. A. L. Wilbur, at the Lemont Farm in Middletown, left this week for the Nathan Hale School in New York, it being their second year there.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney are at New Rochelle. Mrs. Clement C. Moore has gone to New York for the Winter. Mrs Ross Whistler has returned to Baltimore after visiting Mrs. G. M. Hutton at Shamrock Cliffs. Mrs. Frederick Busk, after visiting Mrs. J. R. Buck, has returned to New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt are expecting to go abroad this Winter, pending the completion of extensive alterations to their future New York home. They hope to be at Berlin during the court festivities in January, and will afterward cruise in the Mediterranean.

Mrs. Harry Lehr, in the absence of Mr. Lehr at the head of an automobile party in the White Mountains, is enjoying herself driving about Newport with her pet Pomeranian. Miss Edith Deacon and her crowd of girls seem to be having a better time just now driving over the country roads eating apples and pears than they did while on dress parade a month ago on Bellevue avenue.

Harold Sterling Vanderbilt has gone over to visit his sister, the Duchess of Marlborough, at Blenheim Palace. Miss Edith Wetmore will accompany Mr. and Mrs. C. L. F Robinson on their yachting trip around the world. D. B. Boal, architect, of Washington was in Newport Tuesday to confer with Theodore Davis in regard to the rebuilding of the stables which were destroyed by fire a few days ago. The stables are not only to be replaced, but by better and more up-to-date ones.

Mrs. Harold Brown has taken a house in New York for the Winter months. Miss Pauline Leroy French has gone to Tuxedo Park for two weeks. Mr. and Mrs. Fellowes-Davis (Marie Baker) have closed their Newport season and gone to New York. Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. C. Taylor will spend a portion of the Winter on their steam yacht Wanderer cruising in the Mediterranean

William R. Hunter, Lewis Q Jones, Robert Sedgwick and H Casimir de Rham, composing the Outer Fountain Fishing Club, have entered upon a series of fishing excursions up the bay every Wednesday and to continue for a month or more.

The first annual meeting of the Civic League of Newport was held in the Channing parlors Monday afternoon, a large number being present Mrs. M S. W. Marsh, president of the league, read her report for the year, which was characterized as a "year of successful and honorable life," and as a year which should give strength, hope, courage and faith for the future.

Mrs. Archibald G. Thacher (Ethel Davies) is entertaining Miss Gourlie at Pine Croft villa, on Purgatory road, in Middletown. Mrs. William G. Roelker has sailed for Europe Mrs. Woodbury Kane's three boys will soon re-enter St. George's School at Newport for the Winter. H. H. Hunnewell, Jr., of Wellesley, has leased his place at Aiken to L. S. Thompson for one year. Mrs. Frederick Pearson, who has been at Bar Harbor the entire Summer, returned to Newport Tuesday morning and opened "Anglesea," on Ochre Point, for one month. Miss Annie Leary, who has been absent from Newport all Summer, has opened "Park Gate" for the Autumn season. Mrs. Thomas Coggeshall has returned to her home in Cambridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Rice have closed their cottage on the Dumplings at Jamestown and returned to their home on Commonwealth avenue, Boston. The Rices were obliged to shorten their Jamestown season nearly three weeks on account of the wrecking of their cottage by lightning in Thursday's storm of a week ago.

H. Bertram Whitman has gone to Cambridge for a visit from a long stay with the Bruguieres at Newport. Max Agassiz, with his schooner yacht Kirin, has returned to Newport from a cruise. Colonel and Mrs. William R. Hunter are planning to spend a part of the Winter abroad.

WHO? WILL ULTIMATELY SUCCEED MRS. ASTOR AS LEADER OF SOCIETY

Mrs. Astor, Society Leader.

MRS. ASTOR Under Guard FEARS PLOT TO KIDNAP HER OR ATTEMPT AT POISON

Special to Boston Sunday American.

Newport, Sept. 22.—Mrs. Astor, leader of the Four Hundred and one of the richest women in the world, is said to be suffering from hallucinations, superinduced by her nervous illness, and to fear that she will be poisoned or kidnapped.

These latest reports have greatly alarmed society followers, who have anxiously awaited word that Mrs. Astor's health is better since she was stricken ill in Boston early this month and was brought here attended by physicians and nurses, in a private car.

It is said that the malady she is afflicted with is due to the strain put upon her [illegible] of society. It is whispered in Newport society that her [illegible] guard [illegible] of her Newport [illegible] day and night. SCORES CAUGHT IN DAN CUPID'S MESHES

Rich Harvest of Engagements Follows Magic "Yes" from Boston's Charming Maids.

To the eternal lure of the love-call scores of Boston's charming maids are answering with the magic "yes," and a rich harvest of engagement announcements results.

Society smiles on the surrender of winsome Madge Lovell of West Newton, whose engagement to Barton Kingman Stephenson, Harvard '06, of Brookline, has just been announced. Mr. Stephenson, during his college career, played four years on the baseball nine, being captain in his last year.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Q. Lowell of Brookline announce the engagement of their daughter, Dora, to Louis S. Cranston of Cambridge.

The engagement of Miss Maud Stark to Francis E. Warren was recently announced at a reception given at the home of Miss Stark.

The engagement is announced of Miss Ethel Leeman to Charles F. Sargent, both of Dorchester.

The engagement is announced of Mrs. Lula Lund Adair of Brookline to Mr. Wilbur Thomas Chollar, formerly of Chicago, who is now a resident of Brookline.

Mrs. Sophia N. Lilienthal announces the engagement of her daughter, Alice, to Mr. D. Walter Hirshberg of Brookline.

Miss Mary B. Williams of Boston will plight her troth in November to Rev. Dr. G. F. Dowling of Cleveland, O., and who for twelve years was pastor of John D. Rockefeller's church. Dr. Dowling left the Baptist ministry some years ago, and has been rector of St. James's Episcopal Church in New York since last Spring.

Mrs. O. Stowell of Jamaica Plain has announced the engagement of her daughter Florence to Mr. Walter S. Fuller of Lynnfield.

Mrs. Albert Nelson Tufts of West Medford announces the engagement of her daughter Elsie to Charles Albert Read of Salem, Harvard '02.

SOCIETY MAY NEXT SET SAIL FOR MOON

"Where Is Everybody," in Vain Ask Returning Smart Set Stragglers.

"Where is everybody?" queries the social straggler who strays back to town after a globe-girdling expedition. Echo answers, "Everywhere and doing everything except motoring to the moon." They are sailing the seas, speeding across continents, scaling the mountains, and conquering the very universe in their eternal pleasure-quest and smart residents of the Hub are everywhere but home just now.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Jared Bliss of Commonwealth avenue are among those who have left Boston for a cruise on the Mediterranean and a motoring trip through Italy and France which will occupy several months of their time.

Mrs. James McCormick and family of Winthrop street, Roxbury, are among those who have recently sailed for the Mediterranean. They will remain in Switzerland during October and will pass the Winter in Italy.

Among Bostonians motoring in the White Mountains are Mrs. John A. Burnham and Miss Burnham of Commonwealth avenue, who will remain at Bretton Woods for the glories of October. Other Bostonians there are Mr. and Mrs. George S. Mumford and Mr. Reginald Gray of Chestnut Hill.

John W. Power, the popular and brilliant seminarian of Parker Hill, Roxbury, was tendered a reception at his Eldora street home previous to his leaving for Montreal, where he completes his studies for the priesthood.

Mr. and Mrs. Talbot Aldrich (Eleanor Little), who have spent the summer cruising about on their yacht Bethulia, are finishing up their protracted honeymoon at Redman farm, Ponkapoag.

Among the returning birds of passage are Ex-Mayor Matthews and his pretty daughter, Nathalie, of the Vincent Club. The family will spend some time in the Berkshires before returning to town.

Miss Driscoll of Boylston street, arrived home from Paris last Monday. She spent five weeks at Marienbad, taking the cure. Her niece, Miss Josephine Mahoney, accompanied her.

Mr. and Mrs. Lars Anderson who, after their return from abroad, made a brief visit to their Brookline estate, have gone up to their "Box" in New Hampshire where they expect to spend most of the Autumn.

Miss Leslie Lindsey, who has been abroad all Summer motoring on the continent with her parents, has been having a taste of country life in Scotland and England. After joining her mother in Paris, she will arrive home in time for some of the Autumn festivities, most of which are taking the form of week-end house parties in Berkshire country homes and elsewhere.

Kippanwoods, the Taunton country estate of Mrs. N. E. Baylies, is the scene of many gay Autumn house parties. Mrs. Walter C. Baylies and her children, who have been summering at Nahant, are spending a few weeks at Oxbow, their Autumn home at Taunton.

After spending the month of October at The Ledges, his Newport villa, Robert M. Cushing of Beacon street will sail for Europe to spend a year or more in travel.

Charmingly informal was the surprise birthday party tendered a week ago this past Friday to Mrs. Dennis J. Bergin of No. 50 Howard avenue, Dorchester.

Among those present who contributed to the delight and entertainment of the evening were Mrs. Thomas J. Fitzgerald, Mrs. C. V. Read, Mrs. G. Quinn, Mrs. E. Nagel, Mrs. C. Balleson, Mrs. Kate McLaughlin, Miss Minnie Brennan, Mrs. E. Hillsleigh, Miss Ethel Balleson, Master Talbot Fitzgerald, Miss L. Johnson, Miss Kate Lewis, Master William Bergin of Charlestown, and Mrs. E. Howard and Dennis J. Bergin of Dorchester.

A handsome game set was presented to Mrs. Bergin.

The Nathaniel Thayers have forsaken Newport and are at their estate at Lancaster, the Thayer stamping ground for years. The Thayers may not open their town house on Fairfield street until after the holidays.

Cottagers Who Stay Behind Take on New Life as Hotels Close Doors at Season's End.

Manchester-by-the-Sea, Sept. 22.—It has been a week of departures and home comings on the North Shore. Several have closed their houses and left for city homes; others who have been away to the mountains and to other resorts are returning to spend the fall on the shore. In other words the North Shore is laying aside its summer dress and is putting on its fall gown.

The season here is by no means at an end in September. As far as the hotels are concerned [illegible] about the middle of the month. But the North Shore as a cottage resort [illegible] many families wait until the [illegible] before they [illegible]. A few of the [illegible] cottagers think of leaving until October and a great many, perhaps one third of [illegible] are not closed until November [illegible] open all Winter for week-ends.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander S. Porter, Jr., are being [illegible] the advent of a little daughter [illegible] the [illegible] from Europe [illegible]. Mrs. Porter was Miss [illegible] an only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Wigglesworth [illegible] of the younger North Shore set. Mrs. Wigglesworth, [illegible] her mountain cottage [illegible] in time to be at her [illegible]. She will remain at her cottage [illegible] until the late Fall.

The George Wigglesworths have closed their cottage at Old Neck and returned to their Milton home to-day.

At the Essex County Club Tuesday Mrs. E. B. Hill of Boston gave one of the smartest little luncheons of the week. Covers were set for a dozen on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Quincy Adams Shaw, 2d, (Nanee Mitchell) returned Monday from Hot Springs, Va., and are with the [illegible] [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. Walter Mitchell [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] kept their house open all Winter.

Castle Square Theatre

A notable production of "Gismonda" may be [illegible] the Castle Square Theatre [illegible] week, when Sardou's [illegible] will be given here for the first [illegible] It is one of the greatest [illegible] the French dramatist wrote [illegible] and which were produced [illegible] Fanny Davenport. Globe Theatre

"The Woman in the Case," in which [illegible] is to appear at the Globe [illegible] matinee for one week [illegible] one of the strongest [illegible] by any drama of recent [illegible] pith of the plot. A wife [illegible] her husband innocent of a murder. There is but one way—to worm the truth out of the woman who is his [illegible] a woman of the town. To learn that truth she must insinuate herself into the woman's confidence, play upon her weaknesses, [illegible] her life, persuade her finally to the telling of the [illegible] that shall prove that the murder was really a suicide. The vital scene is all stark emotion and suspense. There is no sparing of what is the fashion to call unpleasant detail, but that detail serves to bring the spectator at closer grip with living emotions in vital conflict. Of Miss B[illegible] acting and the way in which she [illegible] the devoted wife, it is said she has never shown such finesse, piquancy or intensity.

Out-Door Pleasures

There are no September outings equal to those by water, and no round trips that one may take in a day out of Boston equal to those by the commodious steamers of the Gloucester line. The boats leave the north side of Central wharf daily at 10 and Sundays at 10.15, giving a chance to visit Gloucester and to return in time to take [illegible] cars before dark to the suburbs.

The autumn colors are beginning to tinge the picturesque sides of the "Great Blue Hill" of Milton, and numberless people who love the [illegible] are making their way in the comfortable cars of the Blue Hill street railway's "reservation route" [illegible] to the foot of the mountain. The [illegible] the Dudley street terminal at [illegible] past the hour.

Deep sea fishing from the decks of the [illegible] King Philip [illegible] to be all the rage with the people who love the water front and the sport of catching large cod and haddock. Bait, chowder and tackle are furnished free to purchasers of [illegible] tickets and there is always the best of order and good fellowship aboard.

Plays That Continue Here

"The Press Agent"

Peter F. Dailey will begin the second and last week of his engagement at the Majestic Theatre to-morrow night. A very [illegible] feature of "The Press Agent" is [illegible] South American revolution. In his con[illegible] of the press agent who becomes a war correspondent and goes to report and [illegible] South American revolution Mr. Dailey has one of the [illegible] parts which he has ever been seen in. It gives full play to his droll humor. Particularly as regards the singing, is the cast of surpassing quality. Miss Condon, Miss Hall, Mr. Bowers, Mr. Lyons each has a role which gives full play to all their [illegible] and a little miss styled [illegible] imitations of well known stage people, which gives great promise [illegible] her future.

"Lion and the Mouse"

Capacity audiences continue the rule at the Park Theatre, where "The Lion and the Mouse" commences the fourth week of its phenomenally successful run. No more vital theme than that of "The Lion and the Mouse" has been offered recently in the theatre. It is the power of money in American politics, and the possibilities for evil in great wealth held by unscrupulous hands. Arthur Byron gives an excellent presentment of Ryder, and the terrible force and strength of the man's nature is felt constantly. The few touches of sentiment and of tenderness add humaneness to the hard and powerful character. Gertrude Coghlan's performance is of uncommon merit and she makes a handsome Shirley. The cast is exceptionally well balanced.

"Rip Van Winkle"

The revival of that ever fascinating [illegible] "Rip Van Winkle" [illegible] Jefferson, and his company [illegible] of its perennial popularity [illegible] It was [illegible] hands of his illustrious [illegible] one a classic [illegible] essays the [illegible] Jefferson has successfully [illegible] and the verdict [illegible] Boston playgoers familiar with his father's portrayal of the shiftless, bibulous [illegible] the same this year as last [illegible] To-morrow evening the play enters upon its second and closing week.

"Sergeant Brue"

Second [illegible] week of Frank Daniels [illegible] at the Hollis Street [illegible] "Sergeant Brue" is [illegible] Monday night [illegible] last [illegible] on next Saturday afternoon [illegible] comedian, with [illegible] expressive [illegible] the quizzical manner and [illegible] strut, has delighted large audiences [illegible] and there is every indication [illegible] to-night's engagement will be up to the regular Daniels standard, as far as [illegible] attendance goes. It is doubtful if there is an actor who comes to Boston who has the strong personal following that [illegible] has. The previous engagement of "Sergeant Brue" last February was a record breaker, and the present return engagement of the comical policeman, with Daniels as the blue-coated blunderer, promises to be quite out of the ordinary for this time of year. The company this season is decidedly better than before. Miss Julia Frary, Mr. Daniels's leading soprano, is a "find."

Stageland Gleanings That Missed 'The Hook'

INTERESTING FACTS WHICH THE BUSY PRESS AGENT FAILED TO FIND.

By Ernest L. Waitt.

THERE is a marked improvement this season in the conduct of the Amateur Nights at the Columbia. There is less of rough and tumble less use of the Hook, and more willingness on the part of the audiences to give the struggling young Thespians a chance. This really insures more fun for everyone and makes the amateurs feel better. Manager Farren has a novelty he is soon to introduce in the form of a beauty contest on Tuesday nights. It will be worth a good deal to a girl to be voted the prettiest one in Boston.

* * * * * *

Orchestral Director Harry G. M[illegible]ly at the Park Theatre pleased his patrons last week by performing the new march "THE BOSTON AMERICAN," dedicated by P. Damm to William Randolph Hearst. This is one of the prettiest marches ever composed. It is full of life and has a delightful swing to it. Director Heindl at the Bijou Theatre is to include it in his programme this week. That is a nice idea which Mr. [illegible] at the Castle Square has adopted, of designating on the programme the act after which each musical selection is to be played. It is a great help to patrons who may not know the name of a selection to which they may take a fancy while hearing it played.

Wright Lorimer deserves all kinds of praise for the manner in which he produced Ibsen's "The Wild Duck" at the Colonial last Thursday, even though he was woefully lame in his lines and almost made a fiasco in the final act when he abruptly left the stage to take a look at the prompt book and get his lines straightened out. It was a nervy thing to do—but then, he WAS nervous.

B. F. Keith has issued a fine little book about the Fadette Woman's Orchestra, giving photographs of the leading soloists, a history of the organization and a route book for the year. It is an ambitious undertaking to successfully manage such an orchestra.

Some amusement has been caused by the sign in front of the Park Square roller skating rink announcing its opening under improved management. There is considerable interest to know whether the improvements in the management comprise set tubs, open plumbing, a gas range, or merely a clean collar.

Messrs. Wagenhals and Kemper, managers of the new Astor Theatre in New York, have extended invitations to the Boston critics to visit their new house "at any time in the event of business or pleasure taking you to New York." It would be worth while to run over just to see Annie Russell play Puck.

At last [illegible] Blair is to have a chance to really show what she can do. She comes to the Globe this week in "The Woman in the Case," succeeding Blanche Walsh. Those who remember her great work with Robert Downing and her Sapho, Zaza, Iris and the like, believe that she will make people sit up and take notice in this play.

800 Castaways Face Death or Famine on Pacific Desert Isle!

THE GRAVEYARD
SAND ISLAND
EASTERN ISLAND
CAPT. WALKER
MR. CHAMBERLIN'S YOUNG ALBATROSS
FREDERICK CHAMBERLIN.
THE MIDWAYS TWO MILES AWAY.
TAME WILD BIRDS

THE loneliest graveyard in the world is this God's Acre on a Mid[illegible] Isle. Here lie the bones [illegible] starvation, [illegible] Japanese and Chinese hieroglyphics on rude headboards tell the name and fate of some of those interred in the barren sand. Americans whose end is a mystery to friends at home sleep the long sleep there. Their sepulchre is coral debris and their requiem the seabird's wail.

[illegible] there is never a harbor for big ships. Men have suffered famine on the isles while relief ships hung in the offing, unable to send boats laden with provisions through the surf. The [illegible]

FAR out in the North Pacific Ocean, half way between San Francisco and Yokohama, [illegible] hundred or more men, women and children have been in desperate peril of their lives. They may be at this moment victims of a terrible shipwreck upon treacherous, lurking coral reefs, which form almost impassable barriers to low-lying, barren little isles.

Seven hundred of those in peril are passengers. The others are the officers and crew of the giant Pacific Mail steamer Mongolia. How many have been drowned is unknown. Neither can it be definitely stated whether the survivors of the disaster are suffering from famine. It is not known whether or not they are still aboard the steamship or have taken to open boats, whether or not the awful surf which rolls upon the little Midway Islands has permitted the castaways to land on the small, narrow patches of sand, which rise just far enough above the surface of the ocean to escape being swept by the league-long rollers, which forever beat upon coral outposts.

The Mongolia struck the reef on September 16. That much is known, for the Midway Islands are a station for the trans-Pacific cable. But the details of the plight of passengers and crew are lacking. That they are believed to be in grave danger is shown by the haste of the United States Government in dispatching relief. But when the steamship sent to succor the castaways arrives it may be impossible, if they have succeeded in getting ashore, to land provisions. But fifteen cable company employes have lived at a time on the Midway Islands, and they have nearly starved in the past because the surf was too heavy to send supplies ashore to them. To find food on the islands for 800 persons will be a daunting task. Friends and relatives of the shipwrecked legion can only wait, hope and pray until definite news is received.

SCENE OF MARINE TRAGEDIES

The Midway Islands have been the scene of some terrible marine tragedies. Ships have been lost there and all hands drowned. Men have been marooned there and have starved to death. Mutiny and murder have occurred there.

For years there were legends of uncharted reefs in the North Pacific, which were run down in the darkness by lost ships. Foundations for these tales were found when the Midway Islands were finally discovered. No last century map hinted at their existence. No place in the world was less frequently visited.

Boston is the home of the first man who wrote any extended account of these strange mid-ocean atoms. He is Frederick Chamberlin, lawyer, author and traveller, who visited the islands in 1904, while encircling the globe for material for his book, "Around the World in Ninety Days."

THE HAZARDOUS PLIGHT OF 800.

By Frederick Chamberlain.

If heavy weather occurs at the Midways—and it does arise very frequently—the eight or nine hundred people who were on the Mongolia may be in a most uncomfortable predicament—and one that will be likely to be extremely dangerous if storms continue for any length of time. For a more inaccessible place, I presume, does not exist upon earth, when the sea is angry. This great reef upon which the Mongolia is fastened has been the grave of more ships than have ever survived a visit to its vicinity.

The names, aye, even the nationality, of many of the ill-destined vessels which have been dashed to pieces there, have never been known. Nobody knew that there were any islands there, until 1859, when Captain Brooks, of the Hawaiian bark Gambia, suddenly ran them down in calm water in the daylight, and planted our flag over them. Nobody lived there; nobody on no vessel that was not wrecked there with a total loss of all human lives ever saw these specks in the great ocean, until less than 50 years ago. But ship after ship, old sailors reported, had been colliding with a terrible, unknown, practically sunken reef for scores of years, whose passengers never lived to discover that, nestled within the giant arms of the cruel rocks, lay two little patches of white sand, which, although but two or three yards above the water, still were safe from its anger.

Gruesome Tale Is Told.

It is a long, gruesome tale, then of shipwreck—but in addition there have been piracy, murder, marooning, romance, adventures of castaways that rival Crusoe's, and upon the diary of one of these last, a woman, Stevenson builded his tale "The Wreckers," which he wrote while he lived at Honolulu.

In 1870, the U. S. S. Saginaw was wrecked a little beyond the Midways at Ocean Island, upon a similar reef. In 1886 the General Sigel, a Honolulu ship, struck on the Midway reefs, and was a total loss, only a few persons escaping to shore. One of these killed the Captain, and the murderer was marooned on the islands when the others left in an improvised boat. These last told their story, and Captain Walker, also of Honolulu, about a year subsequent, set out to see the islands and capture the murderer. While engaged in this latter occupation, his bark, Wandering Minstrel, was dashed on the reef and was a total loss.

The survivors built a hut, and Mrs. Walker's story of their [illegible] the diary [illegible]. Scurvy killed a number, and the murderer stole the supplies and [illegible] boat and reached other islands, where he committed another homicide, and yet again escaped. But he had unwittingly aroused Walker's friends, who rescued his little band after a frightful experience that endured for over a year.

Halfway to Yokohama.

First, however, let me tell you that the islands, which are two in number, Sand Island and Eastern Island, probably derive their name, "The Midways," from the fact that they are exactly half way from San Francisco in an air line to Yokohama, that their latitude is that of New Orleans, Shanghai, and Nagasaki, that they are about 1156 miles to the northwest of Honolulu in a direct line to Yokohama, and that, to be exact, they are located in latitude 28 deg. 13 min. 15 sec. north, and longitude 177 deg. 21 min. 30 sec. west.

These two islands lie within a mile of each other, with very shoal water between them, and their entire extent may be included within a circle of a diameter not exceeding four miles. They are within a furlong of a snake-like coral reef that is over fifteen miles long. In only one place in its length is there any break, and that will only admit small boats in the best of weather. As the map shows, the head and tail of this gigantic red serpent come within about three miles of each other, almost completing a circle of about six miles in diameter; but the water between them is so shallow that only small ships can enter to where the islands are, through a channel of a width of about a fourth of a mile, the depth of which will average about twenty feet.

Population of 15 Men.

Hugging close to the white sand are the half-dozen rough boarded little shacks in which live the some fifteen men who constitute the total permanent population—the employes of the cable company. This company landed the trans-Pacific cable here in 1903, when the islands first became inhabited. In 1900 Commander Charles F. Pond, U. S. N., made the first real chart of the islands, part of which is here reproduced. It shows over 16,000 surroundings, so you can see if the Mongolia has run on far from the two entrances to the islands, any sort of heavy weather would make the journey from her to Sand Island, where the houses are, a hard task and no large amount of provisions could be landed; and of course there can be but a small supply at the cable station.

More than once a ship has lain for days off the reef vainly endeavoring to land provisions, and at the first sight of a cloud no sailor will keep a large ship in the vicinity. Upon one occasion, just before my visit, the United States transport Buford had endeavored to land supplies which were sorely needed, but could not do so because of the weather; so they were boxed up and thrown overboard. But they, with the six months' mail, were lost and the cable employes were almost starved before relief finally came.

So you can see the land is inaccessible for long periods, and if the large supplies of provisions have not been landed already, and a storm arises, the passengers may confront a very serious situation; for while the government has forwarded help, and so have others, it may be some time be[illegible] landing can be made—and [illegible]

ON

IN

October Cosmopolitan

More than two million American children, the majority of whom are under twelve years of age, are compelled by dire necessity to labor long hours in dismal factories—for what?—their daily bread, bare sustenance. Theirs is life without laughter and play; life robbed of its childhood and school; while they toil merely for the privilege of such life.

We send missionaries to enlighten the pagan Chinese and the savage African, but do not we also need enlightenment—some ray of wisdom which shall show us that, in stealing from childhood its years of play and companionship, its school and growth, we are robbing the nation of its future?

Have we, as a nation, while physically brave, retrograded to mere moral cowards—too fearful of disturbing the commercial equanimity of a few money-grubbers? Or shall we halt the iniquitous system of "child labor" and give the nation's future citizens and mothers a chance to be real citizens and mothers?

In October Cosmopolitan is the second of the Markham series of articles—"The Hoe-Man in the Making." The first article (in September) was entitled "The Child at the Loom." In October Cosmopolitan is "Child Wrecking in the Glass Factories."

Read what Edwin Markham, author of "The Man with the Hoe," has to say; his message is a message for all good citizens.

Grand Opera House

Probably the most sensational melodrama which will play at the Grand Opera House this season comes this week, the [illegible] Secrets of the Police. For [illegible] and excitement and startling [illegible] this piece is said to take [illegible] New York detective, Nick Chambers, engaged [illegible] a band of [illegible] "The Red Rag." The scene shifts from America to England, France and Russia, and every instant the excitement increases. With additions by a Russian adventuress, her deserted but revengeful husband, a "comic" detective name[illegible] a love-sick female New Yorker and other incidental characters, in [illegible] the [illegible] members of the [illegible] "Secrets of the Police" is [illegible] four acts and fourteen [illegible] Matinees will be given Tuesday, [illegible] and Saturday.

Howard Athenæum

Another bill of immense proportions will be seen at the old Howard this week. The famous burlesque company will be the feature. The famous dancer, Dzirla, will be retained for this week only, while new vaudeville acts never before seen in Boston will be on the bill. Emmette Devoy and company in "The Saintly Mr. Billings," Murphy and Willard in their newest craz[illegible], Arthur Whitelaw, the Irish American humorist, the Peots in [illegible] juggling, Charles and [illegible] Ahern, comedians, cyclists and [illegible], Herbert and Rogers, wooden shoe [illegible] and Renfrew, original songs; Valdare and Davis, physical culture; the Knox brothers, musical comedians; Harlow and Nicholson and the Howardscope will round out the bill.

Austin & Stone's Museum

For another week Randion, the Hindoo who was born without arms or legs, is to be seen at Austin & Stone's Museum. Randion surprises everyone by shaving himself, cutting hair, [illegible] marbles, sharpening a knife, [illegible] cigarette, filing and smoking a p[illegible] threading a needle entirely with his [illegible].

Among the other attractions are the Hindoo orchestra, [illegible], who eats [illegible] and [illegible] under water; expert bag punchers, [illegible] snake charmer, and in the theatre will be the Minstrel Maids, Master [illegible] the boy soprano, Frankie Green, [illegible] the LaPortes as wooden [illegible] the two Silbors, James Maxwell [illegible] illustrated songs and new moving pictures.

Lyceum Theatre

The Lyceum Theatre offers for next week "The Greater New York Stars." The company has been reorganized and all that remains of last season's show is the name. New faces, new acts, new features and a carload of mechanical and el[illegible] and gorgeous costumes are [illegible] Conspicuous among the artists with the "Greater New York Stars" are the Siddons, Fanny Everett, Marsland Tyson and her eight Shetlands, W[illegible] and [illegible] Mercedes Alvarez, [illegible] Brothers and others. Matinee daily.

Bowdoin Square Theatre

The Bowery News Girl, a new melodrama, is announced for the week beginning Monday at the Bowdoin Square Theatre. It tells a story about the "Belle of the Bowery" and the plottings against her and [illegible] by [illegible] relatives. The plot is ended [illegible] by the discovery of the heiress to property [illegible] open her way she is selling papers on the streets of Greater New York. The scenes are picture stories of New York life and the characters [illegible] as one sees in the slums and big life of that city. Charlotte Hunt heads the cast.

Columbia Music Hall

Easily the best of the newer burlesque organizations last [illegible] played at the Columbia, the Star[illegible] will make their re-entre at th[illegible] to-morrow afternoon. [illegible] opium fiend, will be the big s[illegible] [illegible] Nichols in the title role [illegible] dreams." [illegible] the company are [illegible] the lively Irene Calahan a[illegible] Ada [illegible] Tett[illegible] The olio [illegible] and Lynn, Marie Croix, La Sella Trio, James Dixon and James and Pert Mackey. The amateurs seem to be getting warmed up to their work and every Friday night they fairly outdistance the professionals as funmakers; the coming Friday will see some good local cards.

Palace Theatre

The "Bowery Burlesquers," at the Palace Theatre this week, own the distinction of having made burlesque famous. They never tried to pass a lemon on their patrons. The Bowery, with its dives and its typical characters, Chinatown and its [illegible] parties, an old East Side Police Court and an Art Studio, enlivened by statuesque beauties, offer the background for endless humorous situations. Those responsible for the gayety are Lizzie Freligh, the [illegible] of the burlesque stage, Ben Jansen, Hebrew [illegible]; Farrel Taylor Trio, premiers of musical comedy entertainers; Ellis and Wilson, and Carmelita d'Liecdere, the graceful French art model.

Navasar Ladies' Band

The Navasar Ladies' Military Band was the sensational and dominant musical feature of the closing days of the carnival at Wonderland, Revere Beach. Manager Floyd C. Thompson of Wonderland is now managing the band for a tour of New England, beginning with a concert at the Boston Theatre this evening. This band comprises fifty young ladies, each a soloist. The costumes worn are decidedly picturesque. Manager Thompson has arranged for two concerts at the Boston Theatre, one this evening and the other next Sunday evening. Popular prices will prevail.

Katherine Raynore's Success

Katherine Raynore, the little Somerville girl who made a big name for herself in support of Mrs. Pat Campbell in "The Sorceress," is to go a-starring in "Belee, or the Two Little Wooden Shoes," by Ouida, this season. It has been dramatized for her by Francis Powers, author of "The First Born." Miss Raynore is one of the cleverest young women whom Somerville has contributed to stageland. She played Lady Babbie in "The Little Minister" so well that Maude Adams sent her a personal letter of congratulation, and she made good again in "The Soldier of Fortune." She played Nannie in "The Heart of Maryland" with Belasco's company, and had a strong part in "Ransome's Folly."

"Doll's House" at Bijou.

John Craig's stock company has decided to put on "The Doll's House" at the Bijou Theatre the week of October 1. This interesting and absorbing play of Ibsen will give Miss Mary Young an opportunity to play Nora, which is one of the most intense and subtle characters known to the modern stage.

Norumbega Park

Norumbega Park will remain open for several weeks, so that patrons may enjoy the natural beauties of the trees and shrubbery, in which the first autumnal tints are beginning to appear, the zoological garden and the boating and canoeing. Naphtha launches run every fifteen minutes from the new landing on the North Slope. The most attractive feature of the park is the zoological garden.

William Winter's Warning

William Winter is again hot on the trail of the "pedlers of theatrical punk." In a recent article he has this to say: "The province of the stage is the ministration of art and beauty, and it is a shame that it should ever be perverted to the service of anything else; it is a shame that it should ever be degraded by the presentation of such stuff as 'Ghosts,' and 'Hedda Gabler,' 'Iris' and 'Mrs. Tanqueray.' You cannot deluge the human mind for two or three hours with the slimy details of depravity, disease and crime, and then purify it with a little squib of moral precept."

Attractions Coming Soon

In the whole category of plays familiar to the average amusement lover, it is doubtful if there is one which claims so large a clientele as "The Old Homestead." It is a perennial favorite, and, to local amusement lovers, there could be no more pleasing announcement than that it is booked for a fortnight's engagement at the Boston Theatre, beginning a week from to-morrow evening. The seat sale will open to-morrow.

The Boston engagement of David Warfield in "The Music Master" is announced by David Belasco for Monday, October 1, at the Majestic Theatre. The engagement will last four weeks. The same company that has appeared in Warfield's support in New York will be seen in Boston.

This time next week Yvette Guilbert will be undergoing a foretaste of her forty nights in the wilderness of cities encompassed in her American one-night stand tour, beginning October 8. She sails for New York September 26 on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, and will be followed a few days later by her joint recital giver and co-star, Albert Chevalier. Liebler & Co. are equipping a hotel on wheels for the artists. The Boston engagement will be at Symphony Hall Friday evening, October 12. One of Mlle. Guilbert's new pieces de resistance will be Villon's rondel, "Mais ou sont les neiges d'antan," anglicized into "But Where Are the Snows of Yesterday," given in the archaic French of 1450, and costumed after the style of Charles VIII, the period of the first French renaissance.

"Breaking Into Society," by Lee Arthur and Robert B. Smith, with the four Mortons as the breakers-in, will come to the [illegible] for a week beginning Monday matinee, October 1. Sam Morton has the part of [illegible] Major Mike O'Donovan, the w[illegible] Kittie and Clara, as [illegible] two singers in Oscar Hammerstein's [illegible], and Paul Morton as Jack M[illegible].

Reginald De Koven has written some delightful music, Frederic Ranken and Stanislaus Stange have contributed some exquisite words and lyrics, Walter Burridge has painted some beautiful scenery; George Marion has trained the choruses, composed a score of new stage pictures, and Henry W. Savage, with his usual generosity, will offer the successful result, "The Student King," the latest romantic opera, at the Tremont Theatre, beginning Monday, October 1. The opera is said to be the best light opera offering since "Robin Hood." The prima donna will be Mme. Lina Abarbanell, late of Grand Opera fame.

"My Tom Boy Girl," the latest novelty drama success, and produced by Charles E. Blaney, with Lottie Williams, "the girl with the famous wink," as the star, is next week's attraction at the Grand Opera House. Miss Williams will be supported by a company of fifty people.

SAYS AMERICAN GIRLS ARE CHARMING BUT UNLOVABLE

English Writer Gives Remarkable Appreciation of Yankee Young Women in London Periodical.

In a London periodical of current issue there is an article by E. Keble Chatterton entitled "The American Girl," which is a remarkable appreciation of the young women who go from the land of the free to astonish effete Europe. But he thinks that the Southern lass is the most typically American and incidentally the most ideal not only in this country but of the whole world. The article reads:

The American Girl.

Like the city of New York, the American girl is a most interesting contradiction. She is regarded as the world's greatest representative of feminine freedom, who can go anywhere and do anything without the irritating accompaniment of a chaperon. And yet, at the root of her character she is the most prudish of all girls. She makes the best friend for a man and yet his worst lover. She cannot deny that she is a flirt, and yet she is at heart hard and selfish. She will do the most unconventional things, and yet in no part of the world is etiquette more insisted on than in American society.

Different Training.

The upbringing of the American and the English girl is as far apart as New York and San Francisco. An English girl grows up to learn that whatever else she may be, she is merely a secondary figure. I remember a clever English girl once saying that before she realized anything else she discovered for herself that whatever she wanted in life she had to get it through the help of and with the consent of man. Across the Atlantic it is the reverse. As the American girl reaches years of discretion she quickly learns that she is, to use American slang—"it." All the attention of the family is concentrated, not on the son, but on the daughter. And so, being thus in her youth impressed with her own importance, she insists, not unnaturally, for the rest of her life on occupying the centre of the stage.

And yet, she is not really a prig in spite of the gold medals and diplomas that every American girl of any education seems to win.

"Is a Good Sort."

She is what an Englishman would call both "a good sort and a good sport." The key to her success lies in her knowledge of men. Like the Frenchwoman and unlike the Englishwoman, she has made it her business to understand men. She is the most charming and the wittiest of conversationalists. She is adaptable to a degree. She is straight spoken, and [illegible] sincerity with the most ingen[illegible]

It is unfair to judge of the American girl by the types one sees gazing in Westminster Abbey or lunching at the Cheshire Cheese. The nasal Chicagoan or the raucous New Yorker is not the finest specimen of Americanism. For the most ideal girl of America, and in many respects of the whole world, one must go to the South, to such States as Mississippi or Kentucky. Every man in America will arch his eyebrows in surprise at your not knowing that Kentucky grows three certain products of [illegible] standard superior to any others elsewhere—the finest horses, the purest whiskey and the prettiest girls.

The Southron's Charm.

There is a charm about the southern girl which is wonderfully hard to excel. The blue-eyed blonde with rich golden, waving hair, a most infectious musical accent (more like a highly-improved negro melody than the raucousness of the New Yorker), a passion for the open-air life and the laugh that betrays the love of the optimist who believes in the sun, and colors and poetry. This is a typical southerner. And the southern men are just as warm hearted as hosts and equally good fellows.

When an American comes to England she misses many things. First of all her ice water. The next thing she misses is that humor and faculty for seeing a joke which is universal in every American citizen, but somehow deficient in the matter of fact phlegmatic Englishman.

What "Tickles Her to Death."

She misses the mathematical architecture of the streets of American towns. She will tell you, as I have heard an American girl say, that "she is tickled to death at the sight of your postmen going about with mail sacks slung over their backs and the District Messenger boys wearing their caps pushed over the sides of their heads." And yet for all her inbred love of freedom and her ideas of democracy she will tell you that never has she felt such a thrill of delight as when she stood for the first time by the tombs of kings and queens in an old cathedral. For though the American is no respecter of persons or things in themselves, yet there is nothing she thinks just so "cute" and "perfectly beautiful" as that person or place that has history and age attached thereto.

Yankee Paradox.

The chief characteristics of the American girl—tact, self-dependence and excitable energy—do not commend themselves to most English males. [illegible] the American girl the Englishman [illegible] self-centred and [illegible] other. Yankee parad[illegible] the American lover, is too restless and power[illegible] and it is an [illegible] most bud[illegible] an magnate. He will work for a longer day period than any Englishman in [illegible] profession, and he must [illegible] little encouragement and sympathy [illegible] the American wife. True the American [illegible] makes the best of husbands if [illegible] is meant a senseless giving of [illegible] a continuous lap-dog kind of [illegible]. She has no real affection for him [illegible] New York society is any test. She has [illegible] little time to see him, with her s[illegible] societies, her literary clubs, [illegible] symphony matinees and her extra[illegible] of entertaining.

"Americans Always Posing."

The American woman is indeed adaptable and makes an original [illegible] sometimes vulgar hostess. But she is always posing, either socially, intellectually or otherwise. An Englishwoman desires [illegible] rest, an American must be [illegible] notoriety. An American girl would rather have a dollar box of chocolates from Huyler's on Broadway than a three-dollar box from any other equally good "store." Her whole aim is to attain rather than to be happy, to conquer than to love. She cannot get away from the habit of valuing every pleasure in so many dollars. She is proud of her engagement because her ring cost $1,000 (£200), and came from Tiffany's on Fifth avenue. She is a lover of romance, and yet she is not really sentimental.

Always Well Dressed.

True, she knows how to put her clothes on and how to hold herself up. And yet, though she is always well dressed, she and her sisters are absolute slaves to fashion. If the fashion for a red coat comes in [illegible] a few [illegible] every American girl shopping on Fifth avenue, or Broadway, will literally paint the streets red.

Yes, there is something very attractive, quite refreshing, infinitely amusing and never uninteresting about this nervous, excitable, bright being. One cannot ever deny that the American girl is a [illegible] woman. She is, indeed, [illegible]. She is admirable [illegible] but she is not lovable except when distance lends enchantment to the view.

WHOLESOME SENTIMENT AN ELEMENT IN SONG SUCCESS

Illustrated by the song, "The Lamb That Strayed from the Fold," printed to-day on other pages of this newspaper.

WHOLESOME sentiment is one of the elements of a popular song. Those songs which touch the furthest depths of the heart while set to music that is melodious and yet fits the theme, have an excellent chance for success. The American nation is one of clean thinking and clean living, and while its neighbors across the Atlantic refer to it as old-fashioned and bourgeois because of its family and community sentiments, it clings to them with no thought of ever drifting from the moorings established by generations of well ordered lives. Its songs, naturally, reflect its deepest-rooted sentiments.

In some of the most popular songs is a warning and a lesson. To illustrate this this newspaper publishes to-day the song "The Lamb that Strayed from the Fold." The chorus embodies the song lesson:

"Only a lamb that has strayed from the fold,
Only the same sad tale of old,
Only a mother who waits each day,
Waiting for one that has gone astray.
Only the name that they never speak;
Only the one that has proved so weak—
'Tis a tale that is old,
Though it's oft been told,
Of the lamb that strayed from the fold."

The firm of music publishers, Joseph W. Stern & Co., owner of the copyright of this song, founded their "House of Hits" upon a song of this nature, and, convinced that it was one of the cornerstones of success in the music publishing song business, have always kept a large catalogue of such songs and have rejected those whose sentiments are unfit for circulation in American homes.

Writing for their own amusement and recreation the ballad, "The Lost Child," and being overwhelmed by orders for it, the author and composer, E. B. Marks and Joseph W. Stern, opened a business in one small room that has demanded continuously larger quarters, and which, housed at present at No. 34 East Twenty-first street, will soon be removed to the company's new [illegible] story building on Thirty-eighth street, near Broadway.

At first the firm wrote their own songs, always adhering to the principle of clean sentiment wedded to pleasing melody. In order to supply the demand for their songs they engaged a steadily increasing staff of song writers and is [illegible] by persons whose work has brought them fame and fortune. The composers and authors whose work is [illegible] on their list include Reginald de Koven, Ludwig Englander, A. Baldwin Sloane, Gustave Kerker, Stanislaus Stange, Paul Schindler, Frederick Rankin, Harry B. Smith, George V. Hobart, [illegible], Sydney Rosenfeld, Charles Emerson Cooke, J. Cheever Goodwin, Clare Kummer, Cole & Johnson, Benjamin Hapgood Burt, Herwitz and Bowers, Arthur J. Lamb, Frank J. Tannehill, Jr., and H. W. Petrie.

Of recent publications are their successful songs from Marie Cahill's vehicle for this season, "The Marrying Mary": "The Hottentot Love Song," "Mr. Cupid," "I Love the Last One Best of All," "Mr. Noah" and "Three Men in a Boat," the songs from May Irwin's "Mrs. Wilson [illegible]," "Never Raise a Razor Less You Want to Raise a Row" and "My Gal Sal"; the ballad "Kiss All the Girls for Me," "Dear Starry Eyes, Good Night," and the new waltz song, "Up in the Air About Mary," "Let Me Write What I Never Dared Tell," "My Mississippi Missus Misses Me," "Peter Piper," the new popular two-step, "While I Have You," which promises to become as popular as "Dearie," "Manhattan Rag," "Golden Autumn Time," "Sweet Elaine," "Weeping Willow Shades," "Mossy Lane," "Priscilla," the intermezzo "Red Domino," and "I'll Keep a Warm Spot in My Heart for You."

Of the older favorites the House of Hits published "Under the Bamboo Tree," "The Congo Love Song," "Dearie," "Nancy Brown" and hundreds of others whose popularity attested the sagacity of the publishers.

The Cheapest Form of Health Insurance

YOU can buy Health Insurance now.

Several good "Accident" Companies sell it.

Sixty dollars per year will bring you $25 per week, for every week you are sick.

But, your time alone may be worth far more than that.

And $200 per week might not pay for your suffering.

That's why "Cascaret" Insurance, which prevents Sickness, is worth ten times as much money as other "Health" insurance.

Yet "Cascaret" Insurance will cost you less than Ten Cents a week.

That gives you a "Vest Pocket" Box to carry constantly.

JOHN B. MORAN FOR NEXT GOVERNOR

NAMED BY INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE IN CONVENTION

THE Independence League stands for independence—independence of corporation or trust control; independence of boss rule; independence of every party subject to corporation control and boss rule.—From the Platform Adopted Yesterday in Faneuil Hall.

KILLION GIVES HIMSELF UP IN CROCKER WILL SCANDAL

Juror in Famous Case, Wanted on Bribe Charge, Surrenders—Police Seek Cronan and Hartnett.

Matthew F. Killion, a painter, living at No. 864 Saratoga street, East Boston, went to police headquarters last night and surrendered himself into custody after learning that he was wanted on the charge of accepting a bribe while he was a juror in the Crocker will contest case.

Police Inspectors scoured the city last night in search of John W. Cronan, a plumber, of No. 21 Palmer street, Roxbury, and also a juror, who is wanted on a similar charge. The police also searched for William J. Hartnett, accused of bribery in connection with the case. The arrests of these men were ordered by District Attorney John B. Moran in fulfillment of his pledge to present to the Grand Jury the charges he had heard. He made this pledge on the public platform during his sensational and independent campaign for the office he now holds.

Walks Into Police Office.

Police Inspector Armstrong was sent out to arrest Killion yesterday, but could not find him at home. While the detective was still on the quest Killion walked into the Pemberton square office and said to Inspector Burke, who was in charge:

"My name is Killion and I hear that I'm wanted here."

Shows Little Concern.

Killion, who is a young man, showed but little concern over his predicament. Chief Watts said that Killion talked freely.

"As the District Attorney ordered his arrest," said Chief Watts, "I do not feel at liberty to make public what Killion said. But there is no doubt but that there was bribery and that we have gotten on the track of the right persons."

As Hartnett is accused of being the briber it is supposed by detectives that Chief Watts hopes through him to learn who is the man or men "higher up." District Attorney Moran is feared by the rich and powerful criminal as no other public prosecutor in Boston has ever been. They know he will not be deterred from doing his duty by any influence of wealth and social station which can be brought to bear.

The will which caused the contest was made by the late Uriel H. Crocker, a millionaire and one of the ablest lawyers at the Suffolk bar. His family is of high social position and took great umbrage when Mr. Crocker married for his second wife Miss Anna J. Fitz, his stenographer. Mr. Crocker's brother is Chairman George H. Crocker of the Boston Transit Commission, and George U. Crocker, one of his sons, was formerly City Treasurer of Boston. Another son is Joseph Crocker.

Uriel H. Crocker resented the attitude of his sons and their wives toward their stepmother. There was discord in the family. Mrs. Crocker 2nd was many years younger than her husband. His sons and other relatives said that the marriage was mercenary on her part. His relatives were accused of snubbing the old man's bride. His resentment was shown when his will was read. It practically left his fortune of $800,000, his home, pictures, lands, furniture to his widow.

Will Broken in High Court.

The sons fought the will in the Probate Court, but it was allowed. The sons appealed to the Supreme Court, where it was heard before a jury. The trial ended in a disagreement. The jury stood six to six. At the second trial the will was broken.

The case attracted great attention all over the State. The statements made by Mr. Moran on the stump in regard to it were among the strongest points in his campaigning.

In this regard, Killion and Cronan, whose arrests have been ordered by Mr. Moran, yesterday were asked by a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter what they had to say about the published statements in which their names were used.

"I deny," said Killion, "the statements attributed to me."

"I refuse," said Cronan, "to say anything concerning the truth of the statement attributed to me."

WOMAN FIGHTS DOG TO SAVE GIRL, BUT IS CRUELLY TORN

In a desperate and unequal battle with a bad dog, Mrs. Mary A. Drew of Laurente court, Medford, was terribly bitten yesterday while saving Marian Sargent, a twelve-year-old girl, from the fangs of the infuriated animal. Mrs. Drew was taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital, where everything has been done to ward off a possible attack of hydrophobia. The dog was killed by Policeman George H. Lenox after a chase which lasted all of two hours and in which several policemen and many citizens joined.

The dog, which was a finely bred Boston terrier and a great pet of the Drew family, was with Mrs. Drew and several small children in the house yesterday shortly after the noon hour. The children and the dog had been romping around playing at games when the dog, growling, sprang at little Marian Sargent.

The rush of the animal was so fierce and impetuous that the little girl was thrown to the floor, the dog tearing savagely at her clothing.

Mrs. Drew leaped to the rescue of the little one. She managed to drag the dog away [illegible]. The rest of the children [illegible] the room shrieking for help.

CZAR IN FEAR OF LIFE TO ABDICATE, SAYS PARIS RUMOR

Ruler Now On Cruise Said to Have Decided Not to Return to St. Petersburg

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Sept. 22.—According to a news agency [illegible] from Paris there is a rumor in the French capital that the Czar of Russia, who is now cruising in Finnish waters aboard the Imperial yacht, has decided not to return to St. Petersburg and that this is taken as a virtual step towards his abdication.

This report is believed here to have grown out of an afternoon despatch which intimated that the Czarina would come to [illegible] ing and for a protracted stay because of the recent threats made against the royal family by the terrorists.

In diplomatic circles it is said that the Emperor is in a state of great despondency since the discovery of the recent plot to assassinate him at the Trepoff funeral and that he may decide to remain away from his capital for some time.

CHOSEN BY ACCLAMATION TO LEAD PEOPLE'S FIGHT

E. Gerry Brown of Brockton for Second Place—Great Demonstration at Mention of W. R. Hearst's Name.

FOR GOVERNOR, JOHN B. MORAN.

FOR STATE AUDITOR, THOMAS L. HISGEN OF SPRINGFIELD.

[illegible] scenes of enthusiasm such as have not been witnessed in a political convention in Boston for years, amid cheers that caused Faneuil Hall to rock, while delegates [illegible] and waved hundreds of American flags, the Independence League of Massachusetts, at its first convention, late yesterday [illegible] chose as its standard bearer the fearless district attorney of Suffolk County, John B. Moran, and as his associate a man who for more than a quarter of a century has fought the battles of labor, E. Gerry Brown of Brockton.

When former Congressman M. J. M'Ettrick of Ward 17, Boston, in an eloquent speech placed the name of Mr. Moran before the convention, the delegates went wild. They cheered, stamped and yelled. They stood on their chairs, waving their hats and American flags. Leader Fielding started his band in the balcony on "America," but the strains could not be heard.

MARCH WITH FLAGS, WILDLY CHEERING.

At the rear of the hall, George Davis, president of the Ward 8 Independent League, seized the banner under which he sat and started for the platform, every member of his delegation following. Each delegation swung into line, the chairman carrying the banner, until every delegate in the hall was in line all waving flags and cheering.

Up and down the aisles they marched, and the enthusiasm, instead of abating, grew greater as the seconds passed. At last, when they could cheer no more, quiet was restored for a time, but even then the cheers broke out in different sections of the hall every few seconds.

Second only to the demonstration for Mr. Moran was that which ensued when E. Moody Boynton of Essex, in seconding the nomination of Mr. Moran, mentioned the name of William Randolph Hearst.

Again the delegates sprang to their feet, again the flags were waved and again the old "Cradle of Liberty" seemed to sway, as cheer after cheer was given with a heartiness that left no doubt in the minds of the spectators as to the feelings of the delegates.

When Mr. Brown was placed in nomination by Herbert Bryant of Springfield the enthusiasm broke forth afresh. The gray haired, gray-bearded leader, who has fought so many good fights, sat in his place almost overcome by emotion. His nomination was not uncontested, John S. Gardner of Fall River placing before the convention for the same honor the name of John Golden of the Textile Workers. Mr. Golden's name was lustily cheered, but when it came to a vote the delegates [illegible] a large majority for Mr. Brown. Mr. Gardner at once moved to make the nomination unanimous, which was done amid renewed cheering.

The convention was not a peaceable gathering by any means. There were numerous debates, and many delegates grew excited in championing the cause of different candidates.

MARKS AN EPOCH IN STATE POLITICS.

One of the discordant notes was sounded by George J. Raymond, who, as a delegate from [illegible], seemed disposed to oppose the nomination of Mr. Moran. Mr. Raymond did not take the floor himself, although he did considerable quiet lobbying before the convention opened. He finally left the hall, discomfited.

The first convention of the Independence League marks an epoch in Massachusetts politics. It sounds a note of warning to the leaders of both old parties. It shows that the workingman is at last aroused and realizes fully that by the ballot alone can he better his condition.

The delegates who gathered in convention yesterday grew excited, cheered, yelled, paraded and waved flags and banners. But underneath this there was evident the deep earnestness of the men. They had left their busy tasks in cities and towns from the Berkshires to the Cape to gather in that historic hall, where so many blows for freedom have been struck, to strike one more for their rights, for their liberty, for their existence.

They knew what they wanted, and when the chairman of the committee on resolutions, E. Gerry Brown, read the platform that had been drawn up, he was heard with closest attention and frequently interrupted by hearty cheers.

The delegates began to gather at the hall more than two hours before the convention was called to order. They passed the time discussing the movement and [illegible] and all expressed the belief that the time had come when the great mass of people of the State should take the reins into their own hands.

The convention was called to order by J. F. Davis, secretary of the State committee, who read the call. Michael S. Drew, of Ward 17, Boston, one of the bitterest enemies of the Curleys in that district, nominated George W. Curtis of Springfield for the position of temporary chairman. Mr. Curtis was chosen, and, in a brief speech, declared the convention open.

EVERY DISTRICT IN STATE REPRESENTED.

As Mr. Curtis took the gavel he faced over 300 delegates. Each delegation represented a senatorial district, every district in the State being represented.

The floor was divided into sections, each section being marked by a banner bearing the name of the district.

It was on the selection of Mr. Curtis as temporary chairman that George J. Raymond made his first objection. It was based on the fact that Mr. Curtis favored Mr. Moran, but he was quickly shouted down.

Chairman Curtis named J. F. Davis as secretary of the convention and M. L. Berkowitz as assistant secretary. He then announced the committees, four in number, with twenty members on each. A recess of an hour was then taken to allow the committees to perform their duties.

During the recess the floor of the hall was a busy place. Members of the committee on credentials were hustling in and out among the delegates, and the delegates themselves gathered in small knots debating the points at issue.

The convention was called to order again at 4 o'clock. Chairman Curtis called for the report of the committee on credentials, and Chairman Thomas L. Hisgen [illegible] delegates present, representing every Senatorial district in the State.

OSGOOD IN CHAIR.

The report of the committee on permanent organization was read after an unsuccessful attempt [illegible] made to make the temporary organization permanent. It contained the name of Hon. William N. Osgood of Boston and Lowell, as permanent chairman, and a list of several vice-chairmen. This report was adopted, as was the report of the committee on credentials, and Mr. Osgood was called to the chair.

As he appeared on the platform he was loudly cheered and there were cries of "What's the matter with Osgood? He's all right!" as he took the gavel from Mr. Curtis.

Mr. Osgood spoke at some length, outlining the work which the League hopes to accomplish and the means it will employ. He was frequently interrupted by applause and several times was heartily cheered when he made some point that particularly appealed to the delegates.

One of these was when he said:

"It may be said without exaggeration that labor organizations, with all their imperfections and occasional mistakes, have done more in modern times to preserve American liberty than any other body of men."

It was cheered again when he denounced as [illegible] those who wanted to join the Independence League [illegible] because they were afraid it would [illegible] their party standing.

"COUNTRY IS FIRST."

"Party should not be placed above country," he declared, "and our timid friends may be informed that the successful party, of whatever designation, will have to adopt our principles."

When outlining the principles of the League, Mr. Osgood was cheered when he spoke of public ownership of natural monopolies, of the election of United States Senators by the people and of [illegible] for the working[illegible] in all matters of [illegible] his welfare.

A [illegible] interested listener was [illegible] of Lynn, the aged [illegible] who had been given a seat on the platform.

At the close of Mr. Osgood's speech, E. Gerry Brown was recognized as chairman of the committee on resolutions. He read the platform of principles, which was received with wild enthusiasm. The report of the committee on rules and order of business was also read and adopted.

Mr. Brown's reading of the platform was interrupted time and again by applause and cheers, but the greatest enthusiasm came when the veteran, drawing himself to his full height, thundered:

"We declare that the power to issue injunctions in labor troubles should be so far limited that the constitutional rights of the individual may be preserved inviolate and trial by jury assured, save for offences committed in the actual presence of the court.

"We demand the absolute indefeasible right to trial by jury in equity cases involving labor injunctions; the right to the establishment of pickets and patrols in a peaceable and reasonable manner if the same be done with the object of obtaining or communicating information, or persuading some persons to work or to abstain from working."

CHEERS FOR MORAN.

Cheers also followed this plank:

"To the end that corruption of the Legislature may be made more difficult hereafter, and that laws affecting the vital interests of the people may be more carefully scrutinized, the Independence League promises to maintain counsel at the State House who shall look after the interests of the people as the interests of the corporations are now watched by the paid representatives of the corporations."

After the adoption of the platform Chairman Osgood announced that nominations for Governor were in order and recognized the Hon. Michael J. McEttrick of Ward 17, Boston. As Mr. McEttrick started for the platform, E. Gerry Brown rose in his place and called for three cheers for "the man who has always stood for the people's rights," and they were given with a will.

Mr. McEttrick made an eloquent speech, at the close of which he placed in nomination as the League candidate for Governor John B. Moran, District Attorney of Suffolk County.

Instantly there was pandemonium. The delegates cheered, waved flags, and finally paraded around the hall led by the league from Ward 8 of Boston. Numerous banners were carried by the delegates bearing inscriptions laudatory of Mr. Moran and of the League. Among them were:

"No longer will graft, criminality and dishonesty be cardinal virtues for office in Ward 17."

"The Ward 17 Independence League is for John B. Moran."

"Independence League, Ward 8, Against Grafters, for Moran."

"Ward 10, Boston, the home of John B. Moran, next Governor."

"Ward 10, Boston—We're solid for Moran. He lives in our ward."

"Bosses no longer—independence for us. Ward 6, Boston."

"Ward 6, Independence League is for Mr. Moran first, last, always."

Independence League, Ward 8, led the parade."

"Wards 8 and 17 are for John B. Moran."

"Moran is nominated. He will win."

The musicians in the balcony did their best with "America" and "The Star Spangled Banner," but they may have as well been silent. Hardly a note was audible on the floor. When partial quiet was restored three cheers and a tiger were given for the newly named candidate and three more for the man who had placed him in nomination.

The Hon. Thomas H. Bates of Ward 21, Boston, was next recognized and mounted the platform to second the nomination of Mr. Moran. In an eloquent speech he praised the fearlessness of the candidate, being frequently interrupted by cheers from the floor. As he mentioned the names of Quincy, Gaston, Sullivan and Thayer his voice was almost drowned by the storm of hisses.

"Who do these men speak for?" he demanded, and from the floor came shouts of "Boston Elevated," "State street," "Kidder Peabody," "Monopoly" and "The Trusts."

Again when he mentioned the name of Quincy cries of "Hee haw" were heard in all parts of the hall.

At the close of Mr. Bates' speech Mr. Brown moved that Mr. Moran be nominated by acclamation. Before the question was put Harry W. Joel of Cambridge secured recognition from the chair, left his seat beside George J. Raymond and mounted the platform. As he did so there were cries of "He's sold out to Raymond," "He's Raymond's agent," "Why don't you get up yourself, Raymond?"

It was some time before Joel could make himself heard, the delegates evidently thinking that he intended to oppose the nomination of Mr. Moran. When he was finally allowed to speak, Mr. Joel said that he was a Moran man, but that he did not believe that any candidate who accepted a nomination from the Independence League also should seek nomination in the Democratic convention.

BY ACCLAMATION.

"We elected him district attorney without a Republican or a Democratic nomination, and we can elect him Governor [illegible]."

Mr. Joel attempted to continue his speech, but his voice was drowned by cheers for Moran. Mr. Drew of Ward 17 raised a point of order that the speaker's time had expired, and when Mr. Joel attempted

PLATFORM OF THE INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE OF MASSACHUSETTS

(Adopted in Convention Yesterday.)

The Independence League of Massachusetts, appealing to Jeffersonian Democrats, Lincoln Republicans and men of independent thought in every party, submits this statement of its principles and purposes:

A crisis has been reached in the governmental [illegible] of this Commonwealth. Shall the citizens of Massachusetts govern themselves, or shall they [illegible]mselves to be governed by the trusts, and for the sole benefit of the trusts? "Corporation contr[illegible] not an empty phrase. It is a cold, hard fact that has impressed itself upon the mind of every th[illegible]an in the State.

So bold and open have the operations of the [illegible]tions become, even in the very State House of the Commonwealth, that the District Attorney of [illegible] County has been forced to appeal to the grand jury to protect the State against its own legislat[illegible]

Actuated by avarice and greed, the corporations attempted by bribery—by the payment of money and the promise of position—to pass measures for strengthening their grip in control of the State and to defeat measures for the good of the whole people.

They caused the defeat of the "overtime" bill—for the benefit of all the workingmen of the Commonwealth—and they secured a judicial position for the man who was chiefly instrumental in its defeat and thus saving the Governor of the State from the embarrassment of having to veto or approve it. Judges should be elected by the people, and not appointed in reward for defeating the will of the people or for services rendered to corrupt party bosses.

They caused the defeat of the bill to abolish gambling in "bucket shops" by such shameless and open bribery that even the guilty legislators were forced to make a pretence of investigation. The forced self-investigation and secret proceedings of the House of Representatives, in which the members sought to clear but not to cleanse themselves under the infamous "immunity" statute, disgraced the State in the eyes of the nation.

They have filled the statute books of the State with laws written by their own agents, for the corporations and against the plain people. This was made patent to all the people last Winter, when it was discovered that they had removed from the statute books every law by which the Boston Coal Trust could be reached when it raised the price of coal to $8 a ton because of the rumor that there would be a strike.

They have enacted laws which make it almost impossible for the city of Boston to establish a municipal lighting plant.

LEAGUE STANDS FOR REAL INDEPENDENCE.

The Independence League stands for independence—independence of corporation or trust control; independence of boss rule; independence of every party subject to corporation control and boss rule. A man who is not independent in life, in thought, and at the polls is not a type of the American citizenship for which men fought and fell at Lexington and Bunker Hill.

The Independence League of Massachusetts demands, in the name of free American citizenship, that every man who loves the flag that flies over him, and who glories in the history of his country, work and vote for the defeat at the polls and the downfall in politics of every candidate who represents or is controlled by the predatory corporations that have debauched the Commonwealth.

The Independence League appeals to Republicans who have been deceived by the Lodges and Drapers, and to Democrats who have been dominated and deluded by the Gastons and Whitneys, to shake off the shackles that have held them and to become such American citizens as Jefferson and Lincoln would have them to be.

The Independence League believes in public ownership of public utilities that are natural monopolies. It stands neither for private confiscation of public property nor public confiscation of private property. It believes in upholding and enforcing every property right. Honesty in office and independence in voting are the prime essentials of successful public ownership. The application of public ownership thus becomes a question for each community to settle for itself.

LOCAL RIGHTS AND HOME RULE.

Respect for local rights and home rule should authorize the enactment of a statute empowering all cities to acquire and operate public necessities, such as gas and electric lighting plants, transportation lines and telephones, the same as waterworks, whenever such cities by a majority vote favor such a course.

Farmers, who have contributed most to this nation, have received less consideration at the hands of the government and of corporations than any other great body of producers. Laws strictly enforced should help to secure to the farmer the actual value of his products. This involves reasonable railroad rates and the destruction of such organizations as the Milk Trust, that stand between the farmer and the consumer, taking the lion's share of the profits.

We believe that the law rendering immune from prosecution those public officials who testify regarding corruption in which they themselves are implicated should be stricken from the statute books, and that laws should be passed to insure the punishment of bribe givers and bribe takers.

To the end that corruption of the Legislature may be made more difficult hereafter, and that laws affecting the vital interests of the people may be more carefully scrutinized, the Independence League promises to maintain at the State House during all sessions of the Legislature expert legal counsel who shall look after the interests of the people, as the interests of the corporations are now watched by the paid representatives of the corporations.

INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM.

We favor the Initiative and Referendum, and the enactment of laws through which the people may be given control of their public servants in office.

We favor the direct nomination of all candidates, so that the will of the people may not be perverted by party machines or corporate power.

We favor good roads, pure food laws, and just and equitable railway rates.

The principle of the eight-hour day is an accepted feature of economic life in America. Government—national, State and local—should set a good example as an employer. The eight-hour day, with the prevailing rate of wages, as provided by law, should be strictly enforced in public contracts and in public work, and the Child Labor law, the Compulsory Education law, the act relating to contract prison labor, together with the laws requiring sanitary inspection of all mines, tunnels, workshops and dwellings, should receive the unremitting attention of the officials charged with their enforcement.

We declare that the power to issue injunctions in labor troubles should be so far limited that the constitutional rights of the individual may be preserved inviolate and trial by jury assured, save for offences committed in the actual presence of the court.

We demand the absolutely indefeasible right to trial by jury in equity cases involving labor injunctons; the right to the establishment of pickets and patrols in a peaceable and reasonable manner if the same be done with the object of obtaining or communicating informaton, or persuading some persons to work or to abstain from working.

We demand for our women and children adequate protection against overtime work, as provided in the bill which was killed by a minority of the present State Senate through trickery and fraud.

RECOGNITION OF LABOR UNIONS.

We favor the recognition of labor unions in every legitimate endeavor they may make to regulate the pay and working hours of the working people.

Standing for the protection by law of legitimate capital and its enterprises, we deny the right of existence to criminal and oppressive trusts.

We favor the election of United States Senators by a direct vote of the people.

We demand a stricter enforcement of laws regulating insurance and financial institutions, to the end that poor people may be protected against the wiles of disguised money sharks who pose as financiers and bankers.

Common honesty in public service, the rule of the majority, equality before the law, regard for the welfare of the whole people, independence in politics, opportunity in business, freedom of the government from the grip of corporation control—these are the principles for which the Independence League is prepared to battle.

We ask in support of these principles the co-operation of all American citizens of all parties who love the land of their birth or adoption.

POINTS APPLAUDED IN OSGOOD'S SPEECH

"ARE the citizens of the greatest republic of all time of such poor quality and so wanting in civic virtue and character that they are incapable of self-government?"

"It may be said without exaggeration that labor organizations, with all their imperfections and occasional mistakes, have done more in modern times to preserve American liberty than any other body of men."

"If the labor unions of this country have achieved no greater triumph than to hold their members cemented together until it has become possible to enlist other citizens with them in a common cause, they would be justly and fairly entitled to the everlasting gratitude of their fellow-citizens."

"Our timid friends may be informed that the successful party of whatever designation will have to adopt our principles." From speech of Chairman Osgood in Faneuil Hall convention.

Independence League Convention Earnest As Well As Enthusiastic

By Clement L. Pollock.

The editor asked me to write a few words about the convention at Faneuil Hall yesterday. He wanted my impressions.

That's what I'm going to give here. I'm not going to write more—just my impressions.

Enthusiasm for Moran.

You'll hear a lot about the enthusiasm. How at the mention of the name of John B. Moran the people got on their feet, howling, and pranced about sanctified Faneuil Hall.

That will be told in every honest story that is written of that convention.

But the enthusiasm was not the thing that particularly appealed to me. I know something of conventions. I know something of delegates.

Yesterday's demonstration in the way of cheers, hand-clapping and other more or less surface demonstrations were not the things that appealed to me especially.

The quiet, undemonstrative action of the serious men gathered there was what made an impression on me. Men cheered. Men got on their feet, paraded through the hall, yelled. That may mean something. It may mean nothing.

In this particular case, to me it meant a lot. The enthusiasm was not manufactured. It was spontaneous. It was earnest, heartfelt.

But far beyond this was what might be called the repressive force of the convention, the intense feeling that dominated it.

Out for Principle Alone.

That was it. The men in that convention were not out for anything except for principle.

I have been at a great many conventions, State and national. Yesterday's of the Independence League of Massachusetts was, to my mind, the most peculiarly representative and the most enthusiastic I have ever seen.

DEMONSTRATIONS AFTER CONVENTION HAD CLOSED

Following the adjournment of the Independence League convention outside of Faneuil Hall a very patriotic spirit was manifested. Flags were waved, cheers raised, and the Cambridge delegation, headed by two large banners bearing the name of their organization, paraded the streets. Cheer after cheer rang out for the candidates and the success of the Independence League. This was kept up until after the members of the delegation boarded their cars.

The Worcester delegates, headed by James S. Noonan, formed in line. They had obtained a banner bearing the inscription, "John B. Moran, our next Governor," and on the other side, "We are out for the 'Man Who Dares.'" The delegation marched through many of the streets and shouted for the success of their candidates.

The Quincy delegation, headed by Delegate Corprew, formed in line and left the hall singing a song ending with the refrain: "We are out for John B. Moran."

Young America also made himself manifest, and many well formed and large formations of young boys, with tin pans, banners, torches and everything that goes forth to make up a genuine big election parade, were in evidence in many parts of the city. The banners were for Moran and the Independence League. The youngsters cheered lustily, and they kept up their celebration into early morning.

Springfield Men Enthuse.

Great interest was taken in the convention by the large number of spectators in the gallery.

Frank Hall of Roxbury said: "I had thought the movement was to start another political machine. I expected to see everything run off here this afternoon in prearranged order. I have seen a spirit of independence. You can rest assured that I will become a member of the League."

James Matterson of East Boston, said: "It is seldom that I can give any matter so long attention. I have enjoyed the convention and I have learned more about honest politics than I ever did before. My views are now changed. I can't seem to find one single reason why I should not become a member of the Independence League."

"I Glory in the Movement."

John Hutchinson of Lynn, who has witnessed many political movements in Faneuil Hall, and who was a close friend of President Lincoln, with his wife occupied a seat in the gallery. Talking to surrounding spectators he said: "I glory in this movement as I did in the great anti-slavery movement. The latter movement saved our grand and noble country, and all I can say is that I am 85 years old now, gray and probably of no more use, but I wish God would grant me the opportunity to live to witness the Independent League accomplish the great good which it has in its platform."

Howard James of Brockton, who was an enthusiastic spectator, said: "I have steadily watched the progress of the League. I like to find out what a new organization can accomplish before I become a member. I will surely now become a member, and I tell you when I go in for a thing I go in to win a fight."

HEARST AND CHANLER TO ADDRESS MONSTER RALLY

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Sept. 22. The mass meeting which is to be held in Madison Square Garden under the auspices of the Independence League and the Municipal Reform Alliance, on the night of next Friday, promises to be the greatest event of the kind in the political history of the city.

William Randolph Hearst and Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler, candidates respectively for Governor and Lieutenant Governor on the Independence League ticket, will be the principal speakers.

Mr. Hearst has already addressed his fellow citizens at the Cooper Union meeting over a week ago, but the Madison Square Garden meeting will in reality be the opening gun of the campaign here.

Elaborate Program of Music.

Nathan Franko, leader of the Metropolitan Opera House orchestra, will be in charge of the musical program. A famous orchestra will be in attendance, [illegible] been engaged and a special chorus of 500 voices which will lead the singing of patriotic airs at various times throughout the evening.

At the overflow meetings a long list of prominent orators will address those who are unable to gain access to the Garden proper.

Among those speakers are a number of men who have recently joined in the Independence League movement against the bosses and corporate interests. The stage will be arranged along the Twenty-sixth street side of the Garden, thus giving an opportunity for at least 12,000 persons to hear Mr. Hearst, Mr. Chandler, Mr. Shearn and the other speakers.

The Madison Square Garden meeting following closely in the train of the Cooper Union demonstration, and the big popular meetings up State will still more strongly focus public interest on the fight now being made for independence in political thought and action.

Prior to the Madison Square Garden meeting Mr. Hearst will speak at Rome next Wednesday upon the invitation of the managers of the Oneida County Agricultural Society, which will hold one of the largest county fairs in the State during this week. Mr. Hearst will there deliver a speech replete with interest to his fellow citizens of the Empire State. Invitations have also been accepted by Mr. Hearst to speak at the Duchess County Fair Association on Thursday, the 27th. The day following Lewis Stuyvesant Chandler, candidate for lieutenant governor on the Independent League ticket, who is a native son of Duchess County, will also make an address.

After the Madison Square Garden mass meeting, Mr. Hearst's personal campaign throughout the State will begin. His managers have marked out a whirlwind journey North, East, South and West and the voters of the State will have an opportunity to hear him and the other candidates of the Independence League ticket.

It is Mr. Hearst's intention thoroughly to canvass the State in a campaign which will continue until the night before election, when he will probably end his tour with a final address to the people in some great auditorium in this city.

Thrilling Keynote for Reform Campaign in Convention Speech of Chairman Osgood

'GIVE THE GOVERNMENT BACK INTO HANDS OF THE PEOPLE'

Demands Restoration of Public Functions Which Have Been Delegated, Often Corruptly, to Private Persons or Corporations at Expense of the General Welfare.

URGES DESTRUCTION OF THE POWER OF PARTY BOSSES AND THEIR AGENTS

Permanent Chairman William N. Osgood, in his ringing address to the delegates at the Independence League State convention, said:

"The time for united political action by the real sovereigns of this republic has arrived. This [illegible] thoughtful and earnest citizens, representing the various [illegible] in life, at [illegible] place replete with associations of liberty is ample evidence that the spirit of American independence still lives.

"In 1776 we fought British tories and their king because they sought to exploit the colonists by levying unjust taxes and denying them the right to participate in their own government.

"In 1906 we find ourselves confronted by domestic tories equally intent on exploiting and unjustly taxing their own countrymen and equally engaged in an inhuman attempt to destroy popular self-government.

"As George the Third strove to suppress in old times our ancestors with the aid of Hessian hirelings, so a modern plutocracy with the assistance of servile political bosses and other mercenaries seeks to arrogate to itself the government of the American people.

"As we succeeded in the past in securing national independence, so we shall now succeed in securing industrial and political [illegible]

"Since the Civil War there has been no true political organization of our citizens. We have had nominal parties and active and real party machinery and that is all. It is absolutely necessary that we have something more than mere parties loosely constituted with no definite plan of action other than that the servile members are expected to heed the beck and nod of political bosses and leaders.

"Not a Failure Until Tried."

"If we honestly and sincerely believe in government by the people we must form in every city and town popular organizations which shall have a well defined line of action, expressed clearly in a declaration of conservative principles carefully prepared by careful and thoughtful men. In no other way can we divorce the control of our public affairs from the bosses and their agents.

"During recent years wage earners in their industrial unions have been almost the only organized force in favor of popular rights. It may be said without exaggeration that labor organizations, with all their imperfections and occasional mistakes, have done more in modern times to preserve American liberty than any other body of men. Should anyone question that assertion, let him tell me what would happen if they were ruthlessly and cruelly destroyed by their foes. That possible calamity beggars description. Longer hours for working people, women and children competing even more than now with their husbands and fathers, reduced wages, enforced idleness and ignorance, an ever-increasing army of criminals and tramps such as the world has never seen.

"If the labor unions of this country have achieved no greater triumph than to hold their members cemented together until it has become possible to enlist other citizens with them in a common cause, they would be justly and fairly entitled to the everlasting gratitude of their fellow citizens.

A Question for Thought.

"'Are the citizens of the greatest republic of all time of such poor quality and so wanting in civic virtue and character that they are incapable of self-government?'

"If the American people, through indifference and inactivity in the present crisis, answer this question in the affirmative, it gives aid and comfort to the enemies of democratic institutions, excites the exultation of foreign kings and aristocracies at home, as well as abroad, and means, if not the ruin of the republic, continued and intensified enslavement of our people for generations yet to come.

"This movement of ours, therefore, becomes of the greatest importance. It will help demonstrate whether we as a republic are a great and glorious success or a dismal and ignominious failure. A grave responsibility rests upon us. For one—and I feel that I but voice the sentiment of those whom I see before me—I do not admit that Americans are unworthy and incapable of preserving our institutions.

"You are ready to follow the principles of the Independence League for self-government to the very end. [illegible] but [illegible] of the republic will [illegible] in sane and cease all [illegible] with [illegible]

"The Independence League opposes political bossism and the alliance between the bosses of opposite parties.

"It favors the restoration to the people of their own government as originally established by its founders.

"It advocates popular government in fact as well as theory.

"It believes that the people should have a more direct control over their representatives; that they should retain in their own hands a reasonable exercise of their sovereignty, even during the time intervening between election days.

"It believes that nominations should be made openly by the people and not secretly by cliques and party bosses.

"It believes in the abolition of the lobby.

"It believes in all legitimate efforts properly to regulate the pay and working hours of working people.

"It believes in the protection of legitimate capital and is opposed to monopolies and criminal trusts.

"It believes in the election of United States Senators by the people.

"It believes in the public ownership of natural monopolies.

"To carry out our principles political action is peremptorily demanded and that can only be effective when the people form organizations like the Independence League. We must cease to be isolated critics and become a concentrated army of aggressive constructionists. We must build and not tear down.

"We decline to surrender our adherence to the American theory in form of government. The teachings of the founders were honest. The heroes of the Revolution should not be held responsible for ills existing under modern conditions which they could not anticipate. They are fairly and justly entitled to imperishable fame and glory for the important part they played in the great drama of human events. If wrongs now obtain, the fault is not theirs but ours.

Must Regain Rights.

"It is an insult to their sacred memories to hold them accountable for these wrongs. It should also be an insult to say of their descendants that they have not the spirit and the courage to regain the rights and privileges which have been wrested from them.

"We can render no nobler and grander service to ourselves and fellow citizens and humanity than to continue with unabated zeal in our task to overthrow monopoly and special privilege. It is certain that no spot on this earth is a more fitting place to resolve to battle for liberty and equal opportunity.

"We cannot hope to build as the fathers builded. It is not necessary that we should so build. Our duty is to preserve and transmit to posterity unimpaired what they have bequeathed to us. May it never be said by those who are to follow us that we were remiss in our duty to them. May they rather in some degree have reason to respect us as we respect those who have preceded us. The future progress and happiness of this country are threatened by a plutocracy of monopolies and trusts, by special privileges secured from corrupt political bosses and their representatives. These hostile forces must be destroyed by a political organization of patriotic and progressive citizens. Divided, the people are weak; united and aroused, they will be irresistible in action, as the incoming of the ocean when stirred by the elements. One of two things is in store for us—destruction of monopoly and special privilege or the destruction of liberty and the republic. Which shall it be?

"It is our fervent prayer that God may be on the side of the republic and visit its enemies with discomfiture and confusion."

Marvels at Enthusiasm as Independence Delegates Shake Old Faneuil Hall With Lusty Cheers.

Cheers, music, cheers, speeches, cheers, waving flags, banner parades, more cheers, more speeches and again and above all cheers, cheers, cheers. So the Independence League of Massachusetts was born yesterday in Faneuil Hall, and John B. Moran nominated for Governor.

It was distinctly a gathering of the people, speaking through the [illegible] for the people. The very timber of Faneuil Hall must have creaked in sympathy with [illegible] days when the oppressing Tory hand was [illegible] lifted, has the building heard [illegible] to resume his speech, the cheers broke out afresh, forcing him to silence. Mr. Gardner, of Fall River, appealed for fair play and Mr. Joel was allowed to finish his speech.

As he left the platform, E. Gerry Brown was recognized. Mr. Brown declared that this would not be the first time that a candidate had accepted more than one nomination, and cited the case of William J. Bryan, who in the spring of 1900 accepted the Populist nomination for the Presidency, and later in the year was nominated by the Democratic party.

Mr. Brown also spoke of the threat made by Josiah Quincy to refuse Mr. Moran recognition in the Democratic convention on the ground that he was no longer a Democrat, and said:

"If Quincy and Gaston declare that Mr. Moran has no standing in the Democratic convention, any candidate that they may nominate will have no standing in the hearts of the voters of the Commonwealth."

"They say Mr. Moran would lose his Democracy if he took the same action that Bryan took, after which Mr. Quincy endorsed him—or says he did—as a good enough Democrat to run for President."

E. Moody Boynton was recognized to second the nomination of Mr. Moran for Essex County, and in the course of his speech, started a demonstration for William Randolph Hearst that almost equalled that given to Mr. Moran.

James Noonan of Worcester seconded the nomination for that county, characterizing John A. Sullivan as a "professor of 'con-ology.'" When Chairman Osgood put the question as to whether it was the will of the convention that Mr. Moran be nominated by acclamation, there was a yell "Aye," that shook the building, and again the cheers for Moran broke forth.

MOVED A RECESS.

At this, Chairman Osgood appointed a committee, composed of Hon. M. J. McEttrick, Hon. Thomas H. Bates, and Hon. E. Gerry Brown, to wait upon Mr. Moran and inform him of the nomination.

At this point a motion was made that a recess be taken until 8 o'clock, but after some debate it was defeated. The delegates preferred to finish the business of the convention as expeditiously as possible.

George J. Raymond, standing in the middle aisle, directly in front of the chairman, then obtained recognition.

"I have one question to ask," he said.

For some little time he was unable to ask it. The delegates cheered for Moran whenever Mr. Raymond attempted to speak. Finally he said:

"I would like to know if this is a meeting of the Independence League of Massachusetts or a Moran meeting?"

"Both," came yells from the floor. Mr. Raymond started for the door. As he passed out of the hall, some delegate called for three cheers and a tiger for Moran, and the sound of them followed Mr. Raymond down the stairs.

When quiet was restored, John S. Gardner of Fall River was recognized to place in nomination as a candidate for lieutenant-governor, John Golden, general president of the United Textile Workers Union of America. The nomination was seconded by Edwin R. Fairbanks, of Lynn.

Herbert Bryant of Springfield, organizer of the Iron Moulders' Union presented to the convention as Springfield's candidate for Lieutenant Governor the name of E. Gerry Brown of Brockton. He was loudly cheered, as was James E. Kelley of Brockton, who seconded the nomination.

Groans and hisses followed Mr. Bryant's exposure—for the first time—of Lieutenant Governor Draper's treatment of the moulders' [illegible] just before the last election.

Michael [illegible] moved that a rising vote be taken and the motion was adopted.

MADE UNANIMOUS.

Chairman Osgood appointed as tellers, John E. Dempsey of Fall River, representing Mr. Golden, and M. J. Hennessey of Springfield, representing Mr. Brown. When those who favored the nomination of Mr. Golden were asked to stand, about a score arose. When they were seated, and those in favor of Mr. Brown's nomination were called upon, it seemed as if every man in the hall sprang to his feet. So overwhelming was the vote that the supporters of Mr. Brown were not counted, and Mr. Gardner who had nominated Mr. Golden, at once moved to make the vote unanimous. This was done, amid cries of speech, speech! Mr. Bryant then called for three cheers for the defeated candidate, and they were given with a will.

Mr. Brown advanced to the platform but gave way for Richard A. Hennessey, who placed in nomination for the office of State Auditor Thomas L. Hisgen of Springfield, "the only man in the State," he said, "who had fought the Standard Oil Company and won every round."

Mr. Hisgen was unanimously nominated by the convention.

In accepting the nomination for lieutenant [illegible] Brown pointed dramatically to the patriots of the Revolution depicted in the large painting over the platform and said:

This alone is Americanism in the broad sense of that universal religion in which men to-day appeal for our rightful share of the bounties and blessings God meant for us all.

It is our rights we seek, our natural and human rights, and we ask it in the name of a common brotherhood, an American brotherhood, of head, hand and heart, of one hope, one family, one humanity, and [illegible]

This hope and this humanity I believe to be written in plain, truthful language on the banner of John B. Moran, whom I now have the honor and very great pleasure of naming as a candidate before this convention for Governor on the ticket of the Independence League of Massachusetts.

[illegible] Mother, teach me to receive and accept everything from the hands of God and to say [illegible] the depths of a heart perfectly submissive to the divine will: Be it done unto me, according to [illegible] His adorable designs be accomplished in me, at all times, in all places, and in all things. Amen. [illegible] for her recovery.

Tewksbury Hospital Inmate Quits Wheel Chair in Good Health.

PHYSICIANS ASTOUNDED

After suffering nine years as a paralytic [illegible] years in a wheel chair [illegible] step [illegible] Miss Aldea Houle [illegible] from her chair and walked [illegible] in the State Hospital [illegible] Tewksbury.

[illegible] Aldea Houle.

[illegible] prayer, her [illegible] fourteen years old, in the Holy Family community at Rigaud, Canada, prayed fervently for the recovery of the paralytic.

[illegible] ago, Aldea [illegible] to Lowell [illegible] St. Jean Baptist Church [illegible] kindness to her.

[illegible]

A young man who knows Aldea Houle lately went to Rigaud, Canada. [illegible] from the cured woman telling of her ability to walk. [illegible] turned to the man and said she [illegible]

"I always knew that Cousin Aldea would walk again."

Relatives Convinced.

Aldea Houle is living with her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Clement, at No. 414 Broadway, in Lowell. [illegible] They [illegible] the [illegible]

When [illegible] at their little home in [illegible] Aldea Houle's thoughts turned to [illegible] father and brothers had died years [illegible] and she was left alone to fight her battle of life. She was thirty years old, but had lived a sheltered, secluded life, and the idea of going out into the world alone appalled her.

So Aldeae Houle wrote to the Clements in Lowell. They had a family of ten, they had a house full of boarders and they ran a hand laundry.

"How [illegible] Aldea?" said the aunt. But Louis Clement with all the largess of a French Canadian answered:

"We'll make room for just one more."

Helps Kinspeople

For a few years Aldea Houle lived in the Clement family, helping [illegible] with the work. Her great [illegible] was the care of [illegible]

One day [illegible] fainted at her work. [illegible] was pronounced [illegible] fever. She was taken to St. John's Hospital, where she was [illegible] months. The fever left her a [illegible] able to take one step. [illegible] not afford to [illegible] Aldea was sent to Tewksbury.

[illegible] in a wheel chair Aldea [illegible] Hers was the [illegible]

Of [illegible] the Clements. When little Aurore [illegible] she wrote to her cousin. Aurore was an [illegible] In her room [illegible] an altar [illegible] her younger brother Edmond prayed for the afflicted cousin.

Announced Intention.

Aurore went to the French sisters' school. She was [illegible] and praying [illegible] When she was [illegible] ten she solemnly [illegible] to her parents that she intended to be a nun.

[illegible] a take possession of [illegible] Aurore persuaded the sisters [illegible] enter a community in [illegible] she was only fourteen years [illegible] for her permission [illegible] become a nun in Pegaird, Canada.

In M[illegible] Aurore Clement took her first vow. She wears the garb and head dress of a nun [illegible] her two long black shining braids were sent to her mother in Lowell.

In two years she takes her second vow, and ten years after that will take the vow that will bar her from all the world. She will become a cloistered nun.

Soon after Aurore became a sister she wrote her Cousin Aldea in Tewksbury to begin forty days of prayer on a certain day in May.

Begins Prayers.

Aldea Houle borrowed a French prayer book called the "Guardian Angel" from a patient, and began her prayers. She went through all the prayers of the Stations of the Cross and the prayers to Saint Mary, and also made the novena.

On July 26, St. Anne's Day, she arose and walked with ease about her room. But until she was sure of her cure, Aldea Houle would not go to Lowell, because she knew her relatives were hard-working people and had no place for an invalid. A few weeks ago she knocked at their door and surprised them.

At Tewksbury she was discharged and given her railroad ticket, but no carfare. So she walked from the depot to No. 414 Broadway, a distance of half a mile.

One glance at Aldea Houle's face shows she is unutterably happy. Her cure has made the Clements doubly happy, for they feel that their little daughter's [illegible] has not been in vain. And the doctors at Tewksbury declare that Aldea Houle's cure is one of those rare cases that is unexplainable in the medical world.

WILL TRY TO STOP THEFT OF LUMBER

Muskogee, I. T., Sept. 22.—G. W. Huckins, a special representative of the Indian inspector here, has been sent to the Choctaw Nation, where he is trying to run down timber thieves, who are accused of illegally cutting timber from the public domain and from the allotments of Indian minors.

The penalty for timber stealing is confiscation of the timber and the arrest and fine or imprisonment of the thieves.

WILLIAMS CALLS 'SEVEN'S' APPEAL 'LAST CRY OF PAIN'

"Moran Will Be Nominated by Democratic Convention," Says George Fred in Interview.

George Fred Williams said to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter last night:

"A newspaper headline describes the cry of pain from the search-light committee as the 'Last appeal against Moran.' Assuredly, it is the very last.

"Mr. Moran will be nominated. If the convention supports him and Mr. Bryan in the policy of ejecting corporation servants from the organization, he will be elected. The points made in the cry are as follows:

"First—'These gentlemen do not like Mr. Moran's qualifications for the Governorship.'

"This is his highest recommendation.

"2nd. 'Mr. Moran has investigated corruption in the Legislature.'

"Yes, he is the first district attorney to move in such matters or compel the Legislature to punish its bribers. The Democracy may now choose between him and Mr. Quincy, who helped in 1890 to whitewash the corruption of the West End Street Railway Company, which I had exposed. Mr. Henry M. Whitney is an excellent candidate to place in opposition to Mr. Moran on such an issue.

"3rd. Mr. Moran has accomplished little in his present office.

"He has restored the grand jury to its high function as inquisitor of crime. He has tried to do his duty. He is the only district attorney who is dreaded by the big criminals. This will make him Governor.

"4th. 'He discriminates between his friends and enemies as a public prosecutor.'

"Yes, if his 'friends' are the honest citizens and his 'enemies' are the criminals, high and low. Otherwise the charge is an outrageous slander.

"5th. 'Mr. Moran has been independent in politics.'

"Has independence only been an offence, since Mr. Quincy, Democratic Mayor of Boston, insulted the presidency candidate of the party by refusing to recognize or receive him?

"If Mr. Moran had announced his purpose to [illegible] the action of the Democratic convention, the party organization would not have been forced to protect the integrity of Democracy, by taking the field against him.'

"This statement contains a falsehood—the "party organization" has never taken art against Mr. Moran. The statement declares that Mr. Quincy and Mr. Lyman, signers, regard themselves as the organization while they are serving the Republican party in their official capacities.

"6th.—'The tariff issue will be sidetracked.'

"The convention and the campaign audiences will determine what prominence this issue shall have.

"7th—'Mr. Whitney would accept the call of the convention.'

But who has called Mr. Whitney except these bolters from the State committee, who represent about six votes? Let the curtain fall on this farce!"

YOUNG POLITICIANS OPPOSE QUINCY AND SULLIVAN IN WARD 11

Josiah Quincy and John A. Sullivan are making the fight of their lives to be elected as delegate from Ward [illegible] to the Democratic State Convention.

These two self-constituted protectors of Democracy have associated with them on the delegation Thomas J. Gargan, a Rapid Transit commissioner, who is now abroad, Charles H. Cole, former [illegible] and Henry A. Frothingham, a one-time Alderman.

They are opposed by five young men under the leadership of ex-Alderman William F. Donovan. His associates are Francis J. Barry, Robert J. Campbell, Frank F. Kenny and Peter J. Hughes.

The Quincy-Sullivan delegation use the subterfuge of "no pledges," when in reality they are for Henry M. Whitney. The ticket headed by William F. Donovan is favorable to John B. Moran's candidacy. In his statement to the voters of Ward 11 Chairman Donovan says:

"Messrs. Quincy and Sullivan, chief opponents of Mr. Moran, are endeavoring to find somebody who will compete with Mr. Moran. The defeat of this unpledged ticket will be a fitting rebuke to these self-constituted leaders of the party, whose chief mission at the present time seems to be to destroy it and thus secure the election of the Republican candidate."

O'CONNELL REPLIES TO LOGAN, PLANS FINISH BY WHIRLWIND TOUR

A mass meeting in the interest of Joseph O'Connell, candidate for Congress in the Tenth District, was held in Washington [illegible] Dorchester, last night. Mr. O'Connell was the principal speaker, and replied to Edward J. Logan's attacks on his Democracy by declaring that his voice was heard [illegible] election of Josiah Quincy [illegible] General Collins on three occasions [illegible] the latter ran and every one [illegible] that he did as much as any [illegible] for the election of Mayor Fitzgerald.

Mr. O'Connell has planned a whirlwind [illegible] campaign to-morrow. To-[illegible] speak at the following places: [illegible] League, Jubilee Hall, [illegible] Hall, Mattapan, Dor[illegible] Fields Corner, Pott[illegible] Ward 15, and Parish [illegible] Ward 16.

[illegible] Mr. O'Connell will speak [illegible] Hall, Ward 13; Gray's [illegible] Crow Hall, Ward 15; Dun[illegible] Hill Avenue, Ward 16; [illegible] Hall, Ward 17; Headquarters Young Men's Democratic Club of Ward 20; [illegible] Centre Street, Ward 20, and [illegible] Hall, Dorchester, Lower Mills.

BROOKLINE TO SEND WHITNEY DELEGATES DESPITE LAW'S EDICT.

Since the announcement was made by the Mystic Seven that Henry M. Whitney would be a candidate for Governor against John B. Moran, the Brookline Democratic aristocracy, under the leadership of G. Loring Briggs, have decided to elect delegates to the convention although having no legal right to do so.

Mr. Briggs said to-day: "We in Brookline are subject to the Boston caucus law and the failure to file a delegation as required by law deprives us of representation.

"We can and intend to hold a caucus under the old law to elect delegates next Wednesday evening and as they will be pledged to Whitney the convention will be called upon to decide whether they are entitled to a seat in the convention."

HUTCHINSON PUTS MANY EMBARRASSING QUERIES TO GOV. GUILD

Ex-Senator L. P. Hutchinson, former chairman of the Republican City Committee, wants Governor Guild to explain several matters to the people. They are as follows:

"Why did he intercept action on the overt [illegible]?

"Why did he disregard the right of the people [illegible] in the Tucker case when 150,000 people asked for a hearing?

"Why he was so solicitous for the welfare of the wealthy hotel keepers that he wanted them to be allowed to keep open until 12 o'clock?

"Why he evades responsibility for legislation intended for the benefit of the people?"

Ex-Senator Hutchinson is of the opinion that Governor Guild should retire from public life and make way for leaders whom he thinks have minds of their own, and who can decide without wavering. The ex-Senator suggests as a substitute for Governor Guild, the nomination of Lieutenant-Governor Draper for first place and Eugene N. Foss for second place.

$26,000 VERDICT WON BY WOMAN.

Saco, Me., Sept. 22.—A verdict of $26,260 was rendered in the Supreme Court to-day in favor of Mrs. Perexide Liberty of Saco, who sued to recover from the estate of Samuel Haines, for many years superintendent of the cotton mills in Greenville, N. H., $40,000 for services as his nurse. An appeal has been taken.

RICHLY DRESSED SUICIDE, UNIDENTIFIED, BAFFLES ALL EFFORTS OF POLICE

SUICIDE WHOSE IDENTITY MYSTIFIES POLICE.

Sketch shows unidentified man just after the tragedy in the Public Garden, as drawn by Artist Marsh, who was passing through the garden when the well-dressed stranger fell dead from self-inflicted pistol wound.

No identification has been made of the aged, well-dressed man who committed suicide in the Public Garden on Friday night by shooting himself through the temple. The body is at the morgue of the City Hospital, but up to an early hour this morning no one had called to even look at it.

That the man contemplated taking his life there is no doubt, for he attempted destroying every possible clue, even to doing away with the name on his hat band. When the clothing was examined at the morgue, a mark which the man had overlooked was discovered and this is the only clue by which the police hope to establish his identity. It is "X 74," the marks placed on clothing sent to hand laundries.

The man showed every signs of refinement. His hands were snowy white, his nails were manicured, his false teeth filled with gold and his clothing of the best texture. The police and morgue authorities think that he was a professional man of some sort. He wore a Scotch tweed suit of dark brown material, a black derby hat, a pair of the latest style shoes and [illegible] union underwear.

Residents of Arlington street say that [illegible] a man answering the description of the suicide in that vicinity several times during the past month. He was always alone and seemed to be in the best of spirits.

Patrolman Palmer of Station 16 heard a revolver shot while he was in Arlington street, near the entrance to the Garden. He hurried to the direction from which the shot came and found the body on a settee, the revolver clutched in his hand.

The officer felt a slight pulsation of the heart and called an ambulance, believing that he could yet be saved, but the stranger died before medical aid arrived.

BROCKTON LABOR MAN TO RUN AS SENATOR IN FIGHT ON GARFIELD

Brockton, Sept. 22.—Emmet T. Walls, nine years president of the Central Labor Union, and who declined re-election in April, and the best known labor man in this part of the State, outside of E. Gerry Brown, is the nominee of the Wage Earners for Senator from the Second Plymouth district to oppose George H. Garfield, who, as a Republican member of the lower branch and the Senate has always found it convenient to be absent on important committee work when votes were needed to support labor's measures in either of the bodies he chanced to be connected with. Garfield will be renominated by the Republicans.

Mr. Walls has been a trade unionist 22 years and for nine successive years has been unanimously elected agent of the Solefasteners and Rough Rounders' local of the Boot and Shoe Workers, an office he now holds. He is a prominent member of Seville Council, Knights of Columbus. He has been a delegate to national A. F. of L. conventions four times and has just been chosen for a fifth time to that honor by the B. and S. W. U. He was been a vice-president of the State A. F. of L.

An active campaign will be conducted in his behalf in Brockton, Bridgewater, Lakeville, Marion, Mattapoisett, Middleboro, Rochester, Wareham and West Bridgewater, comprising the second district and having 13,605 voters, 9,500 of whom are in Brockton.

BAR PUBLIC FROM DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION HALL

The public is to be barred from the Democratic State convention which is to be held in Tremont Temple on Oct. 4 next. Members of the press will be admitted, but aside from them none others than regularly credentialed delegates will be admitted.

In front seats on the floor will be seated the 253 delegates from Suffolk county, who compose nearly one-fourth of the total of 1,008 delegates of the convention. Behind Suffolk will be the delegates from Nantucket, Dukes, Barnstable and Middlesex in order, with Essex in one flank and Worcester on the other side, with Bristol in the rear, clear across the hall.

Franklin and Hampden will be in one side gallery, Plymouth and Norfolk in the other and Berkshire and Hampshire in the centre.

MORAN PROBES CITY SALARY PADDING.

ALLEGE DEAD MAN WAS CARRIED ON CITY LIST

Another stir was created in political [illegible] yesterday when District Attorney Moran grappled with the famous city salary-padding cases, alleged to have occurred more than a year ago, and issued summonses ordering several men to appear before the Grand Jury on Monday next.

Among those who have been notified to face the Grand Jury to-morrow are ex-Superintendent of Streets James Donovan, City Auditor J. Alfred Mitchell, Alvah C. [illegible], stenographer in the office of superintendent of streets; Edward J. Sullivan, clerk in the City Treasurer's office, and Lucius D. Burton, clerk in the Roxbury paving yard, where James P. Timilty was foreman at the time of the alleged frauds.

Allegations were made that during James P. Timilty's administration of the Roxbury yard a man named Craven was employed there. He died, and it is alleged that his family drew his pay for a long period before his death was discovered.

Exposure of the incident was followed by Foreman Timilty leaving the city's employment. Nothing has been done on the matter on to to-day until it was noised about that District Attorney Moran was investigating the matter.

District Attorney Moran refused to comment upon the case when seen, declaring that he could not talk until the case was presented to the Grand Jury.

PROHIBITIONISTS ON THE STUMP FOR MORAN OPEN THE CAMPAIGN

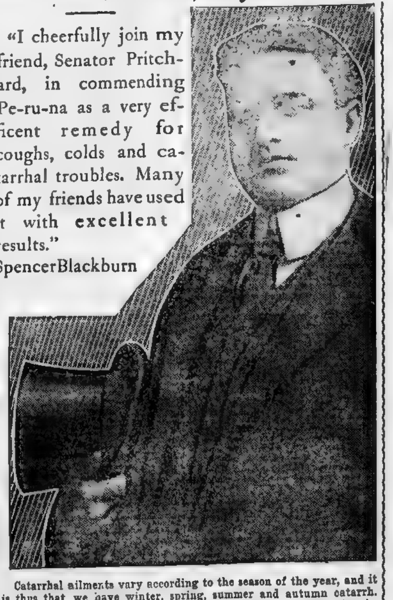
Chairman John A. Nicholls of the Prohibition State Committee, started yesterday on a tour of the Western part of the State urging the election of John B. Moran. Mr. Moran is the Prohibition candidate for Governor.

Mr. Nicholls will visit Pittsfield, Hinsdale and Dalton. He will speak at Great Barrington and North Reading.

Wednesday Rev. Charles A. Crane, pastor of the People's Temple, speaks for Moran at two open air rallies in Brookline, and Friday Secretary J. B. Lewis of the committee speaks at North Reading and Reading.

HOLD MASS MEETING FOR CALLAHAN AND CIVIC OWNERSHIP

A mass meeting in the interest of Municipal Ownership will be held to-morrow night at the Old Franklin Schoolhouse on Washington street, South End. Timothy F. Callahan, whom the labor interests of the ward are supporting for nomination for representative, will be the chief speaker. Councilman Daniel J. Sullivan, who dodged the vote on the municipal lighting plant, although pledged to support it, will be opposed by the speakers.



HON. SPENCER BLACKBURN

Member of Congress From North Carolina, Says:

"I cheerfully join my friend, Senator Pritchard, in commending Pe-ru-na as a very efficent remedy for coughs, colds and catarrhal troubles. Many of my friends have used it with excellent results."
SpencerBlackburn

Catarrhal ailments vary according to the season of the year, and it is thus that we have winter, spring, summer and autumn catarrh. Catarrh of autumn is likely to assume a systemic character, that is, the internal organs of the whole system become slightly affected, producing a condition closely resembling chronic malaria.

Sometimes an epidemic of catarrhal fever will pervade a locality, simulating Typhoid fever. It is sometimes difficult to distinguish between catarrhal fever and the genuine Typhoid.

A congested condition of the bronchial tubes producing a cough, with the usual symptoms of a cold, are frequently associated with systemic catarrh. A cold or a cough during the autumn season has special significance, and Peruna should be promptly used according to the directions to be found on each bottle. Peruna is not only a preventive, but a reliable remedy for systemic catarrh.

Miss Mary McDonough After Plucky Fight Wins Splendid Silver Trophy in Aquatic Struggle.

Miss Mary T. McDonough of South Boston is the champion swimmer among the girls of Greater Boston.

In the championship swimming race at City Point yesterday afternoon for the splendid silver challenge cup offered by the BOSTON AMERICAN for the best swimmer among the Greater Boston girls, Miss McDonough easily carried off the prize.

Miss Catherine Berlo of South Boston, one of the famous Berlo family of swimmers, made a gallant fight for the first [illegible] plucky effort won Miss Berlo [illegible] second [illegible] a handsome watch of [illegible] by David A. Buresca of South Boston.

Big Crowds Watch Contest.

In spite of the unfavorable weather conditions the contest brought out some 3,000 people, who stood along the City Point beach, on Head House pier and on all the [illegible] and other available view points and cheered themselves hoarse for the favorite contestants.

In addition to the spectators along the shore the waters of Dorchester Bay were [illegible] with numerous small craft, laden with eager witnesses. It required about all the energy of several officers from Stations 11 and 12 and the police launch Pereira, in charge of Captain Duncan Hunter, to keep the course clear.

The course was one-fourth of a mile, parallel to City Point Beach and finishing at Stevens boat landing.

Fair Swimmers Start.

The girls got into their bathing costumes at Head House, where every facility was afforded by Proprietor Bova. At 2:30 all went over to the offices of Captain Clarence W. Stevens, facing adjoining the public landing. Here lots were drawn for heats. The contestants were taken out in the launch [illegible] Captain Jean P. Hanny, to the [illegible] Rose [illegible] which had been anchored at the starting point by Owner Walter K[illegible], assisted by Skipper Edward [illegible].

All took the water cleverly for the first heat. Miss Mary McDonough, of No. 564 East Third street, South Boston, took the lead [illegible] and maintained it. Miss Catherine Berlo of South Boston, came in second.

In the second heat Miss Rosie Pitenoff, of [illegible] who was regarded as a favorite [illegible] made the best time [illegible] closely followed by Miss Trixey Hickey, of South Boston.

Miss McDonough Easy Victor.

After a half hour's rest the four winners in the first and second heats came out for the finals. Miss McDonough did not get a good dive from the starting launch but she spurted wonderfully, took the lead from the others and kept it. By the time she was two-thirds over the course she was able to abandon her breast stroke and turn to her side stroke, swimming with her left hand uppermost and cleaving the water like a knife. She finished in splendid condition, easily the superior of the others.

Miss Catherine Berlo, who had finished second in the first trial heat, made the same place in the finals, winning the second prize.

Thanks are due to Captain E. J. De Freitas, Lieutenants George [illegible] Morrissey and Charles Hatch and Joe Sibosky of the City Point Life Saving Crew for their assistance in following the swimmers. Lieutenant Morrissey, who already has one medal for life saving and who has a second one on the way, made a particularly clever dive after one girl who became exhausted, bringing her up on his shoulder to the boat with a swimming trick that attracted considerable attention.

The Summary:

First heat—Time, 11 minutes 44 seconds. Won by Mary McDonough, No. 564 East Third street, South Boston; second, Catherine Berlo, No. 9 G street, South Boston; other starters were Lillian Berlo, No. 9 G street, South Boston; Rose Anderson, No. 30 Wordsworth street, East Boston; Alsie Aykroyd, No. 20 Wordsworth street, East Boston; Mayrose Kelley, No. 13 Centre street, Dorchester; May Burke, No. 230 Sumner street, East Boston; Annie O'Connor, No. 26 Locust street, South Boston.

Second heat—Time 13 minutes 45 seconds. Won by Rose Pitenoff, 537 Freeport street, Dorchester; second, Trixie Hickey, No. 912 Q street, South Boston. Other starters were Madeline Berlo, No. 9 G street, South Boston; Annie Berlo, No. 9 G street, South Boston; Florence Lagassa, No. 819 East Sixth street, South Boston; Lena Hennen, No. 48 N street, South Boston; Trixie Lagassa, No. 819 East Sixth street, South Boston; Katherine Fonseca, No. 18 Reddy street, Winthrop.

Final heat—Won by Mary McDonough, time 10 minutes, 34 seconds; Catherine Berlo second, time 12 minutes, 17 seconds; Trixie Hickey third, time 12 minutes, 37 seconds; fourth, Rose Pitenoff.

Attendance—3,000.

BIGGEST HARVARD CLASS IN HISTORY IS EXPECTED

Harvard University will open this year with what bids fair to be the largest entering class in its history.

The students are returning by hundreds and may already be seen about the college yard greeting old friends and telling about the prospects of the coming year. The university opens next Wednesday, the 26th, and from that time to the end of the week students will be engaged in choosing their courses. On the Monday following lectures will begin and work at the university will be in full swing.

Some important changes will take place in the ensuing academic year. Chief among these is the increased tuition fee. Under the new arrangement the old tuition fee of $150 per year is charged for four courses, while an additional fee of $20 is charged for each additional course. The rule strikes directly, whether intentionally or not, at the poor, self-supporting student who tries to get his degree in three years, by increasing his total college expenses by $100.

Course for Teachers

No important changes are noted among the officers of the university. Who is to [illegible] Professor Shaler's place as Dean of the Lawrence Scientific School has not yet been definitely decided. Professor Love is still secretary of the scientific school [illegible] while Professor W. Morris Davis is in the position [illegible] the death of Professor Shaler [illegible] of the Graduate School and [illegible] most of his courses in geology and mineralogy. It is quite probable that either Professor Davis or Professor Love will be appointed dean of the Lawrence Scientific School.

An important step has been taken by the Faculty of Arts and Sciences by offering [illegible] of courses to teachers in service. These courses are designed to assist the teacher to become more efficient in his [illegible] and will treat largely of educational methods in the several branches. They will be open to both men and women teachers, and will be given afternoons and Saturdays from November 1 to April 1.

Work is rapidly progressing upon the new Law School building, which has been made necessary by the crowded condition of the present structure. When completed it will be a handsome, three-storied building of white sandstone in the Doric order and will be the best appointed Law School in the country. The basement is already finished and work has commenced on the first story. The building is situated just back of the present Law School building in Jarvis Field. It will be finished in the early spring.

Two notable additions to the athletic department are the new clubhouses for the Weld and the Newell boat clubs. These are handsome structures, spacious and well equipped. The Newell clubhouse cost $20,000, and the Weld clubhouse $20,000.

The University has received an addition to its group of memorials in the splendid bust of James Russell Lowell, which has been unveiled the past Summer and placed on the north-east side of Massachusetts Hall.

MODEST STORE LEADS TO PRESENT MAMMOTH HOME

It [illegible] years ago that Robert H. White [illegible] a remote village in Western Massachusetts, entered commercial life, and as soon as he was a mere boy he realized the importance of application and industry in retail merchandising and from the small beginning that he made at that time until now, when he enjoys the distinction of being at the head of the mighty institution that bears his name, he has always had for his motto this simple sentiment [illegible] with the people with whom [illegible] motto as [illegible] of this [illegible] large [illegible] wonderful [illegible] integrity, the house of R. H. White [illegible] not now [illegible]

Monument to His Efforts.

Surely [illegible] could desire a more [illegible] than has been Mr. White's, and on this occasion he must feel particularly well satisfied as he views the mammoth establishment on Washington street that he has builded by his own efforts.

Upon [illegible] the fifty third anniversary of the [illegible] of the White business [illegible] great [illegible] sale [illegible] been planned. That [illegible] tens of thousands of [illegible] R. H. White Company [illegible] day [illegible] been planned [illegible] sale that promises to [illegible] of the kind ever before attempted [illegible] R. H. White Company and even before now the [illegible] has created somewhat [illegible] attention by its remarkably well [illegible] and thoroughly successful sales.

Among World's Biggest Buyers.

In the wholesale merchandise world the R. H. White Company of Boston is known as one of the biggest buyers in the world. The extraordinary success of the fifty-second anniversary sale, held a year ago, was freely discussed afterward in the wholesale districts, and in making the arrangement for the fifty-third anniversary sale the R. H. White Company buyers have experienced no difficulty in securing [illegible] quantities of new merchandise, intended expressly for this giant sale, at prices that would appear ridiculous were it not for the fact that the wholesalers and jobbers are earnest in their intention to participate in the R. H. White Company bargain sale.

Originates Anniversary Sale.

The R. H. White Company was the originator of the anniversary bargain sale idea. It has proven so very successful, both to the house and to the customers, that it has been pretty generally imitated, with the same half success that always follows an imitator. Enjoying the confidence of the public for so many years, the R. H. White Company never enlarges upon what it really has to offer, and the advertisements of this concern, always modest, dignified and truthful, have increased the confidence that it enjoys by right of its success and reputation for fair dealing and honest values.

For just one day, to-morrow, the store will open at 8 o'clock in the morning and close at 6 o'clock in the afternoon. This long day is given because there are so many thousands of customers who will come in from surrounding cities and towns, and it is to give them an opportunity to do their shopping that this arrangement is made.

Story of Progress

The growth of the R. H. White Company is not an unfamiliar story to readers of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, or in fact to any adult person in New England. Mr. White came to Boston from Hinsdale, Mass., a tiny village in the Berkshire Hills, in 1862. He was but twenty-one years old, an age when most men are just beginning to think of their future and lay plans for their entrance into business or professional life. Mr. White had already enjoyed nine years of business training and he came to the thriving New England metropolis with an experience that many of the older established dry goods merchants had cause to envy later on. Mr. White formed a partnership under the firm name of Tower & White, and opened a store on Hanover street, under the present American House. The store force included three salesmen and an errand boy, and the working capital of the firm was not over one thousand dollars.

Wins First Success.

In this little store on Hanover street, Mr. White's first great success came to him and in less than a year the business had to be removed to more commodious quarters. A larger store was secured on Winter street, as even at that time the business centre of the city was beginning to move "up town," and in the new store were installed fixtures and merchandise that proved a revelation to the people of Boston, who had become accustomed to old fashioned methods.

The progressive and up-to-the-minute spirit of this young merchant "from the country" forced recognition from the better class of trade and the new store on Winter street under the firm name of Wilcox, White & Rorobaek prospered.

In 1864 this firm was succeeded by Wilcox, White & Co., and on January 1, 1865, when he was but twenty-five years old, Mr. White bought out the interests of his partners and organized the firm of R. H. White & Co.

Forced to Bigger Quarters.

At the same time the whole of the four-story building at Nos. 44 and 46 Winter street was leased, and that event marked the beginning of the White business enterprise as one of the great "department stores," a term, by the way, which did not come into use until some years later.

This new venture was also as successful as the previous enlargements and in a few years the building next door, at No. 50 Winter street, was added to the establishment. The firm remained in these quarters for ten years, but with rapidly increasing business and the constant addition to the stock and departments, it was found necessary to remove again, and this time the firm went over to Washington street, the greatest business thoroughfare in the country outside of Broadway, New York.

Build Mammoth Home.

Mr. White could find no building on Washington street that was adequate to the necessities, so the building of a new home was arranged and successfully carried out. A large building on Washington street was erected and it was proudly [illegible] of the sights of Boston. [illegible] was a frontage on Washington street of 125 feet, and the building was 140 feet deep. The floor area was 17,500 feet compared with the Winter street establishment, which had been remodelled dwellings. It was a mammoth emporium.

FATHER IN ANGER SLAYS HIS SON

Harrisonburg, W. Va., Sept. 22. Israel Mongold, aged seventy years, shot and killed his seventeen-year-old son Benjamin at his home along the State line near Mathias. The father was brought to jail here.

The boy is alleged to have thrown a stick at his father and then to have run away. Mongold [illegible] his revolver and shot his son through the arm, the bullet entering [illegible] near the heart.

PROVES 'SQUARE DEAL' MEANS PROSPERITY.

R. H. White Co.'s Success Due to Fact That It Is Honest with Patrons.

BIG ANNUAL BARGAIN SALE ON TO-MORROW

FROM a [illegible] to its present position [illegible] in Boston's [illegible] the R. H. White Company may well [illegible] pride to its long record of honest dealing with its patrons. The growth of the business and the [illegible] moved to Washington street is a simple story of [illegible] accomplished by [illegible] and [illegible].

The new building was occupied in 1876. The great [illegible] of customers gladly followed, instead of decreasing as many had predicted, the results verified the expectations of the head of the firm. There [illegible] immediate and substantial increase [illegible] five years had [illegible] the new building was becom[illegible] regarded as altogether too small [illegible] properly take care of the business.

Capacity Doubled.

By erecting an extension in the rear, extending through to Harrison avenue, which the city had just opened, the capacity of the store was just doubled. The new annex was opened February 1, 1882, and there were many more predictions that this unheard of enterprise would meet with failure and misfortune because of its great proportions. But again, the same faithful success that had always been Mr. White's was with him, and the new building with its extension was soon too small. In 1888 negotiations were made with the Carney estate, owner of the property adjoining the White store on the north, and a building with a ground area of 4,500 square feet was constructed for the company in architectural conformity with the original building. This building was opened September 21, 1888, and was called the "New Annex."

In just five years, there was a cry for more room, and Mr. White secured a lease of the two estates which remained between the annex and Bedford street. The buildings standing on this ground were torn down and a new building erected. The increase in ground space was 4,800 square feet. This addition was opened to the public in April, 1895.

Seven Acres Floor Space.

The five-year period continued to make itself manifest as the appropriate time for additions to the White establishment, and in 1899 the property at the south of the original building, extending to the corner of Norfolk place was secured, rebuilt and added to the establishment. The store then had a frontage on Washington street of 290 feet, on Bedford street of 240 feet, on Harrison avenue of 165 feet and on Norfolk place of 265 feet. The ground area is now nearly 55,000 square feet, and the floor space of the entire establishment is over seven acres.

In this great store, which is really a little city in itself, over 3,000 people are employed, and every man and woman is trained in that incomparable business system that made the R. H. White Company what it is to-day. Only a year ago the entire interior of the store was remodelled, and everything that tended to progress and advancement was secured. The attractiveness of the present store may have a great deal to do with its success. No matter how low in value may be an article of merchandise, if it is presented attractively the possibility of a sale is diminished. At the R. H. White Company store this system is followed closely, and the shopper is immediately impressed with the great, light salesrooms, the fresh air and the general appearance of comfort of the employes.

Kind to Employes.

Another one of the important factors in the success and growth of the R. H. White Company has been the practice of Mr. White to be generous and considerate in his treatment of employes. Many a shrewd merchant who has had the ability to buy and sell goods with profit, advertise wisely and offer real bargains, has failed because he thought that his help were machines and worthy of little or no thought or consideration. But it is only by the clerks behind the counters that the patrons of a great store like the R. H. White Company establishment know the firm. Few of the customers ever see the head of the firm, and they judge him by the men and women who represent him.

Mr. White has always given his employes as much liberty as is consistent with good business management. They have broad counter space, fairly short hours, good salaries and annual vacations such as any one needs and enjoys. Two dining rooms are provided for the employes and there is a lunch room and a dining room where wholesome, well cooked food is sold to the store's employes at a merely nominal fee.

Under the roof of the R. H. White Company establishment one may find pretty nearly "everything under the sun." The furniture department is a mighty enterprise in itself. The fourth floor is almost entirely devoted to the exhibition of furniture. It embraces nearly 50,000 square feet. The carpet department is also located on this floor, and one of the novelties employed is a forty foot sewing machine upon which carpets are made up.

Three Thousand Orders a Day.

The mail order department is one that has been slowly developed, and it is now one of the most important departments of the store. As many as three thousand orders find their way in the White Company mail pouches in a single day, and it is surprising to become acquainted with the thousands of people all over New England who make it a practice to trade with Boston concerns by mail, thereby getting the advantage of better and fresher goods at a much lower price than they could be obtained at the smaller cities and even small towns.

Probably Ralph White, the country boy merchant, never dreamed of becoming the head of an enterprise of such proportions as the present R. H. White Company, but the success that has been attained by the company has been due to only one thing in the main: honesty and square dealing with the people. Without the confidence of the public upon whose patronage every private enterprise depends for its support and success nothing could prosper. As an evidence of the appreciation of its success, the R. H. White Company inaugurated the anniversary bargain sales, and it is promised that the present one will be greater and grander than ever. The advertisements of the company tell of a few of the thousands of bargains that will be offered when the doors of the store open to-morrow, but it is not likely that many will be satisfied with a mere reading of the advertisements. The management of the store has made arrangements to handle the crowds that will hasten to-morrow to take advantage of this greatest of all sales.

"TOO EXTRAVAGANT" FOR SON'S GUARDIAN

Steubenville, O., Sept. 22.—Mrs. Jessie Sharp Little of Washington, who has been appointed guardian of her son, the heir of the late William Dougherty of this city, has been denied the privilege of removing the funds of the estate to Washington. Probate Judge McCleary, in refusing her application, declared her to be "too extravagant" for the responsibility she wished to assume, and appointed Charles W. Hill of St. Clairsville, O., as guardian of the trust funds, which for the present are to remain in this State.

STOCKS Profit Taking Starts Short Session Decline MONEY Market Restricted by Stringency in Cash BONDS

BIG DEALS TO STIR WALL STREET.

Bank Statement Better Than for Many Weeks, but Shaw's Aid Wanted.

OLD DOMINION FEATURE IN BOSTON TRADING

The stock market [illegible] yesterday. Prices fell [illegible] Reading [illegible] the market leader [illegible] worst sufferer. [illegible] cause of the [illegible] garded as only temporary.

During the week the market rose and fell, and the reaction of yesterday came in due order. The market was only fairly active, 394,000 shares changing hands. There was no pronounced tendency either to buy or sell, but shares were evidently sold in realization on the figures [illegible] from Friday's advance. Reading lost 2½ points on dealings of 97,800 shares. Steel common was sold and bought [illegible] ing unchanged at 46½.

Better Bank Statement.

The bank statement was again favorable and showed that the banks [illegible] decidedly stronger position. The surplus is now $11,318,925, an increase of [illegible] $8,000,000 as compared with a deficit of about the same amount two weeks before. Loans and deposits increased over $[illegible],000, but the specie was increased by $1[illegible]000,000, a larger figure than was reported in the cash item for many months. Money is still a restraining influence on the stock market. Rates continue firm. Preparations are being made for October settlements, and easier money [illegible] obtain until after they are completed unless Secretary Shaw takes some action to relieve the tension.

Big Deals Forming.

Big plans are under way and Wall Street will be shaken within a few [illegible] by some important announcements, [illegible] Commercial Bulletin says. The [illegible] these undertakings will approach [illegible] cance the developments that followed the news that Union Pacific had been put on a safe 10 per cent basis. In these new engagements the Harriman interests will figure prominently, [illegible] doubt that E. H. Harriman has become to-day the most influential figure in the railroad world. With its acquisition of a large block of Baltimore & Ohio stock Union Pacific will become a transcontinental system, and as a part of this programme the Harriman people are expected to [illegible] in control of the Reading system as well. Harriman has [illegible] powerful men in Wall Street who have been backing him in [illegible] past with this [illegible].

Coppers Broad and Firm.

The copper share market has now had two weeks of excellent activity, compared with the preceding dulness. The market has been broad with a firm undertone. The higher price levels have evidently offered little inducement to the [illegible] public to part with shares, as the pressure to sell, save from professional sources, has been light. In some of the supplies of money that came into the market it would have been natural to expect a recession from the high prices of the preceding week. Recessions in the present copper share market however seem to [illegible] temporary halt in activity and to only a slight falling off in prices. If a [illegible] recession were to develop the market would get more good from it, according to some brokers, than from another [illegible] factor that could be created at this [illegible].

Amalgamated Sold.

The market course of Amalgamated has been a disappointment to those who expected to see it reach 130 as easily as it reached 100 and as a result there has been profit-taking together with some short selling. The shorts assert that the public is too deep in the issue for higher prices to ensue immediately. Amalgamated's earnings, however, are now at the highest point they have ever reached and the outsiders declare that the management can not much longer keep the shareholders from participation in at least a part of the profits.

In the New York market yesterday almost the entire list was lower from the opening. Reading was the weakest issue, declining 1¼ on its initial sale [illegible] ing as already stated. The few gains were ing as already stated.

Some semblance of strength was displayed in a few issues, but whatever price movements developed were not maintained

An Equal Division Proposition

Half to You and Half to Us

The chief object of this company is to secure options, purchase mineral properties, subdivide them into mining claims the same as you would house lots, and develop them just enough to prove their value, and then sell them to the mining capitalists, who are always ready to buy and pay good prices after the prospector has discovered them for them.

We have already secured several acres of valuable mineral land on the newly discovered Cobalt Belt.

In years gone by the New England people did not think they could make a fortune unless they went west, and investors thought their money must go the same way, but this idea is fast fading away, and only within the last few years have New Englanders taken hold of the mining business here at home. But of late the richest finds ever made in this country are those of the famous Cobalt District. This belt extends through New England and the provinces and we have been fortunate enough to locate it this side of the Canadian line.

Prof. Sharples, who has recently returned from a visit to the Cobalt District of Canada, made the statement that if he had not known the formation of minerals in the earth, he would certainly think that someone had dug a hole in the ground and poured melted minerals into it, and as we are on this belt it should be conclusive to you that fortune is staring you in the face.

The following assays made by state chemists S. P. Sharples and Prof. Henry Carmichael, Ph. D., will enable you to see for yourself what the probable future of this mining property will be:

ASSAYS.

Samples Marked 0 assayed	$14.47	Gold per ton.
Samples Marked 1 assayed	1.52	Gold per ton.
Samples Marked X assayed	25.01	Gold per ton.
No Mark assayed	65.32	Gold per ton.
Samples Marked 1XL assayed	32.25	Gold per ton.
Samples Marked 4 assayed	1.24	Gold per ton.
Samples Marked 0 0 assayed	84.75	Gold per ton.

The originals of these assays can be seen at our office.

After having our expert investigate this property we find in his report that it is very highly mineralized, well timbered, and has an abundance of water, also that the cost of mining and treating this ore will not exceed $3.50 per ton. He also states that while he has visited nearly every mining camp in the United States and Mexico, he has never seen better looking or more favorable formation in his life than on this property. He also states that the silver carbonates we have are nearly pure silver, and that they have only been found in three or four other places in the world. These carbonates are what made Leadville, Colorado, famous. With this expert's report, together with the assayer's report, it ought to be conclusive with you, as it is with us, that this is one of the grandest opportunities ever offered to make a fortune; for thousands of dollars can be made on a small investment in this company.

There is another feature about this property which we wish to call your attention to. That is that there is on this belt a large quantity of an exceedingly fine grade of Mica. This, you all know, has come into use very extensively within the past few years by electrical manufacturers, and it is somewhat difficult for them to secure Mica of sufficient size, as they require it from six inches square upwards, and this Mica property of ours carries just the quality and size that they need.

Don't forget your money will be invested in a New England concern managed by New England people.

Don't forget that you get half of the profits.

Don't forget that thousands of dollars have been made on an investment of $10.

Don't forget that you can visit our property in a very few hours.

Don't forget that you must venture a little to have more.

Don't forget that one of the biggest mineral belts in the world will be opened up right here in New England within a few years.

Don't forget that we have located it.

Don't forget that you do not have to wait several years, as is the case when you invest in a company which operates the mine, to get your profits, for we do not operate the mine. We simply buy mineral-bearing lands and open them up just enough to show the capitalists what we have got and then sell it to them. This gives us quick and enormous profits. To illustrate how easily it is to make $250 on an investment in our company, take an acre of the land that we have just bought, which cost us from $2 to $10 per acre. It will make four mining claims. If we sell at $250 per claim (which is no price at all for a claim), the acre of land would bring $1,000 or $990 profit on the money invested.

Don't forget it is a duty you owe yourself to buy some of this stock at once.

Don't forget to call at our office and examine samples taken from this Rich Belt or send for Prospectus.

Don't forget the price of this stock is $10 per share, which is its par value, and that you can buy from one share up.

I am on the ground at Goldfield; follow me and win—

Buy shares in Ballarat Gold Mining Company at 15 cents for quick dividends.

I have opened up this mine myself. There is ore in sight ready to ship to the smelter—and plenty of it. Dividends are a practical certainty within 90 days—lasting dividends.

Would a mine operator present you with a wagonload of bullion for the asking? (That's what this stock proposition at 15 cents really means.) No, not every mine operator would.

But I Will.

Why? A mining man's success and power in Nevada are measured by the number of followers he has. If I can make you money in Ballarat Gold Mining Company Shares, I can make you money in other great mining companies which I have in view, and so long as I make you money I can command your backing. That's what I want—your support.

The Riches of Croesus

would not buy all the mining properties in Nevada and my capital isn't one one-hundredth of all I need. I must have public support, and I realize I can only command it by making money for investors.

Follow Me Into Ballarat.

Mine With Tremendous Showing.

The Ballarat Gold Mining Company owns six full mining claims in Inyo County, just across the line from Nevada into California. The information is a contact between Porphyry and Granite, geologically the same as that in which many of the great mines of Cripple Creek are located. The physical condition of the property gives every assurance known to mining that the ore bodies will hold out to tremendous depth and that values will improve as the workings go down.

Shipping Ore Blocked Out.

In the bottom of the main shaft of the Ballarat Gold Mining Company there has been developed a magnificent six-foot ledge of high grade gold ore, two feet of which average $157.00 per ton in gold. As this is not at the richest section of the Vein it does not, however, represent the tremendous possibilities of the estate. When the shaft has been sunk 25 feet deeper and a drift run into the best body of ore, I am thoroughly convinced that the Ballarat will become a producing mine that will immediately take rank with the Mohawk of Goldfield, the Belmont of Tonopah Extension of Tonopah, or any of the other great mining estates of Southern Nevada. Few mines in the history of this great gold country have shown such magnificent bodies of high grade ore at relatively the same stage of development or have held out such great promise of a future of tremendous production.

Capitalization and Treasury Offering.

The Ballarat Gold Mining Company is capitalized for $1,000,000, with one million shares, each having a par value of $1. The stock is fully paid and forever non-assessable. There have been set aside in the treasury for further development and equipment purposes 400,000 shares of stock. Of this treasury reserved a limited block is offered for immediate subscription at Fifteen Cents Per Share.

This price represents the intrinsic value of the property and the cash expenditures to date in proving the worth of the acreage. This is distinctively a ground floor offering and will undoubtedly be quickly oversubscribed.

WIRE RESERVATIONS IMMEDIATELY. Follow by mail remittance. It is your stock while it lasts at 15 cents per share. Remember Bullfrog Eclipse which I promoted at 15, and now selling at 85; Mohawk at 25, now above four dollars, and fifty others that have made sensational advances. These had not the equal in showing at surface that the Ballarat Gold Mining Company's estate has. In honesty and with a full sense of my duty to my clients, I respectfully urge you to act at once in this extraordinary investment offering.

INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITIES

I am offering customers of my office a most attractive combination investment opportunity—an opportunity where the present income on the total amount invested exceeds 7%, with a strong probability that it will exceed 12% next year. It is one of those extraordinary opportunities which I have been able to present at various times to customers of my office during the past five years, and which has enabled me to build up and maintain the largest financial agency business in the United States.

This extraordinary combination investment opportunity is fully described in "King's Financial Bulletin," a weekly financial newspaper which should be read by all interested in investment matters. It will be sent free for the asking. Write for it to-day. Address.

STANDARD OIL FACES STRIKE OF 3,000.

Sympathetic Move Now Likely In Clash at Big Plant in Indiana.

MERCHANTS REFUSE TO SELL TO NON-UNION MEN

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Hammond, Ind., Sept. 22.—The strike in the mammoth Standard Oil plant in Whiting is rapidly assuming formidable proportions and all hope of settling the difficulty that has arisen between the company and the union men has faded away. The union leaders have met the issue and the company officials flatly refuse to accede to the terms demanded by the union men.

Yesterday 350 firemen and firemen's helpers walked out for two reasons. They wanted a raise in the scale of twenty-one and one-half cents per hour, and an eight-hour day also.

May Include 3,000 Strikers.

To-day's developments have been many. This afternoon 150 still cleaners walked out in sympathy with the firemen. The engineers and machinists will go out on Monday. This will mean 1,000 men out. A general sympathetic strike of the 3,000 employes is expected.

There were several clashes to-day between non-union men and strikers, and a riot was narrowly averted.

The company is filling the places of the strikers with non-union men and quartering them in the plant.

Now Fear Bloodshed.

Whiting business men refuse to sell supplies to these men, being in sympathy with the strikers. The company is fighting unionism with all its might and a spread of the strike to its other plants will no doubt take place. A report gained credence to-night that negroes are to be brought in by the company and it is feared bloodshed will result if this happens. It is possible the State militia will be called out.

TWO FIGHT OVER A MELON; THIRD FINED

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 22.—Bruce Littleton, a special representative of the Salvation Army here for a day or two, was arrested on a charge of obstructing a policeman in the performance of his duty, and was fined $2 and costs in City Court.

The charge against Littleton grew out of his stopping on the street to settle a quarrel between a merchant and a countryman, who had stumbled over a watermelon and broken it.

Charcoal Kills Bad Breath.

Bad Odor of Indigestion, Smoking, Drinking or Eating Can Be Instantly Stopped.

Sample Package Mailed Free.

Other people notice your bad breath where you would not notice it at all. It is nauseating to other people to stand before them and while you are talking give them a whiff or two of your bad breath. It usually comes from food fermenting on your stomach. Sometimes you have it in the morning,—that awful sour, bilious, bad breath. You can stop that at once by swallowing one or two Stuart Charcoal Lozenges, the most powerful gas and odor absorbers ever prepared.

Sometimes your meals will reveal themselves in your breath to those who talk with you. "You've had onions," or "You've been eating cabbage." and all of a sudden you belch in the face of your friend. Charcoal is a wonderful absorber of odors, as every one knows. That is why Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are so quick to stop all gases and odors of odorous foods, or gas from indigestion.

Don't use breath perfumes. They never conceal the odor, and never absorb the gas that causes the odor. Besides, the very fact of using them reveals the reason for their use. Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges in the first place stop for good all sour brash and belching of gas, and make your breath pure, fresh and sweet, just after you've eaten. Then no one will turn his face away from you when you breathe or talk; your breath will be pure and fresh, and besides your food will taste so much better to you at your next meal. Just try it.

Charcoal does other wonderful things, too. It carries away from your stomach and intestines all the impurities there massed together and which causes the bad breath. Charcoal is a purifier as well as an absorber.

Charcoal is now by far the best, most easy and mild laxative known. A whole boxful will do no harm; in fact, the more you take the better. Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made of pure willow charcoal and mixed with just a faint flavor of honey to make them palatable for you, but not too sweet. You just chew them like candy. They are absolutely harmless.

Get a new, pure, sweet breath, freshen your stomach for your next meal, and keep the intestines in good working order. These two things are the secret of good health and long life. You can get all the charcoal necessary to do these wonderful but simple things by getting Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges. We want you to test these little wonder workers yourself before you buy them. So send us your full name and address for a free sample of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges. Then after you have tried the sample, and been convinced, go to your druggist and get a 25c box of them. You'll feel better all over, more comfortable, and "cleaner" inside.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 50 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

I'M in a nice bit of trouble, I confess,
Josiah and his bunch are to blame,
I should by now be a happy nominee,
I'm the victim of a slick "con" game.
I was proposed to by the come 'leven "Seven"

Waiting at the church, waiting at the church,
When I found they'd left me in the lurch,
Lor, how it did upset me!
All at once Jo sent around a note.
Here's the very note, this is what he wrote:
Can't get away to marry you to-day;

FOSS AGAIN PAYS HIS RESPECTS TO LODGE.

Eugene N. Foss, Republican candidate for the nomination for Lieutenant Governor by his party in opposition to Hon. Eben S. Draper, at a meeting in Warren Hall, Brighton, last night, made a savage attack upon United States Senator Henry Cabot Lodge. In part Mr Foss said:

"It is instinctively realized that on the most important issues before the country and the State, those that concern everyone of us most deeply, Mr. Lodge does NOT represent his constituency in Massachusetts. He speaks, by the way, in a supercilious, arrogant manner of 'unimportant and discredited sources' of opposition to him.

Charges Proved.

"I have already amid the press of my public and private affairs found time to substantiate within the immediate twenty-four hours most of my charges against him and to confine his assumed or attempted denial of them, showing that this denial was in real effect and substance a general and particular confession.

"One of these principal chagres against him, and the one he is at the most pains to deny, is that he voted in conference and committee to put a twenty per cent duty on hides. In the committee of the whole in the Senate on June 28, 1897, he voted for this twenty per cent duty. The proof put forward is to be found in the Congressional Record, Volume 30, Part 2, Page 2,078.

Left It to the South.

"Senator oLdge left the interests of the shoe and leather manufacturers of the country to be protected and defended by Senators from cattle growing States.

"This is only a single illustration, like the Cuban Treaty Sugar clause I exemplified yesterday of where Senator Lodge generally finds his treasure to be and consequently his heart also. It may be, as I have intimated, my duty to follow up his record in these matters."

CRANES HOME AFTER HONEYMOON ABROAD

Pittsfield, Sept. 22.—Senator and Mrs W. Relying on his record of faithful service in the Legislature, Edward H. O'Brien of Ward 3, Worcester, submits his candidacy for another term to the Democratic voters and his friends expect that he will win another handsome victory at the caucuses next Wednesday night. In the opinion of those intimately acquainted with affairs at the State House Representative O'Brien has grown to be one of the big men of the House. By representatives of labor organizations from all over the State who have had occasion [illegible] before committees of the Legislature he has [illegible] to be regarded as an able champion [illegible].

$100 Buys 5000 Shares of

Searchlight Gold Beam

With a Par Value of $5000

Read what $100 invested in the past few years in Nevada Mining companies has earned for its fortunate investors:

$100 Invested in Tonopah Midway in 1902 could probably not be bought for less than $2,850.

$100 Invested in West End in 1903 is now said to be worth $1,300.

Our proposition is very simple. You purchase stock from us at about one-fifth its real value. Do you realize what this means? Just this: You get stock in the Searchlight Gold Beam at the lowest ground floor price before the speculative crowd gets hold of it and begins to boost the price. This is exactly how Great Fortunes are made, and this is your opportunity.

SOME REASONS WHY

You should Invest in Searchlight Gold Beam at once

BECAUSE you are offered stock today for $100 which it is likely would cost you $500 in a few weeks.

BECAUSE you are offered stock in the Searchlight Gold Beam at a price you may never be able to buy it for again after this allotment is exhausted.

BECAUSE this great property already shows free milling ore worth $250 per ton, which means that it can be worked at enormous profits to the stockholders.

BECAUSE our claims, aggregating 80 acres and containing rich gold bearing deposits, lies on the same trend or formation as the largest producing mines in this camp;

BECAUSE it is within the rich mineral circle of Searchlight district, the camp that is richer than Goldfield, Bull Frog or Tonopah, the camp without a failure.

AN EARLY ADVANCE IS PREDICTED

In the price of this stock. This can not well be otherwise [illegible] the record of all the other [illegible] ful companies in this [illegible]. The generous [illegible] is beyond our expectations [illegible] a doubt [illegible] will be worth five times [illegible] for it to-day. Had we [illegible] other companies [illegible] 25c, [illegible] our mining friends [illegible] secure their profits from [illegible] and not from buyers of stock in the [illegible] selves a block of this stock.

2c a Share Now—Buy Before Rise

At this low figure we cannot accept subscriptions for less than $25, but even this sum buys 1250 shares in a rich gold mining property. The investor who can secure stock in Searchlight Gold Beam at this price and does not improve it by buying all he can, will, in our opinion, show poor business judgment.

Your $100 investment now will mean $1250 when the stock reaches 25 cents, showing you a net profit of $1150! Can you do better. When it reaches par $1 a share it will show a profit of $4,900.00. Suppose you had $1000 invested at that rate it would mean a profit to you of $49,000.00.

$100 Invested in Florence in 1905 is said to be worth today $32,000.

$100 Invested in Red Top gold mine in 1904 is reported to be worth today $6,666.

$100 Invested in Jumbo in 1904 is now said to be valued at $750.

Opens Monday, Oct. 1

Most Beautiful Exposition New England Has Ever Seen

Boston Food Fair

All the Latest New Foods and Delicacies

Conducted by Boston Retail Grocers' Association
Open 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. — First Food Fair Held in Boston for 5 Years

Many Thousand Souvenirs and Samples Given Away Daily

Wondrous Beauty

This will be the first exposition in America at which all the decorations, from floor to ceiling, are part of one general color scheme, every booth being in complete harmony with every other booth. The marvellous decorations are alone worth coming many miles to see.

Electrical Display

No fair ever held in New England was as gorgeously lighted. The electrical display itself is worth many times the price of admission. One exhibit alone has over 1,000 electric lights.

State of North Carolina

The State of North Carolina will make a beautiful exhibit of the wonderful products of that enterprising State.

Boy Tenor

United States Marine Band of Washington

Wm. H. Santelmann, Leader

The Band Which Plays at the White House
Also Known as the "President's Own"

One of the Most Celebrated Military Bands in the World

The United States Marine Band was established as a marine corps by act of Congress, July 11, 1798, the act being approved by John Adams, second President of the United States. The band performed ordinary military duty until 1854, in which year open air concerts at the White House and Capitol grounds were inaugurated. In 1861 President Lincoln affixed his signature to an Act of Congress which marked the recognition by law of the first band in the United States military service.

The Marine Band has played before the Prince of Wales, now King Edward, Prince Henry of Prussia, Prince Louis of Battenberg and diplomats from all over the world. During presidential inaugurations it is always accorded a place of honor.

This is the first time in fifteen years the Marine Band has played in New England.

Formal Opening Display of Women's Autumn and Fall Styles

Embracing Suits, Gowns, Costumes, Millinery, Furs and Dress Accessories. An authoritative exhibit organized for Monday, September 24; Tuesday, September 25, and Wednesday, September 26, 1906.

FROM the American Woman's paradise, the Rue de la Paix, the Parisian style centre, whose autocratic mandates exercise such subtle fascination over feminine fashions, we have assembled the gorgeous

Suits, Coats, Costumes and Gowns

It is pre-eminently New England's Leading Exposition and exemplifies, anew, our commanding style supremacy.

A Millinery Opening and Display

That Maintains and Increases Our Supremacy

THE most praiseworthy millinery opening of the season—that was our aim, that is our accomplishment. Three of our milliners stayed in Paris for weeks—absorbed ideas, borrowed and appropriated suggestions that were destined to meet your approval.

Consider this your invitation to view the greatest millinery exposition of any opening season in Boston's history—Welcome.

TROOPS CALLED OUT IN ATLANTA RACE RIOT; 30 DEAD

BLACKS ARE SLAIN BY WHITES.

People of Atlanta, Ga., in Death Hunt on Colored Men in City's Streets.

GOVERNOR APPEALS FOR UNITED STATES TROOPS

Repeatd Attacks on White Women Drive Citizens to Frenzy.

AUTHORITIES POWERLESS AGAINST LYNCH RULE

Fire Department Assails Rioters with Hose in Vain. Negroes Shot by Scores.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 22.—From twenty to thirty negroes are dead and half a hundred wounded as the result of a fierce race riot here tonight and the fighting is still going on. Angry mobs of white men are invading the colored quarters of the city and all efforts of the authorities to check them have thus far been unsuccessful.

The fire department was called out and streams of water were turned on the mobs without avail. Five attacks on white women caused the trouble.

"KILL THE NEGROES."

As soon as the attacks were announced by the night extras the cry of "Kill the negroes!" was heard in every section of the city and the deadly work began.

There was not one great mob, but scores of small mobs made up of young men and half grown boys operating against the negroes in various sections of the city. Wherever a negro was seen he was immediately the target for bullets, knives, sticks, stones, and every other weapon that was obtainable.

CALL FOR TROOPS.

At 11.30 o'clock the Governor asked the government to order out three companies of United States soldiers, which will likely be done. Attacks upon white women by negroes in the suburbs of and surrounding Atlanta are increasing in number and nearly every day a case of such assault is reported and the neighborhood surrounding the scene of the crime is up in arms searching until the black culprit is found.

At 12.30 o'clock this (Sunday) morning the excitement is unabated. Reports continue to come in of killings and it is hard to separate the rumor from the fact.

One negro was killed in front of the postoffice. Another was killed in a poolroom on Peachtree street near Marietta street.

At 1 o'clock a call was made for militia and several companies were ordered out. The soldiers restored order in their immediate vicinity but were powerless beyond that. At this hour there is comparative quiet in the center of the city.

At 1 o'clock this morning negroes are breaking into hardware stores and taking firearms and ammunition.

The outer parts of the city are left unprotected as most of the police are downtown trying to quiet the crowds.

A crowd of negroes are congregated on North Forsyth street and trying to take a white man from a building. Three policemen with Winchester rifles are on the scene and whites are rushing to the place. This point looks like serious trouble. The injured in the hospital are now said to number over fifty and new ones constantly coming in. The situation seems to grow more serious as the night progresses.

The mounted militia, those of them who could be gotten together, are riding through the streets, aided by the police, and trying to persuade the people to return home.

STABS SEVERAL NEGROES.

One of the most numerous of the mobs surged about the Piedmont Hotel, in the heart of the city, and stabbed several negroes. Here Police Commissioner English, who is president of the Fourth National Bank, made an impassioned plea for the mob to disperse, but he might as well have talked to the winds. He was answered by cries of "Kill the negroes! They won't leave white women alone until they are dead!"

Down Decatur street, which is away in Atlanta's Bowery, being thickly studded by negro saloons and restaurants, swept another mob, smashing the saloons and eating stands and assaulting every negro who did not save himself by flight. This mob grew so threatening that a general fire call was sent in. When the engines arrived the hose was played on the mob until it was dispersed.

JULES GRAU'S WIDOW ACCUSED OF PERJURY

New York, Sept. 22.—Mrs. Lillian Grau, wife of the late Jules Grau, impressario, was arrested to-day at her residence on the complaint of her brother-in-law, Matt Grau, the theatrical agent, who charges her with perjury.

TAFT SEES LEADERS OF REBELS.

Fate of Cuba Hangs on Outcome of Conference Now Being Held.

REBEL LEADERS OPENLY WARN UNITED STATES

Declare They Will Keep on Fighting if Palma Government Is to Be Upheld.

Havana, Sept. 23.—The fate of Cuba hangs in the balance.

Peace or war, independence or permanent American occupancy of the island may be decided at the conference going on at midnight.

Secretaries Taft and Bacon and the rebel leaders are still in conference at the home of United States Minister Morgan at Marianao.

It is understood that the rebels demand a new general election as the price of peace. They claim that the Palma administration got into office by fraud and intimidation.

The rebels in conference with the American mediators are political leaders, the insurgent generals and prisoners released from Havana jail.

President Palma refused to let the prisoners leave jail until Secretary Taft sent an automobile for them. The prisoners were Jose Miguel Gomez and four others.

There is a persistent rumor that President Palma and Cabinet will soon resign.

If peace negotiations fail, the insurgents threaten to resume fighting at once.

General Guerra's army of 6,000 rebels are within striking distance of Havana.

If war is resumed and they attack the city, marines and sailors from the big fleet of United States warships in the harbor will be landed.

Havana, Sept. 22.—The landing of a United States army in Cuba, or the resignation of President Palma and his cabinet appear to be inevitable.

Rebel generals are threatening to fight the United States.

If Palma quits office, the insurgents will be satisfied. All they are fighting for, their leaders say, is new and fair elections. They declare Palma was elected by fraud.

If President Palma remains at the head of the government, it is believed that the rebels will renew fighting and endeavor to capture Havana.

They have a big army within a few miles' march of the capital. They say that they would be in possession of the city to-night had not Secretary of War Taft and Assistant Secretary of State Bacon been sent here by the United States government as mediators. The revolutionists are confident and aggressive. The Palma party is gloomy and depressed.

May Resign Positions.

They are now considering the question of yielding indirectly to insurgent demands by resigning the administration of Cuba's affairs or to invite armed intervention by the United States by sticking to their posts.

If they stick the civil war will continue and only be suppressed by an American army. They realize that if the United States soldiers have to fight the rebels in order to restore peace on the island, American occupancy will become permanent and that after seven years as a republic, Cuba will again lose independence and become a colony of the United States.

Funston Expected Soon.

General Funston is expected here on Tuesday. That he should be sent from Washington is taken as a sign that the United States government expects that it will be necessary to land an army here and has sent a general who has had great success in guerilla warfare in the Philippines to plan a campaign.

There are a dozen United States war ships now in Cuban waters or bound there. They are manned by nearly 5,000 blue jackets and about 250 officers.

Bands Scattered Over Island.

While the main rebel army is now in Havana province, there are many insurgent bands scattered through Cuba. Most of them are small detachments, but they are likely to prove a great menace to peace. Some of them are commanded by old guerilla chiefs and they may raid plantations and fight rural police in spite of any agreement arrived at here.

Nearly 300 bluejackets are guarding the property of Americans near Cienfuegos, where the insurgents are in force. It may be necessary to guard the Cuban estates of United States citizens in other parts of the island before the trouble is over.

AMERICA VICTORIOUS IN GREAT AUTO RACE

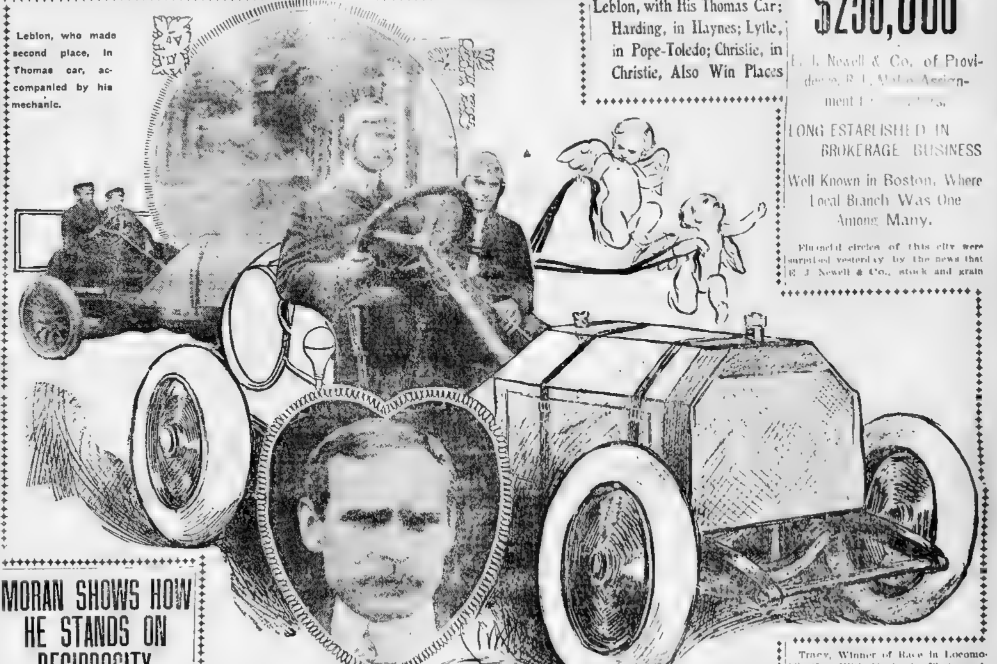
Leblon, with His Thomas Car; Harding, in Haynes; Lytle, in Pope-Toledo; Christie, in Christie, Also Win Places



Leblon, who made second place, in Thomas car, accompanied by his mechanic.

Tracy, Winner of Race in Locomobile Car, With Mechanic Photograph also shown in Heart design.

Daredevil Battle Between Winner and Leblon, Who Made Second Place, Feature of Brilliant Speed Contest Over 279-Mile Course.

BY J. C. KERRISON.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Sept. 22. Joe Tracy and the Locomobile, a combination which by its winning third place in the final of the Vanderbilt of a year ago [illegible] third Vanderbilt [illegible] this year, again distinguished themselves in the American elimination held on the [illegible] to-day. It was eminently fitting that they should win first honors. It proved conclusively that the showing made a year ago was by no means the results of accident, but rather of a combination of man and machine.

Tracy's victory was splendid in the extreme. It was achieved only as a result of a bitter hammer-and-tongs contest waged between himself and [illegible] the daring Frenchman, from the very start to the finish of the 297 miles of hard, up-hill, exacting and brilliant contest.

A contest which, while at times was hardly [illegible] will prove the [illegible] itself, was not without its brilliant points, its [illegible] elements or its bringing forth to light some remarkable [illegible] of generalship upon the part of not only Tracy and Leblon, but also of others of the American drivers.

The scintillating feature of the contest was, however, the daredevil battle between Tracy and Leblon. Both men threw care and caution to the wind and for over five hours these men battled each other, first one being in the lead and then the other.

Such a contest was never witnessed in an elimination, and has been equaled only in the final of a year ago. Starting as he did the eleventh machine, Tracy gradually [illegible] at different stages [illegible] if not wrecked machines to the front rank.

Then, just to add excitement to the [illegible] with him in the lead [illegible] ones an opportunity to compare the conservative driving with Leblon, recognized as one of the most able men in France, [illegible] equally daring Tracy, the man whom [illegible] and it was fighting not alone for the first honors in the contest, but likewise for a bride.

[illegible] car driver. It rather brought him further into the limelight of the motor racing world and established him firmly as the successor of the once great Oldfield, the [illegible] cheer and cheer.

Leblon rather upset the calculations of the knowing ones by proving to be the abler of the two French drivers, and what is more, as a man who could carry his head and exercise no small amount of generalship, and bring to the finish an American car in excellent condition.

These two qualifiers, together with Lytle [illegible] Pope-Toledo, had for weeks been admitted as having a right on the American team, but the other possibilities all fell by the wayside, and two men never considered dangerous landed places, Harding in the Haynes and Christie in his light touring car. It was the disasters of war that placed them in the team. Harding, however, won his honor with full credit and generalship. He is deserving of considerable praise for the excellent manner in which he drove this, the lightest weight horse-powered car in the race, it going from start to finish without a mishap and proving thoroughly reliable.

There is, however, some little talk anent the other two qualifiers, they being in the lead of the cars on the course at a time when the race was called off.

Although it had [illegible] the race [illegible] of the final [illegible] positions [illegible] two weeks hence [illegible] it was necessary to call the race off after three cars had finished.

The spectators crowded the course and made it absolutely impossible to finish the contest without injuring either spectators or contestants. Here the race was called. The Pope-Toledo was then in third place going [illegible] and the Christie car was in fifth place. The remaining cars on the track were the Frayer-Miller with Lawell up and Roberts in the Thomas. Roberts had little or no chance to get in on the team, while Lawell might have had an opportunity considering the way things had been going for the last fifty miles or so.

Oscar Lear, who entered the Frayer-Miller

MORAN SHOWS HOW HE STANDS ON RECIPROCITY.

In Sharp Letter, He Reminds "The Seven Seekers" That His Attitude on Question Has Been Consistent.

John B. Moran, in a statement in answer to the attack upon him in the appeal of "the Seven Seekers," for his alleged attitude on the reciprocity issue when Mr. Gaston was a candidate for Governor, recalls the language used by him on that occasion, which was:

"The reciprocity issue is Republican doctrine, never was and is not Democratic."

He accuses Mr. Gaston and Mr. Quincy of adopting the plank to deceive the public. He adds:

True Democratic Doctrine.

"Mr. Quincy will recognize these quotations as containing true Democratic doctrine, for on the inside of the cover of the book his name appears as the Massachusetts member of the Executive Committee of the Democratic Congressional Committee, the members of which prepared and published the book as a guide for Democratic speakers in the present campaign."

My views then are what they are now. What they are now appears from the following planks in my platform.

Reciprocity and tariff revision.

Free hides, free coal, free lumber, free iron and free wood pulp.

Legislation to save Massachusetts manufacturers from their present handicap by unjust tariff on the raw material of their product.

Fostering international commerce by generous and friendly concessions in the adjustment of our tariff to all nations opening to us their markets for our products.

Tearing Down Tariff.

Tearing down the tariff walls which entrench monopoly and sustain enormous fortunes exacted from honest labor and flaunted in the face of the toilers by their gross and vicious possessors.

As a Democrat with independence enough to think for myself and to act in accordance with my own opinion I am not to be criticized if I refused then as now to accept Mr. Quincy's views as mine upon any subject.

(Signed) John B. Moran.

PATTI'S OLD MASTER TO TEACH IN BOSTON

Signor Pietre Vallini, known in nearly all the capitals of Europe as an accomplished vocalist and singing master, has arrived in Boston and is to be a member of the New England Conservatory of Music. He is accompanied by Signora Vallini. Signor Vallini is a native of Florence, Italy, and his most famous pupil was Patti.

HELD UP BY BOYS AND ROBBED OF HIS MONEY.

Charlestown Man Victim of Daring Robbery at South End—Four Overpower Him, Fifth Rifles His Pockets

One of the boldest hold-ups that has been reported to the Boston police in months took place shortly after 9 o'clock last night in Warrenton street, near the corner of Tremont.

Arthur Kinsman, aged thirty-two, of No. 86 Monument street, Charlestown, was walking along Warrenton street, and when in front of No. 86 a boy about fifteen years old came from the doorway and asked Kinsman to step inside a minute.

Attacked by Quartet.

Kinsman turned and walked towards the entrance.

He had not more than reached the steps when he was set upon by four other lads about the same age of the one who had accosted him. While two grabbed him by the feet two others pinned his arms on his chest. They threw him to the ground and while four of the lads held him the fifth rifled his pockets.

Kinsman made an effort to fight clear but the more he tried the more vigorous were the lads attempts to hold him on the ground. When he began to kick one of his assailants struck him over the head with a club. After the boys had secured all Kinsman's money amounting to $4 in bills and some change they made their escape.

Officers Trail Suspects.

Kinsman made his way to the La Grange street police station, where he reported the hold-up. The wound on his head is not a serious one, but it will keep him at the Relief Hospital for several days.

Special Officers Linton, McCreedy and Mitchell were detailed on the case. They have a good description of the young highwaymen.

STOCK FIRM FAILS FOR $250,000

E. J. Newell & Co. of Providence, R. I., Make Assignment [illegible]

LONG ESTABLISHED IN BROKERAGE BUSINESS

Well Known in Boston, Where Local Branch Was One Among Many.

Financial circles of this city were surprised yesterday by the news that E. J. Newell & Co., stock and grain brokers of Providence, had failed. The firm was well known in Boston, having for years had connections here. It was regarded as one of the old time, sound and conservative houses. Dispatches from Providence state that the suspension of the firm caused a sensation in that city.

The failure of the firm for a quarter of a million dollars, coupled with the fact that the concern is believed to have carried a number of heavy speculative accounts for customers, caused [illegible] the street, and the concern's doors were thronged for hours by anxious inquirers representing the firm's clientele.

The house is one of the oldest in the stock brokerage business in this part of New England, having been in business some twenty-three years. It was originally started as Ellis J. Newell & Co., in 1883. Mr. Newell is the sole active member of the company, and so far as known is the concern.

Its creditors consist chiefly of customers who are scattered over Rhode Island and the nearer townships of Massachusetts and Connecticut, and it is [illegible] to secure a definite statement as to the amount outstanding to the credit of customers until after the assignee, Adolph Lederer of this city, and his clerks shall have examined the books.

It is [illegible] banking circles that some of the accounts run up into the thousands, and it is believed that the firm's customers in general are hard hit throughout [illegible] of New England. United States District Attorney Charles A. Wilson, of Rhode Island, who is counsel for Mr. Newell, being associated with J. Jerome Hahn in the management of the legal affairs involved in the assignment, said to-night:

"I do not know what the exact amount of [illegible] what information [illegible] they are in [illegible] of $[illegible] The assets may be [illegible]

[illegible] Wilson was of the opinion that the [illegible] would be in a position within a few days to make some sort of a statement to the creditors. According to the [illegible] the assets consists of high grade securities, bills receivable and money on hand [illegible]

The exact cause of the assignment has not as yet been made public, but it is believed that the firm was carrying heavy accounts for customers who are on the short side of the market and as accommodation to them after their margins had been wiped out the accounts were kept open in the hope that there would be a reaction in the stock market and with a downward tendency the margins would be restored. The trend of prices, however, has been toward an advance for some time and exceptionally heavy losses have been sustained by the short interests.

CZAR'S PALACE IS A DISMAL PRISON.

Robert Crozier Long Describes the Triple Ring of Sentries at Peterhof.

FLEET AND ARMY TO [illegible]

By Robert Crozier Long.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Peterhof, Sept. 22.—Nicholas II. has at last dared to leave his palace and the fortress park around it and to take a cruise on the Finnish seas. Even a besieged monarch prefers the risk of venturing abroad to perpetual confinement in a particularly ugly palace and a particularly gloomy park.

The railway station teems with police, gendarmes and with plain clothes agents of the secret police, who accost every loitering passenger with the remark, "It's a fine day. Have you come to see the fountains?" and conclude innocently, "I think I've seen you before"—a remark which is supposed to make would-be terrorists start.

The same comedy is gone through at the public park, where every one is told that it is a fine day, and asked if he has come to see the fountains.

But the guarding of the Czar's palace and of the dense park which surrounds it is a very different thing. The most reckless, resolute conspirator could not either by land or sea get within the grounds.

Fleet Guards Palace.

From the sea side Peterhof resembles a blockaded fortress. In a crescent stretching for [illegible] the palace anchors a continuous cordon of guardships and torpedo boats, never more than 300 yards apart. [illegible] side is a converted yacht, the Babetina, which [illegible] its two electric searchlights across the bay. On Cronstadt fortress and the waters around a glare is always directed and it is said here that in the glare of this searchlight Nicholas II. watched the fighting on the outlying forts during the recent mutiny.

Second Port Arthur.

From the land side the palace is another Port Arthur. The high, red painted wall enclosing the park has a sentry every ten yards. At the main entrance are sentries, gendarmes and a troop of Caucasus Cossacks, whom idlers come to stare at and ask themselves, "How many more are inside?" The fact is that inside the outer park wall there are three concentric crescents of sentries, all within a stone's throw of one another. They are mostly loyal Semenovtsi and Ismailotsi guardsmen, but all never belong to the same regiment, since the mutiny of the Preobrajensky guards has shown that no single regiment can be relied upon.

Between the second and third line of sentries is a high barbed-wire fence, which runs along straight paths so that any one crossing it can be seen against the sky line. Finally around the palace itself are sentries belonging to the Emperor's own Moslem guard.

GERMAN WOMAN ON TRAIL OF MORMONS

Fraulein Winkler Sent Here to Find Out What Has Become of Female Converts.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Berlin, Sept. 22.—German women are getting anxious about the fate of their sisters who have entered the Mormon communities at Salt Lake City and elsewhere in the United States.

Fraulein Maria Winkler has been sent to America by the Association of German Women to investigate the conditions of [illegible] Day Saints especially with regard to the position of German girls who have married Mormons. It [illegible] have [illegible] Brigham [illegible] young [illegible] Utah [illegible] their lot among [illegible]

Fraulein Winkler has been commissioned to investigate whether it is true that these German converts to Mormonism are condemned to [illegible] and otherwise [illegible] ganize a committee of German women in New York to save German girls from being imported into Mormon cities.

BIG PROFITS FOR WAGE EARNERS IN REALTY.

MONEY DOUBLED FOR OWNERS IN FEW YEARS

A[illegible] eight years ago. [illegible] large, nor is the profit, as money is [illegible] nowadays. But the profit is just 100 per cent., which is very large in these times of big deals.

Not in "Boom" Class.

A general idea of how real estate in and near Boston has appreciated during the past few years and of the value of the policy of working people owning their own homes was given in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN a week ago. Specific instances of profits made in land are given to-day, and others will be published from time to time during the next few weeks. No "boom" for any particular sections of land is intended. The object is to give the readers of this newspaper an opportunity to learn what has been the result when men, looking ahead, have put their money into land and then lived on the land, or built houses and sold them.

Near the present site of the Highland station of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, in West Roxbury, there was a farm of eighteen acres, twenty years ago, known as the Kingsbury estate. Its pastures and orchards served the ordinary purposes of a farm, and it was taxed by the city on only $2,000. Neighboring farmers considered it to be worth no more than that figure. It was owned jointly by four persons, who, in 1897, were very glad to accept an offer of $36,000 for it. The increase of $34,000 in the price but represented the natural increase in the value of real estate in that section of the city.

The eighteen acres were divided into 130 house lots. These were sold at an average of $400 apiece, some more, some less. The average size was 50 by 100 feet. The capitalist who bought the farm, therefore, sold the land at about $52,000, a quick and easy profit of $16,000. Those who invested in the house lots in 1898 have watched their land just double in value. The lot mentioned as sold last week at $800 was only one of many, and all the adjoining lots are now quoted at prices in similar proportion to their original cost.

Handicapped at First.

The farm land mentioned in this case after being improved, with streets built, sewers, gas and water pipes introduced, was bounded by what are now Corey and Weld streets and Addington road. The events which took place after the deal mentioned occurred in similar fashion in other districts of West Roxbury, notably Lansdowne, another stretch of farm land.

30 Acres in Two Farms.

"Lansdowne" was originally the Morse and Hennessey farms. In place of plowed furrows and cow pastures there are now fine streets, some of them lined with attractive houses. The two farms had a combined area of about thirty acres. The land was purchased by a syndicate twelve years ago for $20,000, the sum then being considered a tremendous figure. The land was divided into 225 house lots, which were sold at from $350 to $600 a piece, or at an average of $475 per lot. The syndicate therefore sold the land for $106,875, a gross profit of over $85,000. It is estimated by expert real estate appraisers that a $600 lot will in five years sell at $900, and already the price has increased from the original figures of three years ago. The land has been sold on easy terms, and the purchasers have been exempted from all costs such as interests and taxes. The land was [illegible] the Edward T. Harding [illegible] the fine graded streets with [illegible] sewers, water, gas [illegible] land was needed [illegible] site of a rifle range [illegible] voted to purchase it for $12[illegible] As West Roxbury was fast becoming [illegible] residential district, however, and [illegible] to the proximity of a [illegible] the order was vetoed [illegible] by the Mayor of Boston. This particular section has not been built up yet, but some of those men who bought lots of land at [illegible] for instance, have already [illegible] per lot.

Rapidly Developing.

This land is bounded by Temple, Baker and Spring streets and the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad. It lies between the Roxbury and Spring street stations of that road.

The territory south of Forest Hills, West Roxbury, through to the Hyde Park, Dedham and Newton lines—is a great field for real estate development. The city started slowly at first to grow in that direction, but during the past few years the growth has received great impetus. Where lands are improved and street cars are sent values increase.

ARABIAN WAR COSTS SULTAN 50,000 MEN

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Constantinople, Sept. 22.—During the last fifteen months it is estimated that 50,000 of the Sultan's troops have been destroyed by battle and disease in the fight the Turkish government is carrying on to subdue the Arabs in the Yemen, a Turkish villayet in Southwest Arabia, along the Red Sea. Recently it was the cause of a bitter dispute, nearly ending in war with England.

The Arabs never have recognized the authority of the Sultan and maintain a ceaseless guerilla warfare against the Sultan's troops. Little is heard or printed of this desperate struggle, the cost of which to the Sultan is enormous.

The Sultan's troops are all sent from Turkey in Europe, as the native Turkish troop in Syria and Mesopotamia sympathize with the insurgent Arabs.

The troops do not know where they are bound when the transports sail from Turkish ports.

Despite the large forces now in the Yemen, the Turks hold only the shore forts [illegible] or two strong positions in the interior.

This little known war is being watched closely by England and Italy, and Germany, which is Turkey's only friend among the European powers, keeps an eye on the progress of events.

IRISH SOCIETIES UNITE IN WELCOME TO O'CONNOR

Rousing Meeting Planned for National Delegate at Reception In Boston Theatre On October 7.

The reception at the Boston Theatre on Sunday night, October 7, to the distinguished Irish leader and literary man, T. P. O'Connor, M. P., promises to be one of the greatest given in Boston in a number of years.

Mr. O'Connor sailed yesterday on the Celtic from Queenstown for New York, accompanied by Mrs. O'Connor and the Hon. Edward Blake, M. P., of Canada. Mr. Blake has been in Europe for his health, but will probably accompany Mr. O'Connor to Boston. They are delegates from the Irish National party in the British Parliament and the Irish League in Ireland to represent these organizations at the third annual convention of the United Irish League of America, at Philadelphia, on October 2 and 3.

Mayor Fitzgerald will preside at the meeting at the Boston Theatre, and other distinguished friends of the Irish cause will be invited to occupy seats on the platform.

Plan Monster Meeting.

Other organizations of Irishmen will join with the United Irish League of Boston in honoring this distinguished representative of Ireland. It is eleven years since Mr. O'Connor spoke in Boston. There are few abler public men or more powerful speakers than Mr. O'Connor on the other side of the Atlantic.

After leaving Boston Mr. O'Connor will pass ten days or a fortnight travelling in Canada, and will address a farewell meeting in New York on Sunday evening, October 21, on the eve of his sailing for the other side to attend his parliamentary duties during the Autumn session of the House of Commons.

Upwards of 100 delegates from the different branches of the organization in and around Boston and from other Massachusetts cities are going on to attend the Philadelphia convention.

Redmond Leads House Fight.

Great pressure was brought to bear on John Redmond, M. P., to induce him to come to the Philadelphia convention. He would probably have come were it not that an Autumn session of the House of Commons has been called, and a very important measure affecting the town tenants of Ireland will be its principal work, aside from the English education bill, the opposition to which is being mainly led by Mr. Redmond and the Irish party on behalf of their fellow countrymen in England.

The officers who will have charge of the United Irish League of America for the next two years, during which most important events for Ireland will be transpiring, will have to be elected at the Philadelphia convention. The retiring officers are John F. Finerty, of Chicago, national president; T. B. Fitzpatrick, Boston, national treasurer, and John O'Callaghan, Boston, national secretary; each of whom has held office since the organization of the United Irish League of America in New York five years ago.

In that period the organization has been able to send nearly $200,000 to Ireland to enable the National party to fight the battle, and it was owing to its support that in great measure was due the winning of the land act, the new laborers' act, the practical certainty of the passage of the town tenants' act, and the assurance that a measure of national self government will be the main work for Ireland next session.

WOODEN PAVING FOR BOSTON STREETS.

New Departure in City Paving to Be Made by Experiment on Washington Street.

A new departure in street paving in Boston will be made one week from Monday when the task of paving Washington street from Beech street to Milk street with wood block pavements will be commenced. The contract has been let to the United States Wood Preserving Company of New York. The job will cost $40,000, one fourth of which will be paid by the Boston Elevated Railroad Company and $18,000 by the Transit Commission, the necessity of repaving the street resulting from the building of the new Washington street subway.

While the Teamsters' Union has objected to the wood block pavement, it was favored by the merchants as being practically noiseless and clean. It is because of its cleanliness that the Washington street department stores particularly favor it, as they assert that several thousand dollars worth of goods are destroyed annually by the dirt arising from the ordinary stone pavement.

But four streets in Boston have any wood pavement on them at present, and these only a small amount, so that Washington street is obviously a new departure in street paving here.

Engineer Sullivan Talks.

Engineer Sullivan, who has just returned from New York, where he went to make a special study of wood block paving, is confident that the new pavement will be perfectly satisfactory to teamsters. He said yesterday to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter:

"To obviate such objections as have arisen to the wood pavement on Tremont street at the Park street slope, we shall use smaller blocks on Washington street, giving the horses a better footing. We shall use the new 'gum' block in narrow four-inch strips. This will bring the joints close together and give the horses a good footing. These are now being used throughout the business section of New York and are in high favor with the teamsters."

Lasts as Long as Stone.

Mr. Sullivan says that the life of the wood block pavement is fifteen years, as long as the average life of a stone pavement and longer than the life of asphalt. The cost is about the same as stone and asphalt. The blocks will be laid upon a six inch concrete base and are of a moderate depth, three and a half inches. These blocks are treated with a mixture of creosote and resin, making them water proof. Blocks so treated, it has been proven, are sufficient for the most extreme conditions.

JAPANESE GET NAUGHTY.

Tokio, Sept. 22.—Crime in Japan has increased alarmingly since the closing of the war, particularly among discharged soldiers. Many policemen have been killed and wounded in encounters with armed malefactors, and burglary with violence is extremely prevalent.

RUINS OF OLD CITY FOUND.

Athens, Sept. 22.—The remains of a fortified city, dating from probably 2,000 years B. C., have been found by Wilhelm Vollgraff near Argos. Some prehistoric vases of curiously finished workmanship were found.

INTERESTING FACTS.

For Nearly Every Man, Woman or Child.

A short time ago we published an article recommending to our readers the new discovery for the cure of Dyspepsia, called Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and the claims then made regarding the wonderful curative properties of the remedy have been abundantly sustained by the facts. People who were cautious about trying new remedies advertised in the newspapers and were finally induced to give Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets a trial were surprised and delighted at the results. In many cases a single package costing but 50 cents at any drug store made a complete cure, and in every instance the most beneficial results were reported. From a hundred or more received we have space to publish only a few of the latest, but assure our readers we receive so many commendatory letters that we shall publish each week a fresh list of genuine, unsolicited testimonials and never publish the same one twice.

From James Yemmeisler, LaCrosse, Wis.: Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are doing me more good than anything I ever tried and I was so pleased at results that I gave away several boxes to my friends who have also had the same benefits.

From Jacob Anthony, Portmurray, New Jersey: I have taken Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets with the best results. I had Dyspepsia for 6 years, and had taken a great deal of medicine, but the Tablets seem to take right a hold and I feel good. I am a farmer and lime burner and I heartily recommend to everyone who has any trouble with his stomach to use these Tablets.

From Mrs. M. K. West, Preston, Minn.: I have received surprisingly good effects from using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. I gave one-half of my last box to a friend who also suffered from indigestion and she had the same good results.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are a certain cure for all forms of Indigestion. They are not claimed to be a cure-all, but are prepared for stomach troubles only, and physicians and druggists everywhere recommend them to all persons suffering from Nervous Dyspepsia, sour or acid stomach, heartburn, bloating or wind on stomach and similar disorders.

BRITISH PRINCELING OF A YEAR FACES THE CAMERA

Youngest Wales Baby, Royalty Thinks, Looks Like Victoria.

London, Sept. 22.

The first birthday of Prince John of Wales, youngest son of the Prince and Princess of Wales, was celebrated by taking a photographer into the [illegible] and subjecting the princeling to the camera ordeal. The photographer says that he said "goo-goo" like most plebeian children. The photo has attracted considerable attention among the set in the nobility which was closest to the infant's great grandmother, Queen Victoria. It is said that the child shows more resemblance to the late Queen than any of her descendants. The baby's full name is Prince John Charles Francis of Wales. He was one year old on July 12 last. If his two elder brothers should die he would be the heir-apparent. If crowned, he would be King John II. The first was one of England's most unpopular monarchs. It was from him the Magna Charta was wrested by the barons.

SOCIALISTS PLAN STRIKE IN GERMANY

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Manheim, Germany, Sept. 22.—To come up for discussion at the annual conference of the German Socialist Party, which begins here to-morrow, will be the question of whether a general strike shall be called throughout Germany.

There has been a strong demand from a numerous section of the party that instead of spending year after year in tedious political agitation without much visible effect, the Socialist party should bring the entire industry of the country to a standstill through a general strike, thus paralyzing the forces of law and order at a stroke. One voter in every three was a Socialist at the last election in Germany.

PRISONS TO COME DOWN.

Paris, Sept. 22.—The two ancient and famous prisons of La Roquette, for youthful offenders, and St. Lazare, for women, are to be pulled down and reconstructed close to the fortifications on the extreme verge of the city. St. Lazare was founded in 1631 by St. Vincent de Paul as a mission convent.

400 MASSACRED BY DUTCH TROOPS

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

The Hague, Sept. 22.—Dutch troops have captured Badoeng in the East Indies, and, according to reports, have massacred four hundred of the inhabitants, including women and children.

Badoeng, or Badong, is a seaport on the island of Bali, in the Malay archipelago, being the capital of a small native state whose ruler some weeks ago started a revolt against the Dutch troops stationed in the vicinity and killed a number of them.

HAZERS ARE GIVEN A THOROUGH SCARE

Sayre, Pa., Sept. 22.—Students at the high school here who hazed a fellow student were given such a fright that they have not recovered yet. Their victim was Abram Booth, a newcomer in the school, and they started to haze him in the approved method upon the steps of the schoolhouse. Booth fought back and in the melee was thrown headlong down the stairs. They picked him up, but he was unconscious, and, badly frightened, they hurried him to the hospital, thinking him dying.

There the physicians found he had little more damage than a bruised head and hip.

PABST MILWAUKEE

Why Pabst Beer Is Best

The usual four-day process of making malt for brewing may be compared to the unnatural rapid growth of grain planted in midsummer. It makes malt quickly, but at the sacrifice of the vital food quality of the grain.

Malt, as most readers know, is the life, the substance of beer, and the food value of any beer depends on the richness of the malt from which it is made.

Pabst exclusive eight-day malt is made in Nature's own way, by slow growth of the barley. All of the food value of the barley is thus retained in Pabst eight-day malt, and makes

Pabst BlueRibbon

Beer the richest beer in food strength.

Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer is always pure and clean. The choicest hops and chemically pure water are used with Pabst eight-day malt in the brewing.

CZAR'S PALACE SERVANTS IN DEATH PLOT.

Gardener and Two Other Men in Conspiracy to Kill Min[illegible] [illegible] and [illegible]

PLANNED TO THROW BOMB IN MIDST OF COUNCIL

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 22.—Discoveries made by the authorities show that the plan of the terrorists whose plot to assassinate the Czar was announced in these dispatches on Wednesday, was to have thrown a bomb inside Peterhof Palace while the Czar was engaged in a state chamber consultation with [illegible] Duke Nicholas Nicolaievitch and Minister [illegible] and his other court advisers.

By such an attack the terrorists hoped to remove their most important enemies at a single blow.

Gardener Head of Plot.

These details have been brought out through the arrest of a gardener and two of the palace servants implicated in the conspiracy. The gardener is [illegible] head of the plot. He has been identified as one of the most daring of the [illegible] of terrorists. Recently he secured employment [illegible] palace as gardener as he was supposed to be a stranger in Peterhof [illegible] won over the two servants to his cause.

These servants [illegible] of [illegible] have been on their own [illegible] began [illegible] notes about the palace [illegible] were written:

"Nicholas, prepare to die. Your days are numbered."

These notes gave the clue that revolutionary agents were [illegible] the palace and a close watch was kept for them. Detectives arrested the three.

Every effort to make the gardener talk has failed, but the servants confessed and [illegible] details of the plot.

Czar Greatly Alarmed.

The correspondent of the Petersburg Press was informed from a high official source to-day that it is extremely improbable that the Czarina and the imperial children will return to St. Petersburg when the Czar finishes his cruise on the royal yacht Standart.

FIERCE TYPHOON SWEEPS OVER CAVITE.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Manila, Sept. 22.—The Bay of Cavite, the scene of Admiral Dewey's great victory over the Spanish fleet on May 1, 1898, was to-day visited by a disastrous typhoon. It is ordered considerable loss of life has resulted and enormous damage has been caused.

The storm's scope extended far south of Cavite, but telegraph wires on land are down in all directions from the city and it is impossible to get details of what has happened.

At Cavite the arsenal and shipping were damaged.

The gunboat Arayat is ashore and several lighters were sunk.

Shipping in Cavite Bay is known to have suffered heavily. Nearly a score of vessels are said to have foundered in the bay or been driven ashore.

Immense damage has been caused on land. Buildings were blown down, trees uprooted, houses unroofed or destroyed and sheds and barns blown to pieces. It will be impossible to give any idea of the results until a search can be made of the wrecked buildings, as it is believed many persons are buried in the ruins of their homes.

Debris from the destroyed buildings fills the streets at many points. Losses are said to have occurred among the soldiers stationed there. The gunboat Arayat was driven ashore and is badly damaged. Several of her crew are reported to have been lost and others injured.

Only the fact that many of the buildings are constructed of stone and so were able to resist the efforts of the storm prevented the loss from being much heavier.

W. W. ASTOR GOES TO CARLSBAD FOR CURE

Gout Drives the "Lord of Millions" to Seek Ease at a German Bath.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Sept. 22.—William Waldorf Astor has gone to Carlsbad to complete his cure of the gout. For months he has been suffering the torments of this aristocratic malady amid surroundings that have brought home to him the futility of wealth to produce health.

During his illness he was confined to his office building on the Thames embankment, where he has, without doubt, the most magnificent set of apartments to be found in London. The office building itself is a dainty bit of Tudoresque architecture and [illegible] like a sordid business office.

The upper floor is devoted to living rooms, which are paneled in oak, decorated with pictures by old masters, and which serve as the background for the rarest book, antique silverware and furniture.

It was in such environment that this "lord of millions" spent his days of suffering, while beneath his gouty feet in the vaults rested wealth that only the Bank of England could surpass.

When Mr. Astor returns from Carlsbad he will go to his palatial town house in Carlton terrace for a while and then visit Hever Castle and some of his other country places.

BOOK TELLS HOW TO AVERT SEASICKNESS

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Paris, Sept. 22.—Dr. Cornelius is the president of a German league for the prevention of seasickness. He has just arrived in Paris to make arrangements for the translation into French of his "Guide to Seasickness," which, it seems, would have been more happily named "Guide From Seasickness." SON FIGHTS FOR CUSTODY OF STENSLAND.

Money Kings Involved by Confession Believed to Be Behind Move.

BANK DEFAULTER MAY REACH NEW YORK TO-DAY

New York, Sept. 22.—When President Paul O. Stensland of the wrecked Milwaukee Avenue State Bank of Chicago, against whom [illegible] have been found for larceny and forgery arrives to-morrow or Monday, on the Hamburg-American line steamship Prinz Adelbert, a battle royal will begin for the custody of his person between his son, Theodore Stensland, fortified by a host of legal talent, and the State's Attorney's office of Cook County, Ills.

In charge of State's Attorney Olson and an Illinois official, Paul O. Stensland is being returned to answer for his alleged crime of looting the bank, which had 22,000 depositors [illegible] of $4,000,000. His journey from Tangier, Morocco, where he was apprehended, had been in a measure voluntary.

As far as known he is willing to return to Chicago and it is believed that he has made a full confession which incriminates many men prominent in the worlds of finance and of society in Chicago.

Behind the apparent motive of young Stensland to save [illegible] [illegible] are equally interested [illegible] ones who are putting up the funds for the vigorous campaign.

POSSE IN VAIN DRAG WOODS FOR BOY.

Medford Mystery Deepens as Searchers Get No Clue After Five Days.

VOLUNTEERS TO AID IN THE HUNT TO-DAY

After bidding good bye to his parents and telling them not to expect him home to dinner, as he expected to spend the day rambling through the woods, Herbert F. Sterling, the nineteen-year-old son of Alderman Henry Sterling, Main street, Medford, disappeared last Tuesday morning leaving absolutely no trace of his whereabouts. The woods from one end to the other in the vicinity of Medford have been dragged in vain.

No cause can be found that would induce the young man to leave home. The police and family believe that the boy in walking through the woods either lost his way or met with an accident. The idea of his losing his way seems hardly possible to those who knew him best, as he was accustomed to long rambles almost daily in the Metropolitan Reservation and woods in the vicinity of Medford, and apparently knew every tree and inch of ground.

Parents Are Frantic.

The parents and relatives of the missing boy are almost frantic at his absence. Each day since the boy's disappearance, from sunrise until night, the half-crazed father has scoured the woods and reservations in the hope of finding some clue. Party after party of searchers have started out and spent the entire day tramping through the woods, upturning leaves and brushes, only to return home at night fall tired and disappointed.

Scour Woods To-day.

Another search will be made this morning and the woods in the vicinity of the town throughly gone over again. The father of the missing boy with the police and a large number of friends who have volunteered their services, will go over every inch of wooded ground within a radius of ten miles of the town. The woods in Medford lead to Stoneham and it is over this route that Mr. Sterling believes his son went on the morning of his disappearance.

Young Sterling graduated from high school last June. He was popular with pupils and teachers.

10,000 REBELS TO WAR ON MEXICO

El Paso, Texas, Sept. 22.—The Spanish paper Reforma Social this afternoon says:

"Coatzacoalcos, Sept. 22.—The people of Minatitlan, Suchil, San Juan, Exquilma and San Geronimo have declared against the Mexican government and Diaz. They have been joined by federal guards. The revolutionists are 10,000 strong.

BANKERS ENJOY HARBOR CRUISE

Over 600 members attended the annual outing of the Bank Officers' Association yesterday afternoon, on the steamer Old Colony to Thacher's Island and return.

During the cruise a modest but enticing collation was served. Music was furnished by Streell Brothers orchestra.

The entertainment committee included Harry A. Johnson, Charles W. Handy, C. W. Marston, Arthur E. Gladwin, Harrie L. Brett.

ASK PUBLIC TO SAVE PAUL REVERE HOUSE

The executive committee of the Paul Revere Memorial Association makes an earnest plea for public contributions for $3,000 for necessary repairs at the Paul Revere house in North Square. The building is to serve as a public monument to Paul Revere.

The building costs $12,000 and this money is now in the hands of the committee. The deeds will be passed at once. About $6,000 was needed for repairs, of this amount $3,000 has already been received.

SNEAK THIEVES GET $160.

False key workers entered the residence of Maria L. Bates at No. 8 Sexton street Dorchester, yesterday, and stole jewelry and other valuables worth $160. The police are investigating the robbery.

DECLARES POLISH IS SPOKEN IN HEAVEN

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Berlin, Sept. 22.—"Polish is the language spoken by Christ and His Apostles, and it [illegible] language spoken in heaven."

This declaration, made by a Polish witness in a recent case, shows the reverence in which the Poles hold their native language and explains partially the opposition the Prussian authorities are meeting in carrying through the compulsory use of German in the Polish schools.

Where religious instruction is concerned the opposition of the Poles is particularly persistent. In certain districts of Posen the children, instigated by their parents, refuse to answer questions about religion, except in Polish, or to say their prayers in wha[illegible] regard as a foreign tongue.

At [illegible] hidden obstinately re[illegible] fused [illegible] and were dismissed from [illegible] in order that their parents might consider the serious consequences of persistent antagonism to the [illegible] children returned to school they were equally recalcitrant.

The school authorities have telegraphed the Berlin officials for instructions, as it is feared that this language boycott will spread.

MADAME DU GAST TO START FARM COLONY

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Paris, Sept. 22.—Madame du Gast, the celebrated French sportswoman, will leave shortly for Morocco, where she will buy extensive tracts of land on which she proposes to start an agricultural colony.

As soon as the land is ready for cultivation Madame du Gast will receive thereon poor French families, to whom she will lease it for a purely nominal price, just sufficient to preserve their self respect and discourage pauperism. Her enterprise has met with the highest approval of the French Minister of Colonies, and also the Minister of Agriculture, both of whom have offered her all possible assistance in her undertaking.

Piles Cured.

Countless Hundreds of Pile Sufferers Have Been Quickly Cured by the Wonderful Pyramid Pile Cure, and More Being Cured Every Day.

A Free Trial Package Sent to All to Prove Its Remarkable Power.

Since the Pyramid Pile Cure has been discovered and has been proven to be a quick and certain means of relief and lasting cure, there is no excuse for undergoing an operation.

Does the Pyramid Pile Cure give immediate relief? Does it cure? Try a [illegible] prove it to yourself as [illegible] have done before you. Then go to your druggist and get a 50-cent box and complete the cure.

The Pyramid Pile Cure acts with a certainty and a rapidity that is both pleasing and astonishing.

Take, for example, the case of Mr. Geo. B. Bender, 28 Diversey St., Chicago. We quote his own words:

"I have been a sufferer for 14 years from internal and external piles. I have bought all kinds of pile cures to get relief, but it was all in vain until I read your ad in the American and I sent for a sample which you sent me. I used it. I have bought one 50c box of Pyramid Pile Cure and one box of Pyramid Ointment. I have used them as you directed and today I bought another 50c box. Gentlemen, candidly speaking, I must tell you the truth that I am feeling fine after using one 50c box and I am free from pain at present. I sincerely believe it is one of the best and grandest pile cures in the world. I would advise all sufferers to try the Pyramid Pile Cure, for it is the best remedy ever used. It is a sure cure. I am very thankful for the sample you sent me.

"The Pyramid Pile Cure is a God-send to the sufferer of piles and I know it."

The Pyramid Pile Cure has quickly and easily cured the worst cases of piles. The Pyramid Pile Cure heals ulcers and sores, reduces inflammation and takes away all itching and pain.

Prove it to yourself at our own expense. That is all we ask you to do.

Send your name and address to the Pyramid Drug Co., 53 Pyramid Building, Marshall, Michigan, and get a free sample package by return mail.

Piano Prices Are Dropping

OUR FIGHT WITH THE BIG PIANO TRUST

Cuts Trust Profits

Some of the small dealers are taking courage. Have you noticed the prices go down lately? Not much, but it is an indication of what will follow.

The small dealers' courage is born of necessity. They must lower prices to sell. We are just starting what promises to be a smashing fight all along the line. Piano prices must tumble, and they won't stop until they get down where they belong. But remember this—the Piano Trust will never price their own makes below us. We won't let them. We promise you this, no matter what price we quote in this announcement we will always shade it enough to come under piano prices quoted on a Piano Trust instrument. Remember this. Always at least investigate us before buying.

More Splendid Bargains This Week

The prices on the well-known standard high-class makes quoted below will not be changed for at least 6 days. Many fine new and second-hand uprights of other equally first grade makers will go for so little that you would hardly believe the prices if we quoted them.

YOUNG ERNE WILL MAKE HUB DEBUT WITH DESHLER.

This week's boxing entertainment at the Lincoln A. C. promises to [illegible] show that has been put on at the club, as Young Erne of Philadelphia and Dave Deshler are to combat in the main act of fifteen rounds.

As Mish Murray is determined that nothing but high class bouts shall be held at the Chelsea club, the card billed on Wednesday night will furnish the fans one of the best fistic exhibitions which has been put on.

Strenuous efforts have been made in the past to get Young Erne to perform in the Hub, as he is the best there is in his class in the Quaker town, and Boston fight experts who have seen him in the ring are loud in their praise of his ability, and readily pronounce him a wonder. His record alone is sufficient to tell what a shining light he is and speaks for itself.

The semi final bout will give Jim Lloyd, the Englishman, his first chance to show his pace on these shores. He is to meet Johnnie Mahan of Cambridge, who will make him disport himself to the limit.

VAZAKA IS SOLD TO PROVIDENCE MAN

Vazaka, the four-year-old trotting mare that Lon McDonald has had in training at Readville this year for John O'Connor of Boston has been sold by the latter to L. B. Peck of Providence for the reported sum of $2,500.

She is one of the most promising green mares ever worked in New England, having gone trials right close to 2.12, and with every prospect of much greater improvement in the future.

Vazaka was bred at the Forbes Farm in Milton, and is a full sister of Henry Richardson's prime young stallion Seumanee, being by Bingen, 2.06¼, out of Red Tape, by Prodigal, 2:16; second dam Brown Silk, 2:19, dam of India Silk, 2:10½, etc., by Baron Wilkes, 2:18.

HUB YACHT BEATS NEW YORK BOAT

New York, Sept. 22—Caleb Lorings' Orestes, the champion 22-footer of Massachusetts Bay, by defeating the Atlantic Yacht Club's representative, Soya, which belongs to W. A. Barstow, in two straight races this afternoon off Coney Island, won not only the $500 cup offered by Daniel G. [illegible] of the Seagate organization, but also the inter-city class championship.

FIRST GAME UNDER NEW RULES PLAYED AT DORCHESTER.

On a soggy field with the rain pelting down the Dorchester High and Medford High teams inaugurated the local interscholastic football season at the Dorchester street grounds yesterday afternoon. After playing two ten minute halves neither team was able to score and the result ended 0 to 0.

It was a small attendance which watched the evenly fought gridiron contest on account of the adverse weather conditions.

There were a few football experts on hand to size up the first demonstration of the game as played [illegible] they did [illegible] to determine [illegible] from the [illegible] played [illegible] Dorchester did spring some [illegible] yard passes and short, onside kicks but their real benefit could not be determined on such a slippery field, yet the possibilities of such plays were evident to the spectators.

It was the first game played locally where the ten yard gain in three downs [illegible] demand, was [illegible] clause calling for [illegible] five yards [illegible] [illegible] downs [illegible] during [illegible]

[illegible] Medford [illegible] ball in [illegible] most of the time but [illegible] chances to score [illegible] Dorchester braced and kept the suburban boys busy.

[illegible] and Medford [illegible] back [illegible] reached [illegible] ground, and the ball was kicked outside. Dorchester carried the ball ten yards and Emerson fumbled, letting Medford have the ball within striking distance of the goal. On [illegible] Dorchester [illegible] was called when Medford [illegible] Dorchester's 25 yard line.

Pray kicked off for Medford in the second half to Hall on his 25-yard line. Dorchester could not gain and punted to the middle of the field, where she held for downs. Dorchester tried a long forward pass from quarter to end but lost the ball, and Medford kicked to Dorchester's 20-yard line, but the ball was returned the same way to mid-field. Saulsman, captain for Medford, took the leather on a criss-cross and skirted right end for a 25-yard run, but time was called when he was downed. Riley and Gray played a strong game for Dorchester, while Saulsman, Pray and Blaikie excelled for Medford. The score:

MEDFORD HIGH. DORCHESTER HIGH.

[illegible]

Score—Medford High 0, Dorchester High 0. [illegible] Time—[illegible]

BOSTON ELKS TO PRACTICE HARD

Present and past masters of baseball belonging to the Boston Lodge of Elks are requested to report to the American grounds every forenoon between 10 and 12 o'clock. The available material will be in practice for the meeting against the Malden Lodge of Elks, scheduled for the outing at Saugus race track on October 6.

It is hoped that the members will not be diffident in showing up for the practice games, as it is known that the Maldens have a strong team to put in the field, and the Boston Elks will have to look closely, or lose their laurels as ball tossers.

Harvard Oarsmen Back; Hawthorne Tells Why The Plucky Crew Lost

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Seven members of the Harvard crew that was recently defeated in England by Cambridge arrived here to-day on the American line steamship St. Louis. They all looked gloomy and refused to be cheered by their friends, who were at the pier to meet them. The men who arrived are Robert L. Bacon, Sydney W. Fish, Philip Witter Flint, G. D. Morgan, John Richardson, Robert M. Tappan and Frank M. Blagden coxswain. Fish, who acted as spokesman for the crowd said

"The other crew was the better one. That is all we can say. We were fairly beaten, but it was a fine race. Outside of our disappointment in not winning we had a fine time and have nothing but praise for our English brothers. We did the best we could."

The other members of the crew, Captain O. D. Filley and D. A. Newhall, No. 7, remained in England. They will return home next month

By Julian Hawthorne.

T[illegible] Americans who [illegible] rowed for the honor of their [illegible] abroad [illegible] return home [illegible] themselves [illegible] Before [illegible] they were [illegible] feared and [illegible] of rowing among [illegible] expressed their opinion [illegible] of the victory were from being remote [illegible] they were reported to [illegible] the Thames course [illegible] the English universities after [illegible] or nearly, the record established [illegible] century of effort. In physique, man for man, they were superior [illegible] opponents, as fine a boat load of athletes as ever sat in an nina [illegible]

They rowed on a course with which they could be but imperfectly familiar; their coxswain was unable to take full advantage of the peculiarities of the Thames tide, which offers perplexities different from those of any American river, the banks were lined with hundreds of thousands of shouting, excited and patriotic Englishmen, who kept up a continuous roar mile after mile during the entire contest, with an effect upon the crew behind that could not but have a tendency to discourage them; and yet, in spite of all, they had begun to pull up in the last two miles of that terrific struggle, and at the finish were closer to their rivals than they had been since the end of the first mile and a half.

It is vain to surmise what might have been, in a race, if this or that condition had been otherwise; but in view of the fact that the Americans finished the [illegible] the two crews, one may allow himself the speculation whether, had the course been half a mile longer, the result might have been a good deal closer [illegible] it was. And two lengths, after nearly four and a half miles of rowing, is [illegible] respectably close, at any rate.

PROUD OF THE HARVARD CREW.

We [illegible] then, very far from being ashamed of [illegible] crew. We are proud of them [illegible] such contests, among [illegible] [illegible] only in part [illegible] story, they are in no small degree fought out for instruction and [illegible] [illegible] And in order to get the best uses from adversity we should freely and fearlessly investigate what may seem to be the causes of failure. Let us [illegible] or indulge false pride, or seek for excuses. That way lies further defeat. If we were beaten we may be sure there was good reason for it.

[illegible] thing for us to do is to determine, if possible, what the reason was, and then, if possible, adopt measures to overcome the obstacles to victory. We [illegible] rather learn how to beat Englishmen strictly on our merits than beat them by chance or a fluke, only to be defeated next time. For a fluke victory would mean cessation of improvement, whereas a victory well earned would mean a real advance in the art of rowing, which would bring results as permanent as they would be gratifying.

Let us first remember that the English crew beat us with men inferior, as above noted, to our own in actual strength of limb and in wind and endurance. They had not trained as thoroughly as our men had; and they rowed in a boat fifteen pounds heavier than ours and were steered by a coxswain twenty pounds

The race as a whole was that a wear[illegible] ing up process [illegible] ly what [illegible] or nerve racking [illegible] tiring at [illegible] the brilliant work [illegible] times of Lytle [illegible] but a common [illegible] final.

Average Time, 54:3 Miles.

While the average time [illegible] was but 54.3 miles per hour [illegible] than the elimination of a year ago there is no question but what had it really been necessary Tracy could have driven faster. He did not by any means display the real ability of his car, for on several laps he showed better than sixty miles an hour. Tracy's work was [illegible] the speediest of the day, although it [illegible] be said that he drove as consistently as did Lebion, who [illegible] lap after lap within a [illegible] of the same time.

There was [illegible] over the fact that [illegible] the race of the [illegible] to-night suffering [illegible] from the results of [illegible] telegraph pole that put him [illegible] out of the running on the [illegible] of the battle. [illegible] escape from serious injury [illegible] pole while endeavoring to [illegible] turn at the 20-mile mark [illegible] He was the only man who [illegible] the slightest degree.

There, of course, were many [illegible] to machines, and [illegible] out of commission [illegible] mechanics were usually [illegible] the later fun.

Great Progress by Americans.

The lesson of the [illegible] that the American [illegible] have during the past twelve [illegible] powerful progress in the construction of racing machines. The cars that [illegible] were racing machines in fact as well as in name, it being conceded that [illegible] the only racing car [illegible] in this country was the third [illegible] in the final of a year ago.

Today, however, several [illegible] were shown to be racing cars [illegible] the Locomobile, Thomas [illegible] Toledo. These three cars showed [illegible] of withstanding [illegible] of the foreigners in the [illegible] test. Their work was [illegible] George Heath and Albert Clement, two of the foreign entrants for the [illegible] by they inspected them during [illegible] the contest was taken as showing a strong respect for the same.

But twelve of the fifteen [illegible] entrants started, the three [illegible] the Apperson and Maxwell [illegible] with misfortune during practice [illegible] the B. L. and M., which up to date is a racing machine on paper all [illegible]

The Loco won. Thomas got one of his three big cars home a place winner. His team should have done much better. The machines are racing [illegible] ness. Had they been given intelligent treatment just before the start [illegible] two [illegible] would unquestionably have shown to better advantage.

As it was, Lebion was the only [illegible] to finish in good form, the others [illegible] by the wayside. Roberts was [illegible] of the going before he received the [illegible] to start. While Gal[illegible] hour making the first [illegible] when going along in [illegible] ing secured fifth place [illegible] the half way station he [illegible] side owing to [illegible]

Something Wrong at the Start.

There was something [illegible] start, or else the car driven by Roberts would never have broken the lift rods of two of her cylinders at the very start and be forced to get under way with but two cylinders working.

It seemed from the grand stand that after cranking the car [illegible] ting with a [illegible] to attend to her [illegible] rods like so much timber [illegible] crossing the line [illegible] pairing the damages [illegible]

Once under way [illegible] work and was running when the [illegible] being then on his fifth [illegible] None of the three Frayer-Millers came in for a place unless the commission [illegible] award [illegible] he fed pipe [illegible] work [illegible] not [illegible] a race standing.

Later a repair was [illegible] gave way and Lawwell [illegible] stopped the [illegible] and rode five [illegible] with which [illegible] porary repairs and kept [illegible] time of the race being [illegible] a Pope-Toledo, which [illegible] the team proved herself [illegible] first [illegible] machine turned [illegible] with her difficulties. [illegible]

Lytle's Driving Startling.

Lytle's driving was [illegible] in the ex[illegible] treme if not absolutely recklessly dangerous.

[illegible] with the Matheson proved that [illegible] He [illegible] start of the [illegible] only to [illegible] his first [illegible] miles.

[illegible] Haynes touring car [illegible] displayed [illegible] of [illegible] to travel fast and that she was [illegible] by a clever operator. [illegible] new to the [illegible] distance [illegible] clever [illegible] fellow [illegible] her steadily at work on a [illegible] and finished third without any [illegible] ties.

[illegible] work was a revelation. He [illegible] previous [illegible] and like Hardley sent his [illegible] to the [illegible] likewise [illegible] clutch [illegible] the cork [illegible] veteran [illegible] was only [illegible] under [illegible] condition.

Keeler Goes Out Eearly.

Keeler with his Oldsmobile was another one of the early eliminates, he going [illegible] almost at the [illegible] start owing to [illegible] It was [illegible] and [illegible] much had been expected [illegible] all [illegible] him [illegible] her [illegible] on the team.

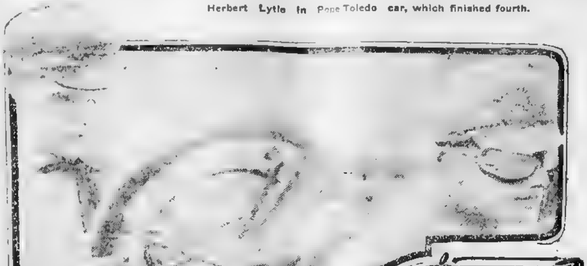
In summing up the results of the race it must honestly be admitted that the [illegible] faster [illegible] team for the [illegible] than [illegible] ever represented this country in an international.

It would not be at all surprising if we [illegible] get high [illegible] the [illegible] was fairly in keeping with those that have gone before. There seemed to be a lack of ea[illegible] on the part of so few of the men [illegible] in the case of [illegible] the [illegible] proved [illegible] The first [illegible] leading position [illegible] Christie [illegible] started [illegible] second place [illegible] fell to Lebion [illegible] he had [illegible] also [illegible] fourth [illegible] having [illegible] Lowell [illegible] eleventh [illegible] Roberts and [illegible] by the wayside.

Lebion Up to Second Place.

There [illegible] of position on the next [illegible] second position [illegible] In the third round Tracy showed a burst of speed, traveling at sixty miles an hour, driving determinedly and sitting [illegible] in his seat. He never moved a muscle but went right after Lebion, who had taken the lead and Lytle who had fallen to second position. [illegible] of the two was exercising every ounce of his skill except [illegible] and leg [illegible] to get the advantage. It was on this lap coming in sight of Lebion, Tracy determined to try his speed.

On the straightaway of Hempstead turnpike Tracy opened her up a little and gained greatly on the other two having to slow down for the bad turns and poor roads. And thus it went the whole race through. [illegible] fifth round it was a fine three cornered fight. Then it was that Lytle commenced to get his little troubles and ceased to be a factor for first or second place, [illegible] that proposition to be contested for between the Frenchman and his American friend Tracy.



Herbert Lytle in Pope-Toledo car, which finished fourth.

TIP TO MOTORISTS ON COUNTRY ROADS

The greatest care should be exercised in driving over country roads. In following closely behind another vehicle, whether it is motor driven or horse drawn, never turn out suddenly to shoot ahead out of the dust cloud until a clear view of the road ahead is obtained. Don't speed a car on a road with which you are unfamiliar unless it is in broad daylight and an unobstructed view of the road can be obtained. Two accidents were reported last Sunday, luckily neither of them serious, one in New Jersey and the other in New Hampshire. Both were avoidable if greater care had been exercised by the drivers, and while none of the parties were greatly injured, the cars were wrecked. In New Jersey one car was following behind a carriage in a cloud of dust, and the driver turned suddenly to the other side of the road to pass. Just then another car was seen directly ahead, coming at a fair rate of speed and a collision was unavoidable. If the driver had turned out just far enough to see ahead before passing the carriage it is doubtful if such [illegible]

SCHRECK VS. HART.

Mike Schreck and Marvin Hart will box fifteen rounds for a decision at 3 p. m. Saturday at Bellevue, Ky., under the auspices of the Bellevue Gymnasium Athletic Club. The club is building a new home with the profits. The bout will be part of an athletic programme to include foot racing, [illegible] ing, etc.

DELANEY DROPS KAUFMAN.

Billy Delaney is no longer the manager for Al Kaufman of San Francisco. Delaney dropped Kaufman because the latter would not return to Frisco and get in shape for a fight with Tommy Burns, after Delaney had matched him to meet the Western fighter before the Pacific A. C. of Los Angeles.

EVANSVILLE SIGNS KNOLL.

Evansville, Ind., Sept. 22.—Punch Knoll, outfielder, who played this season in the New Orleans team of the Southern League, was signed by the Evansville team of the Central League, and will play here the balance of the season. He will greatly strengthen the team.

Trainer Thomas Is in Trouble With Officials

There was a report that the National Trotting Association would likely reinstate Trainer Al Thomas, who was expelled at the recent Syracuse, N. Y., meeting for not starting Mainsheet after the judges had placed him last in the second heat through foul driving, at the annual meeting of the Board of Review in New York next December, letting him off with possibly a heavy fine.

Later developments, however, tend to show that it will take more than an ordinary pull for Thomas to secure pardon from the parent racing association.

It appears that Mainsheet was hitched to his sulky on the track for the third heat, but Thomas went into the judges' stand, and, after using strong language to the officials, ordered the stallion to the barn. Then when Starting Judge Newton announced the decision of the officials expelling Thomas, the latter again went into the stand and directed a most abusive attack to Judge George Hayt, in which he is said to have threatened Hayt bodily harm.

Thomas has attempted to run the judges' stand before, and in the case at Providence last season succeeded. A light shower came up in the middle of the afternoon, and while it left the course perfectly fit to [illegible] racing, yet Thomas declared to the judges that he would not start Nathan Straus in the free-for-all pace if it were raced that afternoon. The judges weakened and the event was postponed, much to the amazement of the drivers in the race and to the spectators.

Standing Start Is Favored in Harness Horse Races

"To my mind two things will have to be done soon to put the trotting business on a sounder basis," declared an old follower of harness horse racing to a coterie of horsemen the other morning. "First the sport must be rejuvenated so that the public will attend in larger numbers, and, secondly, an earning capacity must be created for the 2.15 horse.

"What are the main objections raised by the public to trotting racing? Prolonged scoring and long races. The latter has been overcome somewhat by the three-heat and the two-in-three systems. As to prolonged scoring, there is only one way to remedy that—the standing start. Horses can be trained to start that way, just as they are now trained to score.

"All horsemen will agree, I think, that it is getting to be a pretty hard game, especially on the Grand Circuit, when green pacers have to go in 2.08 and trotters in 2.08. If an earning capacity could be created for the 2.15 horse a great deal of good would result.

"This could be done by abolishing all early closing events, except the classics. Close entries to races on Saturday night previous to the meeting. [illegible] could not go much better than 2.15 would, before the middle of the [illegible] against horses that were [illegible] and would stand a chance [illegible] instead of having to try to save his entrance, with a 2.05 horse walking away with first.

"Under this system the 2.05 horse would be racing against 2.05 horses [illegible] doing [illegible] It would make [illegible] fields and better betting. [illegible] would be slow, but I, for one, would rather see a horse race in 2.15 than a procession in 2.05."

CARSEY DIDN'T QUIT.

Frank Carsey, the Chicago "feather," who was accused of quitting in his recent bout with Abe Attell at Davenport, denies that he quit owing to the punishment he was receiving. Carsey says that there was a job on foot to "do" him, and that he is ready to meet Attell at any time and place outside of Davenport. [illegible] says the conditions of the last match will suit him nicely.

Locomobile

Wins Elimination Race

Nearly one-half hour ahead of next car. The greatest trial of speed and endurance of American cars ever held. Only one Locomobile entered. Tracy in 90-H. P. Locomobile started 12th, finished first. 300 miles in 5 hours and 27 minutes. Best and most consistent performance. Car in perfect condition at finish. Fastest rounds in race made by Locomobile—over 60 miles an hour.

AEROCAR MODELS FOR HARD WORK

Models of the Aerocar for 1907 will be trimmed [illegible] to stand the hardest work and [illegible] wood as far as possible. Even the steering post, hinges, hood front and the lamp brackets will be enameled, and there will be hardly anything but the lamp and steering wheel to be polished. Moreover, the body and chassis will have a hard, dull finish which can be washed free from mud and dust and made to look like new by simply rubbing with an oily cloth. The result will be, states John Poole, that when these cars are on a tour where they cannot be carefully groomed, or after they have had a good deal of hard use, they will still look as new and attractive as if they had come fresh from the salesroom.

REO CAR'S BIG RECORDS.

Algonquin Hill is out with a challenge to the effect that the double climb which recently took place on Perry and Phillips Hills is the first of the kind ever held in this country, if not in the world. Disinterested eye witnesses of this great dual contest aver that it was a positive triumph for the American built car, for every starter performed more or less creditably on either of the rugged hills.

General good feeling seemed to prevail during the entire day, and the air was [illegible] filled with rejoicing on the part of [illegible] of high grade medium-priced light [illegible] cars. Of this type a testy little [illegible] horsepower $1,250 Reo, taken [illegible], made the sensational record of the day.

VIOLENT SPARK NEEDED.

It is a good thing to remember that the gap a spark will jump outside of the cylinder is by no means an indication of what it do inside the cylinder in the middle of a highly compressed charge. A plug that will spark vigorously and hotly when tested outside of the cylinder in the usual way may refuse to spark at all at the critical time, or may pass such a weak spark that it will not ignite the mixture. To be effective the spark must be violent.

HANLON-HYLAND TRAINING.

Eddie Hanlon and Fighting Dick Hyland who are to meet in 'Frisco on Friday are both training for the mill. Hanlon is working at San Rafael under the direction of Frank McDonald, who recently handled Joe Gans. Hyland is doing his work at Colma and has Hock Keyes, the Australian boxer, and Harry McCloud as his sparring partners. Keyes is a clever boxer, while McCloud has a style similar to that of Hanlon.

Julian Hawthorne Tells Why Harvard Crew Was Defeated on the Thames

heavier. So that if we were handicapped in some ways the Englishmen were quite as heavily handicapped in others.

A great deal was written, before the race, about the comparative merits of the English and the American "slide" and the shape of the respective oar-blades. Our contention was that our slide, being several inches the longer, gave greater length, and therefore more power, to our stroke, and at the same time relieved our men from the exhaustion consequent upon long body swing forward and back.

Our oar-blades [illegible] straight, [illegible] broader than the English, took [illegible] on the water, and therefore must drive our boat forward more swiftly. Advantage was claimed also for the American swivel rowlock: we [illegible] the [illegible] thole-pins awkward and antiquated. And yet, with their antiquated [illegible], their narrower oar-blades, and their shorter slide, these weaker [illegible]. How shall that be explained?

NEGLECTED REAL IMPORTANT THING.

Is not the inference just that we have trusted too much to ingenious mechanisms, and have too much neglected the real important thing in rowing, which is the proper training in the art and science of rowing of the oarsman? The short English slide unquestionably lessens the apparent length of the English stroke and increases the muscular strain on the abdominal and back muscles. But does not the English system make up that power [illegible] lost by substituting the [illegible] back comparatively straight, for the short slide, with the [illegible] forward of the body and long fall backward at the end? The [illegible] has been shown to increase the power of the stroke; but this gain is strictly limited; beyond a certain point, length of slide seems to be a disadvantage. [illegible] have suffered the consequences, the English have stopped short of excess in that direction, and they reap the advantage. If this be not the correct inference, it is up to us to prove the contrary.

Again, the success of the narrower oar-blades shows, apparently, that these afford [illegible] the expenditure of as much power as an oarsman, in a long race, is capable of putting into his stroke. If the width of the blade be [illegible] the oarsman is given a task beyond his strength, [illegible]. The narrower blade also moves with less resistance [illegible] opposing, is a [illegible] the Thames. The oar is more easily [illegible] and arm are relieved. As for [illegible] that it renders the oar too [illegible] and evenness of handling [illegible] advantages no doubt, but they are more than outweighed by the disadvantage. It is a clever invention, and does very well for sculling; but rowing with sweeps and with sculls are two very different things.

ENGLISH KNOW MORE ABOUT ROWING.

Leaving aside other differences in the rig and equipment of respective boats, let us now come down to the oarsmen themselves as the exponents of the art and science of rowing. And here I shall hazard the statement that the Englishmen beat us because they knew more about rowing than we did; and that we suffered defeat because we were inferior to them in watermanship, in the art and science of pulling an oar through the water and getting it back again.

It is a fact that the English varsity oarsman, when he gets into his boat to row his race, has often had as many years of practice as one of our varsity men has months. And that tells the story. Practice is everything, and [illegible] everything when [illegible] the applied experience of generations, when, as is always the case in England, the young [illegible] is taught to row by men who have rowed all their lives, and have themselves been taught rowing by their similarly [illegible] seniors. An English boy begins to row as soon as he is big enough to sit up in a boat. His [illegible] continued through his school [illegible], and when he gets to the university he already knows more about [illegible] most of our men do when [illegible] for the Englishman, the tests of the [illegible] college crews with their "bumping" races, year after [illegible] from the [illegible] crews, of the [illegible] picked [illegible] represent the [illegible].

A[illegible] two great eights, the winner of the great race has been [illegible] American [illegible] odds against the latter would [illegible] of it, we'll [illegible] that the wonder is not th[illegible] but that w[illegible] beaten by several hundred yards [illegible] hundred [illegible].

Th[illegible] watermanship are almost incalculable. The eight-oar becomes almost as manageable as a single scull. The eight men become almost as one. Each knows just what is needed at each juncture; they know each what the other is doing and how to co-operate with him. They can row with equal harmony at any rate of stroke; they are thoroughly at their ease under all circumstances, at every emergency. The men forward can, at need, relieve the men aft, one side of the boat can relieve or help the other.

And finally, the muscles needed in rowing, which are, after all, a peculiar set of muscles, not needed in the same degree and combination in any other athletic contest, are thoroughly developed; and no work in a gymnasium, or in a dummy boat, or on the water itself for a period of two or three or four years, can begin to create such a combination of muscles as Englishmen attain [illegible] and total strength.

AMERICANS ROWED SAME STROKE.

In the late race it was noticed that the Americans rowed the same stroke, at the same rate all through, as if they had been rowing alone. they let the Englishmen jump into the lead and seemed to think that by keeping steadily at it they could row them down, as they had rowed down Yale a few months before. They did not "spurt" till toward the end, when it was too late. But the race was lost the moment the Englishmen had the lead; for such a crew as the American, comparatively ignorant of watermanship, it was a hopeless task to attempt to row down a crew of expert watermen, who had them all the while under observation.

And why did not the Americans spurt? Simply because they feared lest a quicker stroke might throw them out of swing, they rowed in the way that their experience had taught them to be productive of the best results, which means that they were not thoroughly versed in the art and science of oarsmanship. The best results that they could obtain were not good enough to beat the Englishmen, and if they could not spurt without going to pieces, of course they were right not to spurt, and so to have lost the race by a larger margin than they did lose it.

Nevertheless, as we have seen, the result was very creditably close, and does not altogether shut out the hope that we may yet be able with some college crew of ours to defeat the winner of an Oxford-Cambridge race. It is possible, but we may admit that it is hardly probable, unless we can imitate the methods by which the English attain their proficiency, which would mean altering many of our fixed habits, and also obtaining a more suitable brand of climate. An Englishman can and he does row every day in the year; we are restricted to a short Summer season, and, at the best, to only four of those. It is a tough job that we have set ourselves, but with such magnificent material as we have got, and with courage so undaunted, we certainly deserve success, and with faith, which can move mountains, we ought really to win it some day. Meanwhile, honor to Harvard, and the splendid effort she has made.

WALTHAM HIGH BEATS MELROSE

Waltham, Sept. 22.—The Waltham High School team won its second victory of the season to-day by defeating the Melrose boys by the score of 16 to 0.

The visitors were heavier, but could not win over the quickness displayed by the local boys.

It was largely a kicking contest and Waltham had the better of the punting ones.

Captain Stankard played a grand game for the victors and was aided materially by Mosher and Fraim. Jones, Loveland and Stevens were in front for the best work for the Melrose team.

JIM GARDNER'S MATCH OFF.

Emil Thiery, manager of Jimmy Gardner, has called off the match for his man with Rube Smith at the Broadway Athletic Club of Denver. This fight was scheduled for Friday, but the club failed to send transportation on time as agreed and Gardner had too much at stake to take a chance by going to Denver only a few days before the contest.

RAIN STOPS RACES OF GRAND CIRCUIT AT COLUMBUS.

Columbus, O., Sept. 2[illegible] [illegible] spoiled what bid fair to be a splendid afternoon of racing in the Grand Circuit meet here to-day. Six heats had been raced when there came up a heavy shower, which put the track in such condition that the judges called the races off, deciding that Lady May had won the 2:08 pace, Allie Jay the 2:18 trot and Rudy Kip the 2:06 pace. As all the races were on the heat plan the money was divided as they finished the heats. The 2:05 trot, with five fast horses entered, was never reached at all.

In the unfinished race from Friday, W. J. Lewis won the third and final heat in 2:06¼. It was announced that the three heats won by him were the fastest three consecutive heats ever trotted by a gelding. The horses left to-night for Oakley.

Harvard Will Line Up for First Game on Saturday With Williams Eleven

Five days more of practice and the Harvard football warriors will enter the first clash on the schedule, as the Williams team comes down from the Berkshires, as is the yearly custom, to give the Crimson candidates their first real try out.

Next Saturday's game holds more than ordinary interest to the local football world from the fact that it will give the first opportunity to witness the remodelled game under the new rules, and also to size up the material which Coach Reid has to deal with in making a combination which will slay the Elis down at New Haven on November 24.

One Object: Beat Yale.

Of course, there will be a lot of trouble to be met over in the Stadium before the Yale bulldog is faced, as the Indians, Dartmouth and Brown promise to make it interesting. The absence of a game with Pennsylvania this year will make it possible for the coaches to concentrate all their endeavors on the Yale game, and Harvard's chances for a victory never looked better, considering a well-balanced schedule and with but one object in view, a triumph in New Haven as a windup of the season.

For three years the Yale team rolled Harvard's colors in the dust, yet the scores have been smaller on each occasion, and the 6 to 0 win registered a year ago is good evidence that Harvard is coming stronger, and this year the annual meeting should furnish the greatest conflict if Harvard continues consistent improvement.

Reid Pegging Away.

For ten dyas Coach Reid has been pegging away with the Harvard candidates, and notwithstanding the severe heated term has accomplished much in making every one of the two-score pigskin sleuths absorb the fact of the necessity of making it second nature to be part of the leather oval.

Every morning has been devoted to the simple detail work of getting acquainted with the perfect handling of the ball in passing it and clutching it on the ground and grabbing it on the fly. Reid has minutely and painstakingly personally instructed the proper methods of getting the ball under all conditions and avoid the fatal mishap of fumbling.

After such intense demonstration as Reid has exhibited his labors should bear fruit and fumbling be an inexcusable misdemeanor with his pupils when the games come on.

Reid realizes that the new features demand closer application to the simple rudiments and if form counts for anything in the future his hopes should be fulfilled.

Behind Closed Gates.

The second half of each day's work has been behind closed gates in the big amphitheatre, and the secretness of the proceeding naturally has aroused much curiosity and given rise to the rumor that some sensational football plays were being developed which would prove startling to the eyes of the public.

It is safe to predict that Reid is not unearthing any wrinkles of his inventive genius just yet at this early stage, but is devoting all his energies toward working out the new rules to the best advantage. That they allow of many devices for an enterprising coach to manoeuvre with is already conceded, and the one who brings out the most decisive tactics by their use will get considerable recognition from the football world.

Will Look After Line Work.

This week Coach Reid will give more attention to line work, as the short time before the first game calls for developing team play and a first team with proper substitutes must be picked several days before entering the contest. While no great stress will be placed on the way the team lines up against Williams, yet it will be a chance to get an idea on the general make-up of the eleven.

All the capable players will have an opportunity to be tested in the positions they are seeking.

The smallness of the coaching force up to date has been notable, but the size of the squad has not made it necessary for an urgent call in this direction. Reid's capability in all departments of the game has enabled him to get along well enough, but there is no question that with the right men on the field that the benefits derived would greatly aid Harvard.

A little taste of some of the old school of coaching would not be amiss, but this may be on hand at the proper time.

Some valuable additions will be made to the team this week when Parker, the last year's centre, and Burr, the All-American tackle, get into their togs. Kersburg, the intercollegiate hammer champion, is likely to hold on to his place at right guard. Barney, Hoar, Gilmore and Nurse are making a hustle for one guard position.

Kennard Making a Record.

Sibley and Osborne with Jenkins and Somes are in front just now for one of the tackles, and Burr is slated for the other. At end Vic Kennard is making a record, and should develop into one of the finest varsity ends ever produced. Blair and McDonald, with varsity experience, are holding their own in the field at the end spots. With Starr back at quarter, that place will be satisfactorily filled. Kerans and Taylor are working daily at passing the ball, and are sure to press the Groton boy.

The backfield which starts against Williams will probably be composed of Captain Foster, Wendell and Lockwood, a trio which any college would like to own. Carr's position at fullback is a difficult thing to fill, and may mean the switching of one of the halves. Carl Lincoln, Appolino and Gray are the best in sight of the rushing material.

Secret practice will be resumed this week with a vengeance, and as most of the student boys return there is a possibility that Coach Reid will allow a peak at the players in the big Stadium.

General Chisholm bought Allie Jay several years ago, and Kenney has kept training her every season, knowing that if she could be kept just right he had a good trotter.

However, she has always hit her knees, and that and other misfortunes have befallen her and prevented her from making good. But patience finally had its reward when the mare was returned the victor of the rich $10,000 prize.

"LEFTY" DAVIS WILL PLAY WITH REDS

Cincinnati, Sept. 22.—"Lefty" Davis, the star outfielder of the Minneapolis Club of the American Association, has been drafted by the Reds.

Davis is considered one of the best outfielders in the Association ranks. He is by no means a youngster, and his playing during the last year indicates that he is experiencing the playing of his best baseball just at present.

6TH INFANTRY WINS TRICOLOR MATCH AT WAKEFIELD.

Wakefield, Sept. 22.—The shoot-off of the postponed tri-color match, which was held over from last night on account of darkness, was finished up to-day and resulted in a victory for the Sixth Infantry. A WORD ABOUT "OLD 56"

We are distillery contractors. "Old 56" is distilled for us under special contract by one of the oldest and best known distilleries in Kentucky. After being properly blended, and aged in old sherry wine casks, it is bottled by us and sold under our own brand, "Old 56." It is a straight, honest whiskey, well matured and of fine flavor. By cutting out middlemen's profits we are enabled to sell "Old 56" at prices which we pledge you our word are lower than those of all other dealers for whiskey of like quality. Send us a trial order this week.

12,000 CHEER HEARST'S RINGING PERIODS AGAINST RULE BY THE GRAFTERS

Independence League Candidate for Governor of New York Opens Campaign at Albion.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Knowlesville, N. Y., Sept. 22.—Fully 12,000 people welcomed William Randolph Hearst and his party at the Orleans County Fair grounds at Albion, to-day. It was the largest crowd ever gathered in this locality, completely eclipsing that which greeted David B. Hill when he addressed a meeting at the same place during his term as Governor.

Mr. Hearst spoke for about half an hour and was repeatedly cheered by his audience, which jammed both grand stands and spread over the race track in a compact mass. Brief addresses were also delivered by Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler, candidate for lieutenant-governor on the Independence League ticket, and by John Ford, the League's candidate for attorney-general, who is a former resident of Orleans County, and was tendered a warm greeting by his former associates.

Mr. Hearst's address was a forceful reply on the advice recently given by Secretary of the Treasury Shaw in a public speech, that citizens should never vote for men, but always for party. It was a strong appeal for intelligent independent voting and was interrupted by repeated cheering.

Following the delivery of his speech, Mr. Hearst, accompanied by Mr. Chanler and Mr. Ford, strolled about the fair grounds. A big crowd followed them and they were constantly halted by enthusiastic friends wanting to shake their hands. Mr. Hearst's appearance on the grand stand, where he watched the races for a short time, was the signal for renewed cheering and hand clapping, and there was another burst of applause when the party finally left the grounds in automobiles for Knowlesville, where they were entertained at dinner by D. Barry Murphy, the Democratic leader of Orleans county.

URGES VOTERS TO FOLLOW PATRIOTS—NOT THE BOSSES

Following is Mr. Hearst's speech:

My Friends: A prominent politician advise citizens not to vote for men, but always to vote for parties.

Such advice is practically an invitation to American citizens to sacrifice their independence of thought and action and to surrender their political proxies to party machines.

Such a device practically implies that citizens should not form their own opinions on vital issues of the day, but should receive their opinions machine made; that they should not support the men best fitted to represent their opinions, but should vote blindly for a party name.

Such advice in the last analysis merely means that no matter who controls a party, no matter who is nominated by a party, no matter what the party has done to deserve distrust or defeat, a citizen should vote for that party regardless of consequences.

I do not think that party machines have shown such consideration for the public welfare as to warrant such confidence from the people, and I have ventured therefore to offer different advice to citizens. I have suggested that citizens should remember that parties are managed by machines, that machines are manipulated by bosses, and that bosses are bought and privileges purchased by corrupt corporations and that the traffic is in the people's properties and the people's liberties.

I have said that a man can no longer take credit to himself for supporting a yellow dog that happens to have been nominated by his party. The breed of yellow dogs has become too poor and the marks of the corporation collars are too plainly visible round their mongrel necks.

PARTY SPIRIT IS NOW AN EVIL INFLUENCE

We have only to review our recent political experiences and to remember the teachings of our greatest statesmen to realize that party spirit is an evil influence and that American rights and liberties can best be preserved by intelligent and independent voting.

In New York city a party machine at the last election deliberately defeated the will of the people. This party machine, with criminal intent, imported floaters from all surrounding States and cities, paid repeaters to vote on the names of honest citizens, hired thugs to beat down the watchers at the polls and to throw their senseless bodies into the streets, and employed rascals to corrupt the count and falsify the returns.

Should citizens follow Secretary Shaw's advice and endorse such an outrage by a vote of confidence?

After this election fraud had been consummated the Legislature, of another party, refused to allow the votes to be honestly counted, the Governor, of the other party, refused to receive a delegation of 500 citizens, including eminent business men and distinguished clergymen, who came to protest against such scandals; the attorney general, of the other party, first advised that quo warranto proceedings be taken to expose these frauds and then denied to the petitioners the right to take their case before the courts. Should we follow Secretary Shaw's advice and by a party vote endorse such crime and such collusion at the polls?

PUT NATION'S WELFARE AHEAD OF ALL PARTIES

I venture to offer advice directly contrary to the advice of Secretary Shaw. I urge every independent American citizen to consider the welfare of his country first and of his party afterward.

This is a time of serious importance to the nation. Great questions press upon us for solution. Serious dangers threaten our American form of government. Under such government party name is of the least importance, party platforms are of next importance, but most important of all are candidates who in themselves represent the issues and whose character and record are such that they can be absolutely depended upon to carry out the will of the people and resist the influences of powerful interests.

If a man presented to a bank a promissory not for a certain amount, the first thing the bank would desire would be to know who had signed the note and who had endorsed the note. The value of the note would depend upon the credit and upon the reputation of the signer and endorser.

Such a note is a promise to pay. A party platform is a promise to perform, and its value depends not only upon the record of the party that frames it, but upon the character of the individuals who indorsed it. I strongly advise the citizens of New York at this critical time in the history of the State and of the nation not to accept any bad political notes with worthless signatures attached to them.

VOTE FOR A PARTY NAME IS ONLY A VOTE WASTED

Do not be deceived by indefinite promises. Demand that definite pledges shall be made and that men shall be named whose word is as good as their bond; whose record is a guarantee of their fidelity.

The fate of the republic to-day is in the hands of the careful and conscientious American citizen who appreciates the seriousness of the situation and who will cast his vote impartially and intelligently.

The man who casts his vote blindly for a party name wastes a vote at a time when every honest vote is needed to save the nation from the spoilers.

A politician advises you to vote for a party under any circumstances, but patriots and statesmen have taught you differently. Washington said:

"Beware of the baneful effects of party spirit and of the ruin to which its extremes must lead."

Jefferson wrote:

"In every section party and party feeling should be avoided."

Lincoln said:

"The party lash will overawe Justice and Liberty."

Our Independence League has been formed to preserve the justice and liberty which Lincoln predicted the party lash would destroy; to prevent the baneful effects and the ruin to which Washington declared the extremes of party spirit must lead.

WORK TO MAKE HUGE SUCCESS OF FOOD FAIR.

Wealth of Decorations, Famous Marine Band and Notable Features in Exhibition.

PLAN TO ECLIPSE ALL FORMER EXPOSITIONS

The 1906 Boston Food Fair, which opens at Mechanics' Building, Monday, Oct. 1, promises to be the most beautiful exposition New England has ever witnessed.

This will be the sixth food fair conducted by the Boston Retail Grocers' Association, and is the first food fair held in Boston in five years. All the decorations, from floor to ceiling, are part of one general color scheme, each booth being in complete harmony with every other booth. One of the great main halls of Mechanics' Building is to be decorated with soft tints of blue and with white and gold, while the other main hall is to be green and red and white and gold. The decorations are to be combined with an electrical display.

Marine Band to Play.

The attractions will be far better than at any previous food fair. Beginning with the opening day there will be band concerts afternoon and evening, given by the United States Marine Band of Washington, the band which plays at the White House and is also sometimes called "the President's own," and one of the most celebrated military bands in the world. Francis Scala, Henry Fries, Louis Schneider and John Philip Sousa have been its leaders and William H. Santelmann is the present director. This will be the first time in fifteen years that the band has played in New England.

There are to be many other features of the fair, including beautiful views and scenes in colors from the celebrated work "Ben Hur." William H. Joslyn will explain the book as 125 views in colors are thrown upon a great screen. A moving picture entertainment with an entirely new program will be given every day. Another feature will be moving photographic scenes in colors by an eye witness and participant in the great San Francisco disaster. The seats to this entertainment, as with the others, are free. George Whitaker, the boy tenor, will sing.

North Carolina to Contribute.

The State of North Carolina is to make a beautiful exhibit of the wonderful fruits and many other products of that enterprising State.

The exhibits of new foods and delicacies are much more extensive than heretofore, and many thousand souvenirs and samples are to be given away daily.

There are to be excursions to the Boston Food Fair from all sections of New England.

EAST INDIANS FAIL IN HARVARD EXAMS

Amar and Gopal Singh, the East Indian young men who came here to enter Harvard University, have been denied admission by the faculty because they failed to pass the rigid entrance examinations.

The young men, though without resources and exiles in a foreign land, are determined to continue their struggle for an advanced education and a livelihood.

They come from the famous Punjaub district in India. Both attended the Punjaub University, but were compelled to leave the country on account of difficulty with the English Government through their championing the Boers in the Boer war. They came to Seattle, then to Minneapolis and finally landed in Cambridge, hoping to enter Harvard.

Having failed there, they have gone to New York city to try to enter Columbia.

HENRY RENOMINATED.

HOLYOKE YOUNG WOMAN WHO HAS BEEN ADMITTED TO MASSACHUSETTS BAR

MISS KATHERINE A BOWLER

WOMAN LAWYER TO PLEAD BEFORE STERN COURT.

Fair Holyoke Stenographer, Puzzled by Strange Legal Terms, Plunges Into Study and Wins Her Way to the Bar

Holyoke, Sept. 22.—Miss Katherine A. Bowler, who has just been admitted to the Hampden County bar, will practice in the office of C. T. Callahan, one of the most prominent lawyers of Holyoke. There is only one other woman practicing law in the western part of the State. Mrs. Harry R. Putnam of Westfield, who was admitted to the bar less than a year ago, is now practicing law with her husband.

To a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter Miss Bowler told how she came to be a full-fledged lawyer:

"About four years ago I went into Mr. Callahan's office as stenographer. In doing his work I naturally met with many terms which were strange and often puzzled me. To familiarize myself with these I started in to read law. Soon I became so interested in it that I began studying in earnest. I would read law in the office during my spare moments and study at home evenings. Yes, I found a great deal of it dry reading, but I was really interested and so persevered.

"I am sure many women are better fitted to be lawyers than some men just out of college who take absolutely no interest in the work. No, I would not be afraid to plead a case in court, for I have been there so many times to take stenographic notes that the court proceedings are familiar to me."

LOGAN AND O'CONNELL EACH EXPECT VICTORY

Rivals in Tenth Congressional District Both Issue Statements Claiming Majority of Votes.

Although both of the Democratic aspirants for the nomination for Congress in the Tenth Congressional District will hold rally meetings today and to-morrow, their campaigns practically closed last night. Senator Edward L. Logan expreses the greatest confidence in his ability to win a majority vote in the caucus, and his opponent, Joseph O'Connell is equally confident of his ability to win out.

The contest between these candidates has been a bitter one and far-reaching in its effect. The campaign issues became personal issues and the lieutenants of both Logan and O'Connell have exerted their greatest efforts to gain points for their candidates.

Statements predicting victory were issued last night from both the Logan and O'Connell headquarters.

O'CONNELL TO CARRY DISTRICT BY AT LEAST 2,000, SAY SUPPORTERS

This is the statement from the O'Connell headquarters:

"Indications in the Tenth district point to the nomination of Mr. O'Connell by a majority of at least 2,000 votes. The three Dorchester wards, the city of Quincy and the town of Milton are conceded to Mr. O'Connell.

"Ward 17 will be carried by Mr. O'Connell, and he will also obtain a majority of the votes cast in the South Boston district. The members of the Young Men's Democratic Club have canvassed Ward 20, and the house to house canvass shows that Mr. O'Connell will receive a plurality of more than 6,000 votes in his home ward.

"The 'Fitzgerald Committee' has completed a canvass of Ward 24 and reports that Mr. O'Connell will be given a plurality of from 500 to 1,000 votes in the home ward of Mr. Fitzgerald. Mr. O'Connell has the unanimous support of the men who represent the Mayor and will carry every precinct.

"Ward 16, under the leadership of Dr. Daniel S. Harkins, chairman of the ward committee, is pledged to give O'Connell a plurality of more than 500 votes.

LOGAN SURE HE WILL CARRY EVERY WARD IN BOSTON, HE DECLARES

Senator Edward L. Logan says:

"The campaign is now practically finished and we have made a very careful canvass of the district. The situation in South Boston was never more satisfactory and no leader of any prominence can be found who is working for Mr. O'Connell.

"In Ward 17 my friends are confident of carrying the ward overwhelmingly, while in Dorchester the canvass made by the regular organizations shows that it is an absolute impossibility for Mr. O'Connell to carry his own district. I shall defeat him substantially in his home ward.

"In Quincy and Milton I am very well pleased with the situation. As to the ultimate result of the campaign, I can only repeat that I shall carry every ward in the Boston district, and that in Quincy and Milton I shall receive substantial majorities. I have always believed that the people of this Tenth Congressional District, who have always been represented in Congress by men of legislative experience, would never elect to that high honor a man like Mr. O'Connell, who is not even a novice in the ways of legislation."

POLITICAL ADVEPTISEMENT POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENTS.

O'CONNELL TO LOGAN

Senator Logan Has Charged Mr. O'Connell With Being a Traitor to the Democratic Party in the Following Specific Manner:

1897—Joseph F. O'Connell opposed and voted against the regular Democratic candidate for Mayor, Josiah Quincy. Some of his speeches against Mr. Quincy are reported in the Boston Herald on Dec. 10, 12, 16, 17 and 19, 1897.

1901—Joseph F. O'Connell opposed and voted against the regular candidate for Mayor, Patrick A. Collins, and was connected with the movement to elect Thomas N. Hart Mayor against Patrick A. Collins. Evidence of his connection with this movement is reported in the Boston Journal, Nov. 2 and 3, 1901, and the Boston Herald, Nov. 4, 1901.

"I did not vote for President McKinley."
"I did not vote for Mayor Curtis."
"I did not vote for Mayor Hart."

Now, Mr. O'Connell, I ask you in all fairness, do you think you can continue to insult the intelligence of the Democratic voters of the 10th district?

I specifically said you opposed and voted against William Jennings Bryan, Democratic candidate for President; Josiah Quincy, Democratic candidate for Mayor, and Patrick A. Collins, Democratic candidate for Mayor.

I said nothing about McKINLEY, CURTIS OR HART—they belong to a different political party than mine. I charge again that you opposed Bryan, Quincy and Collins. Answer those charges, if you dare. DON'T DODGE!

Now that the campaign is closing and you have had a full opportunity of answering the charges I have publicly made against you during the past three weeks—and you have deliberately dodged—I leave it to the fair-minded Democrats of the 10th district to judge of your evasion on these and all other charges I have made against you during this campaign.
